CARE OF THE FEET.

When the feet are damp and cold it is impossible to keep well. There will be a cough, or sore throat, or hoarseness, sick headache, or some other annoyance.

If cold and dry, the feet should be soaked in hot water for ten minutes every night and when wiped and dried, rub into them well, ten or fifteen drops of sweet oil; do this patiently with the hands, rubbing the oil into the soles of the feet particularly.

On getting up in the morning, dip both feet at once into water as cold as the air of the room, half ankle deep for a minute in summer; half a minute, or less in winter; rubbing one foot with the other, then wipe dry, and if convenient, holding them to the fire, rubbing them with the hand until perfectly dry and warm in every part.

If the feet are damp and cold, attend only to the morning washing, but at night always remove the stockings and hold the feet to the fire, rubbing them with the hands for fifteen minutes, and get immediately into bed.

Under any circumstances, as often as the feet are cold enough to attract attention, draw off the stockings, and hell them to the fire; if the feet are much inclined to dampness, put on a pair of dry stockings, leaving the damp ones before the fire to be ready for another change.

Some persons' feet are more comfortable, even in winter, in cotton, others in woolen stockings. Each must be guided by his own feelings. Sometimes two pairs of thin stockings keep the feet warmer than one pair which is thicker than both. The thin pairs may be of the same or of different materials, and that which is best next to the feet, should be determined by the feelings of the person.

Sometimes the feet are rendered more comfortable by basting half an inch thickness of curled hair on a piece of thick cloth, slipping this into the stocking, with the hair next to the skin, to be removed at night, and placed before the fire to be perfectly dried by morning. Persons who walk a great deal during the day, should, on coming home for the night, remove their shoes and stockings, hold the feet to the fire until perfectly dry; put on a dry pair, and wear slippers for the rest of the evening.

Boots and gaiters keep the feet damp, unclean and noisome, by preventing the escape of the insensible perspiration and odor which are constantly emanating from healthy feet; hence the old-fashioned shoe is the best for health and for the strengthening of the ankles, by habituating them to support themselves.

Pieces of newspaper wrapped around the feet over the stockings keep the feet remarkably warm. Cold feet arise from the want of vigorous circulation in them; this is often remedied by putting them in hot water in a wooden vessel, so as to cover the toes; in about ten minutes put both in cold water, the colder the better, of the same depth for half a minute; the object being to produce a shock, calculated to draw the warm blood to the souls; this may be done on retiring and rising. Nothing should be considered a trouble, which can have even a slight tendency to keep the feet warm, because there never can be recovery from disease or substantial good health without it.—Ex.

THE HOODLUMS OF PARIS.

THE GAY CAPITAL INFESTED WITH BULLIES AND ROUGHS.

It is curious to remark that these robbers generally operate in bands at the beginning of cold weather. They manage to get a living in the warm season by following their "professions." Some of the thieves are strolling players who are attached in minor positions to the numerous companies which perform at fairs; others are bullies, who live by "protecting" their friend when he is arrested by the police. This last class is becoming dangerously large in Paris. A great proportion of the men arrested here for nocturnal attacks, belong to the class known as "souteneurs." Another curious fact is that many of them are generally young; out of about 40,000 arrests made annually, 7,000 are minors and 20,000 have already had one or more condemnations. The outlying quarters, by the fortifications, are infested with these bullies and their female companions, and they even come into the heart of the city. The Faubourg Montmartre, one of the most frequented thoroughfares, belongs to them after 10 o'clock at night.

The present state of terror has revived the discussion as to the cause of all this crime. Six thousand individuals—vagabonds and old offenders—wake up in Paris every morning without knowing how they will live until night. It is no wonder that there is an occasional violent outburst in the struggle for existence. The socialists claim that these vagabonds are made by the French prison system —Paris letter to New York Times

WHAT AN EGG WILL DO.

For burns and scalds nothing is more soothing than the white of egg, which may be poured over the wound. It is softer as a varnish for a burn than collodion, and being always at hand, can be applied. It is also more cooling than the sweet oil and cotton which was formerly supposed to be the surest application to allay the smarting pain. It is the contact with the air which gives the extreme discomfort experienced from the ordinary accident of this kind, and anything that excludes the air and prevents inflammation is the thing to be at once applied.

The egg is considered one of the best of remedies for dysentery. Beaten up slightly, with or without sugar, and swallowed at a gulp, it tends, by its emolient qualities, to lessen the inflammation of the stomach and intestines, and, by forming a transient coating on these organs, to enable nature to resume her healthful sway over a diseased body. Two, or at most three eggs per day would be all that is required in ordinary cases; and since egg is not merely medicine, but food as well, the lighter the diet otherwise, and the quieter the patient is kept, the more certain and rapid is the recovery.

