WHO ARE YOUNG FOLKS?

WHEN does a man cease to have a right to be called young? When he reaches a certain age, or when he passes from bachelordom into the loftier position of married life? The question, "Is he a young man?" is frequently asked with a view to learning whether the person indicated is married or not. This seems to us to have no foundation in reason. If a man who marries a wife ceases at once to be a young man, what an aged fellow he must be who marries two or three wives! And by this rule a youth of twenty who takes a wife, is older than the bachelor of thirty.

We are led to make these remarks in consequence of some inquiries we have received in relation to the Young Men's and Young Ladies' Mutual Improvement Societies. It appears that in some places married ladies are excluded from the latter, and young married men from the former, without regard to years. Thus a spinster of twenty-five — there are such ladies, although there need not be in Utah—is eligible for membership in the Y. L. society, while a married woman of eighteen is barred out. Now this appears to us preposterous. We do not see any reason why a young lady who is married should not be just as good and efficient a member of an improvement society, as one who is still single, but expects and hopes to be married. And we will say for the benefit of our female correspondents, who are anxious over this question, that we know of no rule which makes a lady old simply because she has reached the goal of every natural woman's anticipations, and we are assured there is no general regulation of the society at large which excludes any young man or young woman from membership on account of marriage.

On the contrary we are acquainted with many very estimable young married men and ladies who are active laborers in the cause of mutual improvement, and some of them presidents of branch societies. The experience of married life should, in our view, render them more valuable to the societies, and as wedlock is encouraged in this community and is enjoined as a duty upon our young people, it would be very inconsistent to make it a mark of disqualification for membership in the young folks' societies. Marriage tends to prolong life and preserve youth and vigor, therefore no husband or wife should be considered past the age of youth, simply because of taking a wise step in the path of life.

We hope this will be sufficient on this subject, and aid in setting this matter right in any place where it needs regulation.

HOME INDUSTRY.

A subject may appear to be hackneyed, and yet possess as much importance as when first mooted. Indeed a truthful principle may really become more valuable and essential the longer its adoption is deferred.

The principle of home manufacture is one of those topics which should never weary and never die. It is the basis of industrial prosperity, the present without it is a condition of semi-idleness, and the future is a mockery on the family circle, and the death knell of increasing and unwelcome population.

It is within the truth to believe that thousands think only of a factory and tannery in connection with our subject, yet these are but a couple of the outposts of a long line of fortifications, inside of which society is entrenched, by virtue of habit, or by real necessity. The great staples for physical subsistence undeniably lead all other industries. A nation or community neglecting to raise its own food is ever at the mercy of circumstances, and the slave of the producer. Life depends upon contingencies which may be fanned to flame by political aspirants, or made the sport of national passion, feud or frality. With the human nature of to-day all nations should (at least in this our direction) be absolutely independent; the bread and meat should be a certainty, or statesmanship should colonize the redundant population where they could become thus far self-sustaining.

Great Britain is an illustration. Her national prestige and home peace may both go down, because of an unequally balanced condition of her industrial masses; and that assumption of inflexible national honor in which she has taken pride may yet vanish before the stern cery of famishing millions for their distant bread.

The people of Utah Territory may have made the other extreme of practice. They have made bread and meat abundant, and her agriculturists, while barely living from their labor, have been and are now, the very slaves of those who, outside of the colonial limits, furnish the thousand and one articles of real or assumed necessity.

The man who believes he cannot live without tobacco which comes from afar, is only in a less degree enslaved to the producer, than one who brings from a distance his daily loaf; and the man who introduces his posterity into a community practicing and living on artificial wants, without studying in some measure how to secure satisfaction for these desires, is only less culpable than him who never considers the absolute necessities.

Clothing, of course, ranks equal in importance with food; climatic conditions are imperative, and cloths, jeans, flannels, blankets, shoes, etc., are always in demand; modern taste and progressive inspiration demand the products of increasing skill, so the factory and tannery minister fairly to necessity, and will in simple and common forms always precede fabrics of a more complex and elaborate character.

