DESERET EVENING NEWS.

Tuesday, October 3, 1893.

FRAGMENTS.

TYPHOID fever is reported to be on the increase in the city.

THE joint city and county building committee will meet on Friday next.

THE regular monthly meeting of the Press Club will be held tomorrow night.

MR. E. C. CHAMBERS and family will leave for Chicago on Monday morning next over the Union Pacific.

THE indications are that a good many Salt Lakers will take advantage of the $6.75 round trip rate and visit Chicago.

THE Scandinavian Democratic society gave an excellent musical entertainment at Odd's Hall last night.

SECRETARY C. C. RICHARDS is advertising for bids for the legislative printing that will be needed by the Territory during the coming session of the legislature.

THAT body of wonderful deeds and great glory—the City Council—will meet to remark the business of their commissions tonight.

THE registration injunction suit Thornton vs Walden will, if the arrangement is carried out, be heard before Judge Zerkel in the second division at the Third district court on a few days against the city and county. The papers are about ready for filing.

THE Arms murder trial drew another "crowded house" this morning, and Judge Zane again found it necessary to request one of the court bailiffs to take up a permanent position at the doors and prevent the admission of any further visitors.

THE most interesting feature of the Armp trial is probably the medical testimony, which is not characteristic of its monotonity. A number of the leading physicians of the city have been on the witness-stand during the investigation. The case may go to the jury late this afternoon.

THERE was a shooting bee near Schiff's hall at the corner of Fourth South and Second West a little after o'clock last night. People in the vicinity had their attention attracted by a command, "Hold up your hands!" This was quickly followed by two pistol shots. Inquiries were made into the affair, but the hold-uppers and other parties who were on the ground at the time declined to make any explanation of the cause of the shooting. No one was injured so far as could be ascertained.

Home Again.

Elder Thomas Fielding, of this city, who has been absent on a mission to Great Britain, is again back among his friends. He left on September 5, 1891, and returned last Saturday, September 30. He says he has had a varied experience in the missionary field, but has enjoyed his labors immensely. He has been traveling in the Sheffield conference.

IN UINTAH COUNTY.

Rich Section of the Territory for Agriculture and mining.

WHAT PEOPLE THERE ARE DOING.

Conditions in Ashley Valley.—Prospect for Uintah Valley When it is Opened to Settlement.

The steadily increasing prospect of an early opening of the Uintah and Uncompahgre Indian reservations to settlement is drawing more general attention to one of the best sections of Utah for agriculture, mining and manufacturing purposes. There are included in those reservations, and the immediate vicinity in Uintah county, broad and fertile valleys where the climate is pleasant and healthful, extensive mineral deposits, an abundance of fuel and timber, and an almost unlimited water supply for power and irrigating purposes. These conditions give assurance that in comparatively few years the valleys of Uintah county that are now reserved mainly for bands of Indians whose numbers are steadily decreasing will become the abiding places of thousands of white settlers.

There are in Salt Lake today two of the leading citizens of Uintah county, Samuel R. Bennion and R. S. Collett, who reside at Vernal, the chief town of the county. Vernal is located on Ashley river, which flows through Ashley valley, on the northeast border of the reservations, and empties into the Green river. Ashley valley is about six miles wide and thirty long, and now has about 3000 inhabitants. Its location is well toward the east line of Utah, about midway between the Rio Grande Western railway in Utah and the Union Pacific in Wyoming. Price station, on the Rio Grande Western in Emery county, is about 120 miles from Vernal, and Carter station, on the Union Pacific in Wyoming, is about the same distance in the opposite direction. Heber City, in Wasatch county, is about 150 miles from Vernal, and has the best wagon road. The Denver Short Line projected to Salt Lake is to run through the Ashley and Uintah valleys.

Mr. Bennion was asked today what the chance was for settlers in the Ashley valley and vicinity, and said: "There is plenty of room for workers. There are drummers, clerks, agents and business men are numerous, but we don't say one for there there yet. But for good, honest hard workers there is plenty of room and a good chance to do well. Our climate is just as good as in the Salt Lake valley. We can raise all kinds of fruit that can be raised here. Our peaches are the best in the Territory, and the grapes and other fruits are equal to anything of the kind in other parts of Utah. The people have reached out for land year after year until the last two seasons there has been more land under cultivation than there was water for under existing conditions; but there is plenty of water to be taken out in ditches, and arrangements are being made to accomplish the work. When the reservations are opened there will be plenty of land in the county for settlement. In the Ashley valley now it is cheaper to buy than to rent land, though cultivated soil commands a good figure."

Mr. Colett gave, in response to a request, this information regarding Uintah: "There is room in the Ashley valley for a large number of settlers, and of course there will be a great deal more in the Uintah valley when the reservations are opened. There is not much talk of land in our section now, as we have plenty, most of the farmers having from 40 to 320 acres. Most of the land talk I heard was after I left Price, coming this way. When the people who have been in Strawberry valley get the idea that the Uintah country is like that they are under a mistaken impression. There is no more similarity between Strawberry valley and the Uintah and Ashley valleys than there is between Farley's park and Salt Lake valley. The altitude of Ashley and Uintah valleys is about 600 feet more than that of the Great Salt Lake.

"There is in that part the best fruit country in Utah. It is equally good for grain and vegetables. The only reason there was not an abundance of water in the Ashley valley during this year is that it was not taken out of the streams, but we are now at work on a plan that will remedy that. We have established a new town at the head of the valley up Dry Fork, and are cutting timber. At the mill there will be the timber for a big flume which will be built to take the waters of Dry Fork over to the canals. Tells them to be ready as large as the Ashley river, and when it is brought over there will be water for the whole valley.

