HOUSE.

The Legislative Appropriation Bill.

WASHINGTON, 25.—The House went into a committee of the whole on the legislative appropriation bill. The amendment pending yesterday, appropriating a million dollars for the payment of the court of appeals, was adopted.

Nesmith moved to strike out from the paragraph relating to the department of justice fourteen hundred dollars for the care and subsistence of horses, and six hundred for repairs of carriages and harness. He spoke of the attorney general's sixteen hundred dollar landaulet, and remarked that lawyers of his (the attorney general's) calibre, in his State, rode on the outside of a fifty dollar mule. (Laughter.) There was a Spanish proverb to the effect that if you put a beggar on horseback he will ride to the devil.

Negley objected to the comparison of officers of the government to a beggar on horseback.

Nesmith—"I simply referred to the mule." (Laughter.)

Chairman—"The gentleman from Oregon will continue being careful to keep in order."

Nesmith—"I was only quoting a Spanish proverb, which says, 'Put a beggar on horseback and he will ride to the devil.' I have no objection to the termination of the journey in that particular direction, but I don't want the people to pay for the transportation." (Laughter.)

Dunham said that as one of the sub-committee on the contingent expenses of the department of justice, he had investigated the subject, and would be prepared shortly to make a report of extravagance in that department, but he now desired the chairman of the committee on appropriations to state how many horses were provided for in this fourteen hundred dollar item.

Garfield replied that he supposed as many as the sum would take care of.

Dunham insisted upon an explicit answer, which Garfield failing to give, Dunham accused him of want of candor, and some unpleasant personal passages occurred between the two. Garfield explained that the reasons for inserting the item were, that it was necessary for the Attorney General to use a carriage daily in his public business, and that it had been always customary for the government to supply horses and carriage. If the House wished to strike out the item they could do so, but he deprecated the attack upon the Attorney General. It was true that that officer had been furnished with a sixteen hundred dollar carriage, which was wrong, but it was purchased by a subordinate, who had charge of the fund, without the knowledge of the Attorney General, who regretted it.

Wood denied that the practice of the heads of departments using public horses and carriages for private convenience dated back of the Republican administration, and Wheeler, in reply, produced a voucher showing that in 1859, Floyd, Secretary of War, was charged with two hundred dollars, the difference between an old wagon and a fine carriage.

Hoar thought a decent conveyance should be furnished the Attorney General, and asked Nesmith if he would like to have the Attorney General ride down Pennsylvania avenue on a mule.

Nesmith replied that he had seen the Attorney General on a mule in Oregon, and he added that Phillip the Second, of Spain, rode a mule through the streets of Madrid when he went to marry Mary of England, and sacred history gave an account of a better man than either of them riding one of those useful animals that had no pride of ancestry and no hope of posterity.

Finally Nesmith's motion to strike out the item was agreed to, 86 to 69.

G. F. Hoar offered an amendment, prohibiting any officer of the government receiving any compensation, directly or indirectly, other than his regular salary, and such fees as may be attached thereto, or from making private use of any property except such as may be by law appropriated for his use; addopted.

Wilson moved an amendment providing that the clerks, marshals and district attorneys of the United States circuit courts, or district courts, shall reside in their respective districts, and give personal attention to the duties of their offices, and in case of the removal of any such officer from the district, or of failure, personally, to attend to his duties, except in cases of sickness, the office shall be deemed vacant; adopted.

The third section of the bill, increasing the office hours of the departments from six to seven, was struck out.

The last section, providing that on the first of July of each year, the unexpended balances of the appropriations that shall have remained on the books of the Treasury for two fiscal years, shall be carried to the surplus fund, was amended by making an exception in favor of river and harbor improvements, lighthouses, and certain public buildings.

The consideration of the bill was concluded, the committee rose, the main question was ordered, and the house adjourned.

Sailed For England.

NEW YORK, 25.—Sir Lambton Lorraine sailed for England to-day; he was accompanied to the steamer by Major General Hancock and staff and other gentlemen. The engrossed complimentary resolutions of the city were presented to him.

The Extent of the Damage in Louisiana.

NEW ORLEANS, 25. — Captain Blanks has just returned from a trip through the overflowed portions of Northern Louisiana. He writes a member of the relief committee that the tabular estimates of the damage in the inundated districts, heretofore presented to the committee, are much too small. He submits figures which show that 11,000 are in actual want in the parishes of North Louisiana, adding, to this large number, living outside the settlements, on the Bayous and on the crevasses, there are no less than 25,000 in this district. The extent of the damage is just beginning to be understood. It involves 5,000,000 acres, and 120,000 people. Nine of the richest and largest cotton producing parishes are inundated, embracing two and a half million acres of cotton land, besides much corn land. The sugar producing parishes show an equal amount of ruin and suffering, two and a half millions of acres of tilled and untilled sugar land being overflowed. The rice and corn crops and many cattle are also destroyed. It is believed that in less than sixty days the number of persons requiring aid will amount to 50,000. In Avegels and St. Landry parishes, not included in the above estimates, a district from twenty-five to thirty miles wide, is overflowed, and ten thousand souls are rendered homeless.