It surely needs no argument at this date to say, manufacture and use that which is produced by your own looms and in your own vats; but how many are there who are prepared to say that even the shipping of surplus wool is a violation of the first principles of political economy? Yet this is so and should never be done, all the wool produced here (and much more) should be shipped as manufactured goods; blankets, flannels, cloths, will cost comparatively less to export than the wool, and in an age of shoddy, (even if our home demand or necessity was fully satisfied) genuine goods would sooner or later find a ready market, and some of those large firms who supply Z. C. M. I. and others of our merchants, could without difficulty be made to see that their interests would be subserved by a system of exchange or mutual trade.

But it will be urged that we have not the machinery to manipulate our wool product. Then the community are under moral and religious obligations to see that the machinery is forthcoming, and the most earnest and enterprising of our citizens should not only inaugurate a movement for this purpose, but they should use their influence, first on the home market and then on the foreign one, so as to secure the disposal of the manufactured article.

There is a good deal of very justifiable laudation in regard to the new tannery in this city; yet this is not a new industry, though it may now have the prestige of capital, authority and experience; This should only be one of a series, for it is just as preposterous for Sanpete, Cache and other counties to haul their hides to this city and the shoes back, as for the Territory to send them to Chicago or Boston, on the same principle. To build up an unwieldy centre is not to build up the country. Enterprise is just as desirable and just as much needed at the extremities as at the capital of a State or nation. Then again, when we have exhausted the hides of the country in the home factories, there is a wonderful and enlarging demand beyond this supply, and to import ready made boots, shoes or clothing with our unemployed wealth of labor, (both male and female) is to be guilty of treason to our best interests, and to live in persistent violation of the covenants and spirit of the Gospel. Troops of our boys and hosts of our girls should, in every county of the Territory, be employed in shoemaking and the manufacture of clothing, if it had to be of necessity from imported material; several young sisters, as well as brethren, who are well able and practised in this direction, have this season come from Europe, and as "a little leaven leaveneth the whole lump," so they, if judiciously distributed and the idea fostered and sustained, could soon reduce the value of our importations and help to furnish a home market, which is the best market in the world.

In this connection the manufacture of clogs should be an auxiliary to our boot and shoe supply. Many who have worn clogs all their lives speak and act as though they had never known such articles, but for our winters, in many directions, they would be invaluable. If out of place in the hall room they are none the less useful on the farm and in travel, being warmer than leather, and economical in use. When well made and well introduced, some company or person will find a nice little fortune, and and one not far to seek at that.

A Donation to the "Benner Fund."

NEW YORK, 8—The relief committee of the Chamber of Commerce received, yesterday, $1,000, through Messrs. Seligman, from the citizen's relief committee of San Francisco, for the benefit of the widow and children of Lieut. Benner. This amount was deposited in the Central Trust Company, to the credit of the "Benner fund."

Another House Estimate.

The Tribune says: The latest returns indicate the election of 133 republicans and 143 democrats, and 11 greenbackmen to Congress, thus giving the democrats only four majority over all in the House. This majority will probably be increased by later reports.

Election Summary.

It is impossible to exactly give the result of the late elections on congressmen, the third district of New Jersy, for instance, only 13 miles distant, being yet in doubt. New York elects 25 republicans and eight democrats. The Massachusetts delegation is solidly republican, with one exception, which is a republican gain of one. Pennsylvania is probably the same as before, politically. 16 straight republicans, two greenback republicans, eight straight democrats, and one greenback democrat. The republicans gained two in Connecticut, one in Illinois, and possibly two, in Kentucky, one in North Carolina, one in Maryland, one in Michigan, one in Wisconsin, and one in New Hampshire, one, and perhaps two, in New Jersey. The republicans lost three in Missouri, and probably one in Minnesota. The returns from the south are too meagre to give the result, but both parties are agreed that the republican gains in the north will be counterbalanced by the democratic gains in the south.

Lecture on California and the Pacific Coast.

