SAVE YOUR HAIR! TO LEARN HOW TO DO IT READ AND HEED WHAT FOLLOWS.

SAVE YOUR HAIR.—The laws of Health and Longevity demand it, the customs of social life require it. The matter is of great importance in every way.

BEAUTIFY YOUR HAIR.—It is the surpassing crown of glory, and for the loss of it there is no compensation.

CULTIVATE YOUR HAIR.—For by no other means can it be saved and beautified.

LYON'S

KATHAIRON,

Discovered thirty-five years ago by Prof. Lyon, of Yale, is the most perfect preparation in the world for preserving and beautifying the hair.

Besides being the best hair dressing ever produced, Lyon's Kathairon will positively prevent grayness, and will restore new hair to bald heads, if the roots and follicles are not destroyed.

It actually performs these seeming miracles, of which the following is

A FAIR SPECIMEN

I had been entirely bald for several years, constitutional, I suppose. I used a few bottles of Kathairon, and, to my great surprise, I have a thick growth of young hair.

COL. JOHN L. DORRANCE, U. S. A.

In every important respect the Kathairon is absolutely incomparable. It is unequaled.

1. To Cure Baldness.
2. To Restore Gray Hair.
3. To Remove Dandruff.
4. To Dress and Beautify the Hair.

BEAR IN MIND.—The Kathairon is no sticky paste of sulphur and sugar-of-lead, to paint and daub the hair and paralyze the brain. It is a pure and limpid vegetable lotion, intended to restore the hair by natural growth and reinvigoration. It is splendidly perfumed, and the most delightful toilet dressing known. No lady's or gentleman's toilet outfit is complete without Lyon's Kathairon.

FORTY - SIXTH CONGRESS.

EXTRA SESSION.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, 5.—Pendleton, from the committee on foreign affairs, reported back to the House a joint resolution appropriating money to enable the United States government to participate in the international exhibition, to be held at Sidney and Melbourne, in 1879 '80, which was adopted.

On motion of Kernan the bill for the delivery to Samuel Lord, Jr., receiver of certain bonds now in the hands of the United States Treasury, was taken up. It appeared from letters submitted by Kernan, that the bonds referred to, came into the possession of the government during the war, nominally as captured property. Their ownership was afterwards discovered.

Hampton, in speaking upon the general political issues, said it was true the southern members formed a majority in Congress, and were responsible for what they approved and supported, as well as for what they suggested. Hampton could not claim to speak as a leader of his party, but speaking for himself he would never try to shield himself from the consequences of his action behind any man or party. Continuing, Hampton said: "By no vote of mine will the appropriations necessary for the efficient maintenance of the army be refused. It is competent for Congress to declare under what limitations and upon what conditions those appropriations shall be made. The form in which this is done, I regard as immaterial, and in my judgment it would have been best to adhere to the general form, but as it has been deemed advisable to make the necessary appropriations in another manner, I shall, in order to secure unanimity, acquiesce in the decision of the majority. But in no event can I consent to aid in disbanding the army or impairing its efficiency. It is the army of the South as well as of the North. It is the army of the whole country. In its history, from the days of the Revolution, through its achievements of 1812, and the glories of the Mexican war, I have some reason by right of my birth and blood to be proud. In the late civil contest, on many a bloody field I tested its valor and no word or act of mine shall depreciate its value or lessen its usefulness, because I so regard it that no act of mine shall tend to degrade it from its high rank. I will not so legislate, that against its own honorable instincts and traditions, it shall be an instrument of tyranny in the hands of any factious party or any Executive, who may be so unscrupulous as to desire to use it. Nor shall I assent because of any difference of opinion between the minority and the majority, to close the courts of justice or embarrass the necessary and orderly life of the government. The Constitution has provided a means by which an appeal to the country can be determined, and it is for the people to decide whether the presidential veto has been wisely used to defeat the will of Congress, which represents a majority of the people."

Hampton proceeded to say that he had no intention to embarrass the Administration while he himself considered the provisions of the bill as just. He recognized the difficult position in which the Executive found himself.

Hampton's people remembered that in a critical period of their history, when any injudicious action would have been fatal, the President, by a conscientious construction of his duty, removed the United States troops from Louisiana and South Carolina, thus enabling the people to restore their local governments to those who represented the popular will, as well as the character, intelligence and property of the two States. For this wise and patriotic action he was grateful, and while in the necessary party differences, which must arise in a free country, it would be his duty to oppose the policy of which the President was the representative.