"The papers for the incorporation formed in this city were sent to Salt Lake. The organization is called the Vernal Milling and Fluming company, and the capital stock of $25,000 is divided into 1250 shares at $20 each. The directors are L. Johnson, president, James Harding, vice president, John Dixon, secretary, David H. Brighton and R. S. Colett. The water of Dry Fork must be diverted a distance of three miles to where it is available, and the cost will be about $150 per mile. The company has organized to set that work on the installation of the flume and waterway and be paid in water right.

"There is an abundance of timber in the hills there. Coal also exists in those mountains. There is a mine of good coal opened three miles from Vernal, and coal is sold at the mine at from $1.50 to $2 per ton. The country round about is splendid for sheep and cattle.

"Of the Indian reservations, it may be said that the Uintah reservation, the agricultural land, and the Uncompahgre reservation, would adjoin the Uintah on the east, and the mineral section, though there is another in the Uintah reservation and timber and grazing land in the east. When the Uintah reservation is opened up, that will be the great section for settlers. The timber and coal are abundant, and the supply of pure water for power, agricultural, and manufacturing purposes almost unlimited. The Uintah Valley is the best watered in Utah. It is as large or larger than that portion of Cache Valley in this Territory. The soil is of different colors, and very fertile. There will come day be a great city built in that valley somewhere near the present Fort Duchesne, and the valley will afford a pleasant home and comfortable for thousands of families.

"The gilsonite squatters who were formerly on the eastern edge of the Uintah reservation, but the owners have recently had them opened, eleven sections of land being cut off the reservation for this purpose. But this does not open to settlement any land, as there is a strip of land on the reservation between the river and the opened sections. There are mineral claims being worked on the Uintah reservation to the southwest of the gilsonite location. There are the asphaltic mines of Judge McConnell, who has a lease on the claims and works them under strict regulations.

"The Uncompahgre reservation, however, is very rich in mineral. It is on that, a few miles southwest of Vernal, that is located the vast asphaltum beds that Mr. Perry and others were seeking to get possession of. The vein there is from asphaltum inches to two and a half feet wide, and has been uncovered for about a mile. How much further it extends is yet undetermined. Its depth is not known, though it has been cut into in places from sixty to eighty feet deep. But the asphalt beds which Mr. Perry and associates were after, while of equally pure quality, are only ten times the extent of the gilsonite claims. The vein is at least twenty feet wide, and has been cut down to large quantities for a great distance. Its depth in the earth has never been penetrated. It does not go down perpendicularly, but in a slanting direction. These beds will be a vast mine of wealth to anybody when the Uncompahgre reservation is opened.

"The wagon road from Price to Vernal is rough, and thirty-five miles of it is through a barren section; but the route to Casper is tougher still. The best wagon road is that which comes to Heber City. It is good all the way in the summer season, with plenty of water and feed all along. From December to March or April it is not passable to teams because of snow and mud. At present the settlers of Ashley have a good market for their hay, grain and vegetables at Fort Duchesne. There is not much money there at present, but we do not feel the financial stringency so severely as the people seem to elsewhere, for we have good comfortable houses and food and the other necessities of life in abundance."

POLITICAL PIE.

A friend of mine asked me last night why the American question was like a cheap restaurant lunch in the month of July. I confessed my inability to answer the question, which he volunteered the reply that it was because it was likely to cost up at any time.

Boss Powers has evidently been unable to raise the $100 he was so anxious to wager with Judge Dickson that he knew nothing of the Cundlin letter of destruction until he saw it in the papers, as he has been silent on the topic in the proceedings for two few days. The thing is a great bluffer and all pretense to talk about white wings, golden state and glittering goal.

A plain case of political nervousness and overwhelming sorrow was brought to light a few days ago in the Fifth precinct. An excitable sheepherder and a Lehi real, too, by the way, came to the conclusion that he had no show one for his party, as they appeared to be playing no many losing games. This gentleman has a wonderful lot of Arm John's bread on the winning side. He made a business for the Democracy and resented putting a straight party ticket in the field. But when he realizes that the Independent movement was carrying everything before it he added the "one leg" part to perfection and in some announced that no war in the ranks of his friends. But a very excited man he remained away from the convention but sought a temporary settling place within easy reach, and when the meeting ended a distant business partner came to town in a rather, when the following interesting dialogue is said to have occurred:

"Hold! — — — —!—did I get the nomination for Mayor?"

"Yes — Bennion."

"I'm fearfully?"

"Double worse than usual."

"Hold! Thunderbolts!—"

"Hold on! I'm not done yet. They want to be a new name Bennion."

"Then let my name for Treasurer remain. But I don't care, anyway."

"Double Bunion's chance put a mortgage on that, or bust."

"Low blood, Bunion, what about time? I was thinking of a ticket you know."

"You bet Arms Fort pulled that game."

"Of course I am not a lawyer, but who is the course for police justice?"

"Great H. Bunion."

"Let me wire for Uncle. I want to see him right away and fix things with him so he will resign my line for acting and acting clerk. The kind of luck will send a man to the bad."

Another patriot, on hearing how the official ballots had been distributed, attempted to take matters more philosophically as evidenced by the statement: "Well, Bill, there is nothing left for us to take, so let's go and take a drink."

I met a bright and shining light from the order of the Ancients last night who waxed warm at the mention of Mayor Bunion's name. "That man shall never be mayor of Salt Lake City again if I can prevent it." When asked what constituted the chief element of his objection he said his name had gone on record as having denounced the Ancients, and that was enough for him. That was a strange style of reasoning. Opposition to the Catholics was all right in his mind but to be arrayed against the society of which he was a member was highly improper. Another case of difference as to whose cat is gored.—Amrita.