The first of a series of five popular lectures, upon California and the Pacific Coast, was delivered at Steinway Hall, last evening, by Prof. Vandemark. The lecture was chiefly of the nature of an introductory to those which are to follow, and attracted an audience which about two-thirds filled the hall. Vandemark is a young man, with pleasing voice and manner, and is a firm believer in the glories of California. He said the true solution of the hard times problem in the east was to go west where there is a home and competency for all. He described one little ten acre farm in California which yields its owner $1,500 to $3,000 every year. California, he said, would make 24 States as large as Massachusetts. It was a true home for the farmer, mechanic, artist, and everybody. The speaker advised everybody, however, to keep away from San Francisco unless they went there to engage in manufacturing. The city was flooded, like New York, with thousands of idle persons, too lazy to pick up $20 gold pieces if they were lying about, and these people help the cry "the Chinese must go." What California wanted was live, earnest men, character ized by the energy and push of the eastern people. There was room for thousands of such persons in the rural districts, but to go from New York to San Francisco would be like jumping out of the frying-pan into the fire.

The professor promised to discuss the Chinese question at some future lecture, and closed by reading a long poem, descriptive of the Golden State.

Cool and Daring Robbery.

Johnson's jewelry store, in Eighth Avenue, was robbed, last evening, of $2,000 worth of clocks and watches, in the presence of a large number of passers by. Shortly after six o'clock, two men entered the store, one closed the door, and the other, with a revolver, kept in their places Mr. Johnson, the proprietor, his clerk, and the customer; two others then smashed the large plate windows, packed, in two bags, the stock exposed. While they were thus occupied, two others, armed with pistols, ordered the passers by to move on. The property having been packed, the thieves still protected by their companions, moved quickly to a butcher's cart awaiting at the corner, and drove rapidly away. The two had kept possession of the street receiving a preconcerted signal, turned on the throng and fired their pistols in the air. A stampede of the people followed, and the thieves all escaped.

Political Contests.

The Times thinks Tuesday's election effectively demolished the long-established theory, that the results of the political contests in the so-called November states are always largely influenced by the outcome of the canvass in the commonwealths which cast their votes in September and October. The result in Vermont was certainly anything but satisfactory to the republicans, and the evidence of the greenback craze exhaling in Maine was everywhere regarded as an indication that the soft money men in the contests to come would carry everything before them. The elections in October are hardly calculated to do away with this belief, yet in the contest just past, the greenbackers, in this part of the country at least, were buried out of sight.

General Grant and the King of Portugal.

The Herald's Lisbon special says: Grant dined with the king recently. The ministry was present. The king's reception of the ex-president was very cordial. His majesty offered the General the highest decoration of knighthood known to the kingdom. Grant thanked him, but said he was compelled to decline the honor, as the laws of the United States made it impossible for an officer to wear decorations, and although he was not now in office, he preferred to respect the law. The king then offered him a copy of his translation of "Hamlet" into Portuguese, which Grant accepted with many thanks.

$25,000 Reward.

Mrs. A. T. Stewart has offered a reward of $25,000 for the recovery of the body of her late husband, stolen from the family vault, in St. Mark's church graveyard, and conviction of the thieves.

Horrible Murder.

SAN FRANCISCO, 8.—Mrs. Richard Barry, residing in a lonely part of the city, near the Masonic cemetery, was found murdered, yesterday, in her house. Her head was chopped to pieces with a hatchet, the object evidently being robbery, though but a few dollars were obtained. Footsteps were traced from the house to the camping place of tramps, three quarters of a mile distant. One man was found there. He was locked up for examination.

The Fishery Question.

Of the fishery question the Daily News says: "We await with interest the publication of Lord Salisbury's dispatch and the statement drawn up by the Canadian government; but there is no use trying to disguise the fact that Secretary Evarts' case has some force in it. A right has been bought, and, in the natural course of things, will be paid for by the United States. The question is one of legal obligation, and it cannot be too calmly discussed on both sides."

The Second Prize, or a Silver Medal was taken by the Williams Linen Spool Cotton, which claims to be the special champion of American industry, and which has extensively advertised a similar Prize at Paris.

NO GRAND PRIZES were awarded for Spool Cotton at PARIS.

Messrs. J. & P. Coats have established in Pawtucket, R. I., the largest Spool Cotton Mill in the United States. Every process of manufacture, from the raw cotton to the finished spool, is conducted there.