Hampton said his party was now denounced for wishing to restrict a Federal use of the troops, though men high in the republican party, whose words he quoted, had also pointed out and denounced the abuses and danger in their use.

Continuing, he said there was a wide-spread doctrine that the result of the war had been to increase the strength and functions of the General Government, and that as a natural consequence, it could rightly use the machinery of the Government, including the army, to confirm such added power.

Hampton thought the war had not changed in any way the relative powers of the States and the Union. One of the principal factors of our success and growth, has been the play of the local government influences. It was not the immediate action of the army that he feared, but that the ultimate effect of its misuse would be centralization and despotism, and he would oppose any legislation to give the general government power to interfere in any way with the elections. It was better to have turbulence in one or two great cities than to have a military despotism in the whole country. It had been complained that Confederate officers were sent here as legislators. Nearly every man in the South bore arms, and she could hardly be blamed for trusting her interests in peace, to those who risked their lives and fortunes for her in war. He thought if the North had honored in a like manner those who fought her battles, the legislation of the country would not be embittered by revivals of sectional strife. When the North invited the Southern States to return to the Union was she sincere, or did she only wish them back to govern them as rotten boroughs? If sincere, she should be glad that they sent their best and most honored men to represent them. The south could not, in the nature of things, be long subordinated to a mass of ignorance and inexperience, forced upon them by the hasty action of the republican party. The South had no apology to make for the past. In the heat of the conflict hard blows were struck and hard words spoken, but not in the interest of that harmony for which the whole country longs. The South asks to have stricken from the statute books laws which are as productive of distrust as much as were armies and navies. If you ask us to come back as States, treat us as States. Join hands with us to establish national liberty as understood by our fathers.

Hampton's address aroused frequent applause in the galleries.

Bayard supported the bill and quoted from Hamilton's writings to show that the theory of the veto power was to confer on the President power to protect himself and to prevent the passage of bad laws, either through haste, inadvertence or design. The bills recently vetoed were not so passed. They represent the sober second thought of the American people, in whose deliberate judgment the reforms contained in them should be made, and the people would judge the President and his party.

HOUSE.

WASHINGTON, 5.—The President's message transmitting the record in the Fitz-John Porter case was received and referred to the committee on military affairs.

The legislative appropriation bill was again reported, and on motion of Atkins, recommitted.

Atkins inquired how Hawley had obtained the floor.

The Speaker replied that as Mr. Atkins had not demanded the previous question, he had recognized the gentleman from Connecticut (Hawley).

Atkins inquired if he could withdraw the bill.

The Speaker replied he could, and the House resumed the consideration of business of the morning hour, being a bill relating to the removal of causes from State to Federal courts.

The demand for the previous question being withdrawn, White proceeded to argue in opposition to the bill.

Thomas argued in favor of the amendment offered by the minority of the committee. He believed that there ought to be some modification of the existing law, but to attempt to sweep it entirely from the statute books was entirely unjustifiable. The United States was a nation, with a great big "N," and every foot of territory in it was part and parcel of the nation, every citizen had a right to go to the "foot of the throne" and demand protection, particularly when he had been acting by the authority of the United States and had come in conflict with some law of an inferior municipality. (Applause.)

The morning hour having expired, the Speaker laid before the House the message of the President, transmitting the proceedings and report of the board of officers in the case of General Fitz-John Porter.

Referred to the commission on military affairs, and ordered printed with all the documents.

Atkins reported the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill, and moved it to be printed and recommitted, and demanded the previous question.

There was laughter on the republican side at the rapidity with which the previous question was moved, and a number suggested, in an undertone to Hawley, to make some movement, but he declined doing so, remarking in the same tone that he did not want to aggravate Atkins.

Garfield remarked that he had been told by some members, who had seen the bill, that it was in the main unobjectionable, but he suggested to Mr. Atkins whether it would not be best to have the bill stop, substantially, and exactly what appropriations it made.

Atkins replied that a school boy of ten years old, who could not understand the bill, should not be sent to school for another hour. Any executive officer could understand it in a day.

Garfield.—It has to be codified.

Atkins.—Well, it can be codified in a day.

The previous question was seconded and the bill was ordered printed and recommitted.

The House then took up the special order bill, reported by Hatch from the committee on agriculture, to prevent the exportation of diseased cattle and the spread of infectious or contagious diseases among domestic animals.

