OGDEN.

OGDEN, UTAH, JUNE 12, 1896.

Junction City Items.

The Weber Stake seminary held its commencement exercises yesterday afternoon and evening. Elder F. D. Richards delivered an address and George Brimhall the valedictory. The graduates of the normal course are Irvin Earnstiff, George Ritchie, David R. Wrathall and John Wirth; Sunday school course, Ida Alvord, Mary Bettin, Walter Bramwell, Agnes Bowen, Andrew Bowman, Lois Brown, Nellie Compton, Rachel Fowler, Lottie Heuriger, Nellie Hanks, David Mattson, Minnie McFarlane, Dorcha Madsen, Arietta Monson, Jessie Moore, Sarah Powell, Maggie Roberts, Daisy Stapleton, Ida Stubbs and Mary Taylor.

Paul Pearson of Smithfield, Cache county, arrested on the charge of operating a chicken still, had a preliminary examination before Commissioner Maloney and was bound over to the Federal grand jury in the sum of $500. After an examination a warrant was issued for the arrest of Mrs. Pearson, as it is thought she had something to do with the business.

At a meeting of the police and fire commissioners the chief of police was instructed not to cash any city warrants with any moneys received from police court fines and he was further directed to pay into the city treasury warrants and cash exactly as he received the same and to take a separate receipt therefor from the city recorder.

Closing exercises were held in the Grant avenue school yesterday afternoon and in the Pingree avenue school in the evening. The programs rendered reflect much credit on all concerned and the rooms were unusually well filled.

C. P. Hoag, timekeeper at the Power Dam works, was bitten by a large rattle snake yesterday. He was treated at the hospital and is expected to recover without any ill-effects.

Suit has been filed against Attorney L. R. Rogers by Sidney Stevens to recover the sum of $416.45, which plaintiff alleges to be due on notes given defendant to sell out.

L. R. Rogers left last night to attend the St. Louis convention.

BEANS AS A FIELD CROP.

The Navy a Popular Market Variety—How and When to Sow—Cultivation.

An Ohio farmer of wide experience, writing in The Prairie Farmer, says:

The best bean to grow on most land is the Navy, a small white bean popular in the market. There are different strains of this bean that vary a little in size, uniformity of shape and earliness. The one called the tree bean I believe to be a strain of the Navy. The Marrow is a large white bean that usually sells the Navy and on some soils will prove profitable. Beans will mature in about 90 days, and as early beans are often damaged by the weevil it is best always to delay planting until from the 20th of June to July 1. The last crop I ever grew was planted July 4.

It is best to plow the land early in May and stir and harrow after each rain so as to get the land fine and mellow and free from weeds before planting. They may be sown with the wheat drill. If a fine, mellow seed bed is made, using every third drill, which makes the rows 24 inches apart. But little cultivation is needed, as the vines will soon shade the land and keep the weeds from growing. A crop of beans can be grown after cutting down hay, as the hay can usually be cut before the middle of June. If this is to be done, the land should be rolled as soon as plowed to compact it and save the moisture and prevent it from becoming cloddy, and I would advise that 200 pounds of good commercial fertilizer be used to the acre, as it will greatly help the wheat crop which is to follow, for I would always follow beans with wheat.

Beans belong to the same family of plants as clover, and wheat does better after beans than after most other crops, and if the beans are not allowed to get weedy it will cost but little to prepare the seed bed for wheat. Harvest as soon as most of the pods are yellow, and as soon as dry put under cover, for be careful to avoid heating, as it will shatter some of the beans and make an expensive job of picking over. They thresh very easily either with the flail or by treading with horses, but if this is done care must be taken to keep the floor well covered with straw or the horses will split many of the beans by treading on them.

Better Than a Hustler.

From a Connecticut farmer comes the sketch of a contraption to take the place of handling available bales. This device was sent to The Country Gentleman with the assurance that it is not only a cheap contrivance, but one easily worked.

DEVICE FOR HANDLING HAY.

agent. With its assistance the farmer mentioned has "pastured four cows at a time on a wagon path through a field of corn, allowing them to eat the grass alongside the corn." He would use part of his field for hay and pasture the rest by using the wire on a new place on the farm occasionally. It allows the cow to move along as she would when loose to eat.

Seeding With Green Alsike.

"We must use here again advantage of seeding with the grass of alsike than in any place greater economy in seeding with a green crop that is well distributed similar to the generally good food," says The American Cultivator. "It takes a pint of seed to the acre of alsike and on some soils will pay to use more of any kind in the carriage. So it seems also there is always the last of a year's seed of the land which is more than most farmers can afford. Besides, on such long cultivated land weed seeds are so abundant that they will sprout as the young clovers grass where they will grow.

"We have always thought that green alsike in the chaff and grass in early spring, helping them to establish their roots. We have seen the beneficial effects of alsike seed in the fall when blowing. When the grass caught the grass was killed out by freezing and thawing, while where the grass protected it the alsike will survive from our blowed so quickly, and the timothy sheled by the winter grass was unimpaired. Besides, alsike lowland is far too wet in early spring for other clover or grass. The grass holds it of grain lodge, to keep the soil of alsike water than it would be without it."

Size of Tile Pipe.

As to required size of tiling it has been given Waring's table. The drains are placed four feet or more deep and laid on a well regulated fall of three inches in 100 feet:

For 1 acre	2½ inch pipe
For 2 acres	3 inch pipe
For 3 acres	3½ inch pipe
For 4 acres	3½ inch pipe
For 5 acres	3½ inch pipe
For 6 acres	4 inch pipe
For 10 acres	4 inch pipe

These drains will remove the water fast enough for all practical purposes if the pipes are seven by look.

Nuts and Notes.

According to farmers' bulletin No. 35, it is now important to eat the seed grains into compact masses of sandy material that then to scatter the grains so as to have a definite number of eggs on each spot. Each grain should be large enough to support at least two eggs, and better more or more.

The outlook for the sugar beet crop is generally excellent.

Compost, which is being much talked about, is apparently confined to the lower and poorer of the great plains and can hardly be given elsewhere at a profit.

Net culture is increasing throughout the United States.

Crimson Clover is a promising variety of annual leguminous hay crops.