Dr. Laujorrois recommends potassium bichromate for disinfecting cesspools, sewage, dissecting rooms, etc., and considers it likely to be of great use in diseases due to microbia.

Captain Schufeldt, of the Army Medical Corps, has just forwarded to the Smithsonian Institution a collection of some 3,000 specimens of vertebrates and intervertebrates collected around New Orleans.

M. J. Soure states that collodion in thin strips or sheets is negative toward all other bodies. Interpreting the therapeutical effects of collodion, account, he believes, should be taken of its electric powers.

An ingenious apparatus called a "firedamp indicator" has been invented in Geneva. Every hour or half hour the air of the mine is forced into the burner by a bellows, and the result is registered in the central office.

The Nature reports an extraordinary case of subsidence near Bona Naiba, an isolated mountain, more than 2,500 feet high, is slowly sinking into the bosom of the earth. A deep ditch has been made all around the engulfed mass.

Gen. Pitt Rivers, with eight or nine excavators, has lately devoted some days to explorations at Penselwood, the site of the ancient British city Caer Pensauelcoit, that was invested for seven days by Vespasian under Claudius, A. D., 47.

Mr. G. K. Gilbert, in a recent publication of the United State Geological Survey, declares that the Wasatch range, the greatest mountain mass in Utah, has recently increased in height, and the presumption is that it is still growing.

Most animals drink by suction, as the ox; and a few by lapping, as the dog. The elephant pumps the water up with its trunk, and then pours it into its throat. Birds, excepting doves, fill the beak, then, raising the head, allow the water to run down.

The latest scientific explorations of the Yellowstone Park, made during the past summer by members of the United States Geological Survey, and show that it contains 500 geysers 5,000 hot springs. These numbers are somewhat larger than those obtained in earlier surveys.

The average daily movement of the wind on the top of Nount Washington in October last was 6.10 miles; highest temperature 54° 5; lowest 6°. The highest velocity of the wind was 94 miles an hour, from the west. There were three inches of snow on the summit at the close of the month.

A new claimant for the invention of the telephone has appeared, and M. le Comte du Moncel supports him. So early as 1854 Charles Borseul, a Frenchman, is reported to have invented the telephone substantially as it is now, and published his discovery in the autumn of the year mentioned.

The speed at which explosions can travel has been looked into by M. Berthelot. He took for the gasses carbonic oxide and oxygen, and these he exploded in a tube 16 inches long and one-eighth inch in diameter, by means of electricity. The rate observed was the unexpectedly high one of 2,500 meters a second.

Carrier pigeons are sometimes attacked and destroyed by birds of prey. Lately it was resolved to try how well ravens would perform the same functions as the pigeons. The test was made at Coblentz with young birds. The point of arrival was a small place on the Moselle, near Treves, distant from Coblentz about forty miles. The sable messengers did their duty admirably.

The electric light bids fair to be the light of the immediate future in English country houses, according to the London World. Lord Salisbury, who is of an experimental turn of mind, was the first to use it in a country house. That was four or five years ago. Then the Duke of Sutherland followed the example at Trentham, and now Lord Thurlow is lighting Dumphall house by electricity.

M. Vieusse, principal medical officer of the medical hospital at Oron, states that excessive sweating of the feet, under whatever form it appears can be quickly cured by carefully conducted friction with the subnitrate of bismuth, and even in the few cases where this suppresses the abundant sweating only temporarily, it still removes the severe pain and the fetidity which often accompany the secretion.

Dr. B. W. Richardson, the well-known English authority on hygiene, at the annual meeting of the Tricycle Union in London a few days since, said that in his vacation he pursued bicycling as a great pleasure and as a greater restorative. He regarded this recreation as one of the healthiest of all exercises, and was deeply grateful for the perfection to which the machine had been brought.—New York Sun.

The whirlwinds of dust observed by Prejevelsky in Central Asia, like those in Mexico, India and the Sahara, have the same origin and mechanical action as the tornadoes of the United States and all waterspouts. They are all alike spiral movements descending with upright axis, and always traveling horizontally in nearly a straight line. The general belief that the dust on land and the water at sea ascend from the surface high into the air is due to an optical illusion.

It may fairly be taken, says W. Wallace, that the durability of a stone depends on its impenetrability of water, its density, and the amount of binding material contained in it. It is noticeable that building stones first begin to decay immediately below any flat projecting surface which allows the rain to collect and then percolate through them, and thus dissolve or alter the binding material. To preserve sandstone it is advisable, first, to let it dry as thoroughly as possible and then to paint it or to coat it with silicate of soda.
