FRAGMENTS.

HIGH COUNCIL meets tonight at 7:30 o'clock.

DR. PARE lectures in the M. E. Church tomorrow night on the "Mormon Abominations," commencing at 7 o'clock.

THE dental office of Chapman & Tripp was burglarized on Monday night. About $10 worth of "gold filling" was stolen. No clues.

AS announced in another column, prominent members of the A. O. U. W. will visit and address the local lodge tomorrow.

THE Youth Quorum of Seventies will hold their regular monthly meeting in the North Ward meeting house tomorrow night at 7:30 o'clock.

PARIS & Co., photographers, have a variety of unusual photographic views of the Temple and surroundings, taken on the occasion of the cap-stone services.

THE funeral of Elder Julius Moses, whose death was announced yesterday, will take place tomorrow at 10 a. m. in the Salt Hill Creek Ward meeting house. Friends of the family are invited to attend.

THE weather-beating on the north tower of the Temple, which surrounded the statue of the Angel Moroni, was torn down in the gale giving vent to much profanity from the foul mouth of the figure. It stands up stoutly and resentfully.

YESTERDAY afternoon a meeting of the stockholders of the West Side mending company was held. The committee appointed to visit the sister Elias Morris, Jane Heneflake, O. H. Harris and Sister W. Fox, jr., submitted their report, which was unanimously adopted. The erection of a mill was declared for the present.

A MACHINERY BOARD TRAVELER Harrison Wright from the West Side mining company was held. The committee appointed to visit the sister Elias Morris, Jane Heneflake, O. H. Harris and Sister W. Fox, jr., submitted their report, which was unanimously adopted. The erection of a mill was declared for the present.

CHARLES MULLAN, of the Eleventh Ward—property man for the Theatre, is the good old stock company's chief in search of a subject, whom patronage is the cause as his own and was used it in the Police court on Monday and in severe language to a tipple-soaked of drunkenness, disturbing the peace and using obscene language. Of course, the "boys" may have given his time cause, but this kind of personating will scarcely allure on to Mullan's good graces, if he thinks he is becoming monumental. It looks like "our Charlie" has got a "Jonbie."

A Delicate Operation.

Drs. Anderson, Benedict, Young and Wright performed a delicate and successful operation on young Townsend Morton at his parents' residence in Farmer's ward today, taking out some of the bone and clots of blood that were pressing on the brain, from the effects of his being accidentally shot on Saturday evening last, as chronicled in this paper. The patient is weak, but hopes are entertained for his recovery, though there is still some of the lead in his head.

Nothing Known of Him.

George A. Carter, who lost for the fact that he shipped out of the city on Monday night would now have been working out his contract within the penitentiary walls, has not yet been heard of, and the chances are that he will not re-enter the Territory, at any rate for a long time to come. Carter, it will be remembered, is the young young ex-station agent at Brigham Junction who miscondueted himself with a woman of loose character known as "India Allen," and which resulted in his conviction in the Third District Court last week on a charge of adultery. The cash bond of $500, which the defendant's father put down to secure the son's freedom between the period of conviction and the day set for sentence has been defaulted thereby. It is believed that by this time young Carter is somewhere in the East.

Amusement Notes.

"Paul Jones" was given last night at the Theatre to a somewhat smaller audience than on Monday evening, but the performance was altogether more satisfactory. The opera will be repeated tonight, and tomorrow night "Captain Thomas," Planquette's new opera, will conclude the engagement. In this opera the talent of actress Blanche Huntington will have an opportunity of seeing her in a dual character—that of the daughter of a French marquis and as a smoking captain of French artillery. The music is light, pretty and graceful. The first act contains a bright martial air, "A Soldier's Life" "The Pensionaire's Sings" for Theresa; an effective song for "Phil p," a quiet duet for the latter and Theresa, two bright duetts, "You Captain Sir, I Regrettam" and "The Morning Gallop," both sung by Theresa, and a Spanish finale based upon a catchy air, in which the Theresa finally describes the different officers of the regiment. In the second act are the "Song of the Butterfly" and "What a Terrible Day," another duet for the lovers, "Only Thee," and a long finale containing some telling passages and a telling ensemble. In the last act are, "His Only Love," a concerted piece in the Sullivan style, for the five principal personages, and a funeral song, "Tomorrow."

WONDERLAND.

It is ladies' day at Wonderland today and also the last appearance of Mrs. Mollie Pitts-Diehl. A new programme is arranged for the week commencing tomorrow.

EMERSON'S RECITAL.

Mrs. Crawford's Beethoven recital last night at the Metropolitan parlors was listened to by an interested audience.

A BOLD BURGLARY.

The House of Mr. E. M. Weller is Entered by a Trespasser, who Escapes through a Window.