Addresses in support of the bill were made by Messrs. Hatch and Covert, and by Mr. Morton in opposition.

EASTERN.

De Lesseps and the Darien Canal.

CHICAGO, 5.—The Times says: M. de Lesseps is about to issue a prospectus inviting subscriptions to his Panama canal scheme, and will visit Panama after the hot season, to familiarize himself with the ground. De Lesseps is employing the identical men in furtherance of this scheme with which he won success in the Suez Canal, but it is at least certain that he will never live to see the realization of his present enterprise. Reports of engineers who were presumably in favor of the scheme made at the recent conference in Paris, were almost convincing as to its impracticability, and De Lesseps's action in inviting subscriptions is premature, to say the least. It is not to be supposed the appeal will be responded to very liberally.

Northern Pacific Railroad.

The Inter-Ocean's Bismarck, D. T., special says: President Billings, with several of the gentlemen who liberally subscribed to the recent loan of $2,000,000 to the Northern Pacific, inspected the extension west of the Missouri to-day. It is reported that the president found the work progressing too slowly, and that he will take steps to stir up the contractors. Billings says it is the desire to build the whole distance to the Yellowstone this year. As to the change of management, there is nothing definite, except that Billings means to do the best thing he can for the interest of the road, independent of personal friendship. It is thought in some quarters that Vice-president Stark will be the general manager. With the completion of the division to the Yellowstone and of the Pen d'Oreille division on the Pacific coast, President Billings proposes to establish a stage line between the terminl and thus provide for a through travel and mail route before the road is completed.

Indians Hang Themselves.

CHEYENNE, 5.—The three renegade Cheyennes, who shot and killed Private Bader and wounded a signal sergeant while en route to Fort Keogh, Montana, and who were turned over to the civil authorities at Miles City, Montana, to answer a charge of murder, were, on Tuesday last, sentenced to be hung on the 17th of June. The same evening two of them committed suicide by hanging in the cells of the guard house at Fort Keogh.

Killed.

Al. Davis, a miner, working in the Father De Smet mine, was killed to-day by the discharge of a blast which he had set, but failing to explode, he started to examine it, when the explosion occurred with terrific force, killing him instantly.

WESTERN.

California Workingmen in Convention—Nominations.

SAN FRANCISCO, 5.—The Workingmen's Convention, to-day, rescinded a resolution to make the nominees for judicial offices take the ironclad pledge. The pledge for congressmen adopted was that they will not, as congressmen, vote for any presidential nominee other than the workingmen's candidate, unless otherwise instructed by the workingmen's party convention.

A proposition to abolish the office of president of the party, now held by Kearney, created a breeze in the convention. Some sharp talk passed between Kearney and the member making the motion, when the latter, with two or three others, withdrew from the convention. The proposition was voted down by a large majority, and Kearney was re-elected permanent president.

The party convention then nominated the following state ticket: Governor, Wm. F. White, of Monterey County; Lieutenant Governor, W. R. Andrews; Secretary of State, A. A. Smith, Nevada; Treasurer, Charles Krug, Napa County; Comptroller, Hugh Jones, Santa Clara; Attorney General, C. W. Cross, Nevada; Surveyor General, H. J. Stevenson, Los Angeles; Superintendent of Public Instruction, H. D. Stout, Santa Barbara; Chief Justice, R. F. Morrison, San Francisco; First Associate Justice, I. B. McKee, Alameda. The remaining associate justices will be nominated to-morrow.

The congressional convention of the second district nominated P. J. Hopper, of Sacramento, for Congress from that district.

White is a farmer, was a member of the constitutional convention, and is considered a good nomination. Andrus was recently re-elected Mayor of Oakland by the workingmen, which office he has filled acceptably. Krug is a prominent viniculturist. Cross is a promising young lawyer. Morrison is judge of the forth district. Both are first class nominations.

READ THE FOLLOWING:

Dr. D. D. Wright, of Cincinnati, writes for the only dried professions medicines: "I have prescribed Hall's Balsam in a large number of cases and always with success." Dr. Hall has "in one case a patient with every symptom of confirmed consumption was rendered in six weeks health sufficient to enable him to go to take the Balsam."

John Kuhn, of Lafayette, Ind., writes: "One year ago I was to all appearance in the last stage of consumption and got so low my friends had sent for my coffin and burial clothes. Mr. Kuhn further states that after taking nine bottles of HALL'S BALSAM he is now in perfect health, having used no other medicine."

The above brief extracts are taken from a