About 2:30 this morning Mrs. E. M. Weller was awakened by a slight noise in her bedroom, and on looking her eyes on discovered, by the light of the moon shining in through the window, the outlines of a man's form standing near the bed. Supposing it was one of her sons, she called him by name, but instead of answering, the intruder walked out of the room into the hall. Mrs. Weller immediately informed her husband—who had been partially awakened by hearing his son's name called—that there must be a burglar in the house. He arose and hastily dressed, but without believing for a moment that his wife's suspicions were correct. Hearing a slight noise upstairs where the boys slept, he was confirmed in his belief that it was one of his sons he had seen and that he had been jilting Mrs. Weller. He accordingly tried to quiet his wife's fears and laid down again with perfect equanimity. About an hour afterwards, while he was still awake, Brother Weller heard a slight creaking noise, but paid little attention to it, and not until feeling it again was he aroused to look for the cause of it, which he did by taking a survey of the room as he lay on his back, but without discovering anything wrong. He even saw no sign of a cat coming in to the apartment. A few moments elapsed and then the creaking sound was heard beside his bed, and raising himself on his elbow and looking downwards he met the gaze of a man whose face was within a few inches of his own. With an exclamation of surprise and anxiety to get at the intruder, Brother Weller threw back the bed clothes and sprang for him, but his feet being somewhat entangled in the bedding, the movements were retarded sufficiently to enable the burglar to get the start of him. Dashing to an open window at which he had evidently entered, and for want of time to go to the door, which he had unlocked from the inside with a view to making his exit by that means, he sprang to the ground, a distance of about seven feet and escaped. The only articles missed are a pair of cuff buttons taken from Brother Weller's shirt, and a silver watch from his son's vest pocket, the latter being in the adjoining hall. From the tracks visible this morning it is evident that the burglar had smooth-soled shoes.

A SLENDER DAY.

Short Sittings of the Third District Court Judges this Morning.

The business in Judge Zane's sanctum this morning did not occupy more than half an hour, and in Judge Anderson's court all that could be done was wiped off the slate by 11:30. Both courts then adjourned until 2 o'clock.

BEFORE JUDGE ZANE.

Elias Malins vs. James Doyle. This case was called for according to the regular setting, but there being no appearance on the part of the defendant, the appeal was dismissed.

E. C. Griffin et al. vs. George W. Foreman et al. On motion of Stephens and Schwartz, attorneys for the plaintiff, this suit was dismissed without prejudice.

On motion of Attorney S. H. Lewis, for the plaintiff, the report of the referee in the case of Arthur Sears vs. James Thompson et al. was confirmed and judgment ordered for plaintiff for $427.14.

The case of H. N. Ablett vs. W. H. Andrews, a horse transaction, opened yesterday afternoon, was then submitted, the only matter set down for trial today; but inasmuch as the parties were not ready to proceed, the Court adjourned till 2 p.m., when the case was to be taken up.

BEFORE JUDGE ANDERSON.

In the case of Sarah Sloan vs. Marcus Neff et al., tried yesterday, the only bonds filed were those of those sued by the plaintiff Sloan. A stay of twenty days was granted to prepare and file motion for a new trial.

The People vs. Ah Ki, a rape trial, under indictment for robbery. On motion of Assistant District Attorney Stephens, the defendant was released on his own recognizance.

In the case of the State Bank of Utah vs. W. H. Smithwell et al., Powers and Hiles filed affidavit for a continuance.

The case of the Atchison National Bank vs. George W. Stanahan' et al., was called, but the defendant was not present, nor was he represented. Judgment was given for the amount claimed, and costs.

MISCELLANEOUS.

There is nothing of importance stirring in the United States Commissioners' courts today.

The grand jury have been in session today. Their labors will be brought to an end to a shorter time than those of the grand jurors of the former term. They started in this morning with a criminal assault case from Bingham, the alleged victim being a girl of tender years.

An Ogden Burglary.

C. B. Pash woke up yesterday morning a somewhat poorer and sadder man. Monday night he retired to rest and pleasant dreams as lawyers generally have, the thought that he would before daybreak be robbed of his day's earnings and valuable timekeeper, being farthest from the head he laid on the pillow, when he retired to such nature's valiant restorer. Imagine his surprise, then, and it is, on a festive burglar found his way into Mr. Pash's house through the kitchen window and finding the slumbering wearer's pants in a chair, went through them finding between $17 and $18 in change in the pockets. A gold watch and coats on which was an English sovereign, were also appropriated by the thief. Mr. Pash thinks that the robber was kept from attempting to take a diamond ring from his (Pash's) finger only because of his resting long of not wearing such a costly jewel.

The constantly stellar either before or after visiting Squire Pash's place of work, made a call at Joe Barton's, on 25 door north, but as the kitchen door was locked and thus the balance of the house cut off from outside to give he left the Barton house unmolested.

Mr. Pash says he has a clue to the thief, but he would feel much happier if he had his watch and money. He resides at 2202 Madison—Standard.
