EVENING NEWS.

Wednesday, January 9, 1878.

Fierce Bravery Displayed by the Turks at Plevna.

On the north side the news came that Osman Pasha was heading some 20,000 troops, and already driven the Russian advance lines. He had crossed the Vid, and was aiming at Etropol. Thither dashed several of the staff. Meanwhile, the Russians, southerly and easterly, closed in upon the Turkish entrenchments, capturing some easily, but paying a terrible price for others. The Moslems waited until the foe was within 400 yards, and then swept the line with a murderous fire. The Muscovites never hesitated nor faltered, but carried one position after another by storm. Enthusiasm grew into fury, and whole columns rushed through musketry fire as if it carried no death. But the Turks exhibited a despairing bravery. Again and again they formed in line and met the advancing foe at bayonet point. Toward afternoon the Turkish fire began to fail, and it was evident that their ammunition was exhausted. But their courage had not failed. In the trenches or in the open field they checked, more than once, the impetuous Russian charge, and had it not been for the Muscovite guns, the battle would have proved too dear for the object of the prize. Whenever the Turks formed to resist or make a stand, there was concentrated the fire of Russian guns. Whole battalions were well nigh swept away.

But at Etropel, where Ghazi Osman commanded in person, the fight was demoniacal. They bore down on the Russian positions with a fierceness and steadiness that nothing could withstand. Cheered on by the words "Allah! Allah!" ringing in the air, they tore through shrapnel and musket shots until the ground was darkened with their dead. They leaped into the entrenchments, and there, hand to hand, struggled in a death struggle with their hated foes. They swarmed the redoubts, and sprung on the Russian gunners like so many tigers. Their reserves came fearlessly forward, and had to pass through a converging fire that made gaps in the ranks at every stride they marked. Nothing daunted, they rushed to the aid of their brethren in front. But the Russians held on bravely, and fought with a steadiness and an undaunted courage that outlasted the Ionlike courage of the Osmanlies. Gradually the Roumanians bore down upon the Turkish flank, and from the west the Russian troops swept in upon the lines. Closer and closer the allied troops hemmed in their foes, and thinner and thinner grew the Turkish ranks. At length Osman, who fought as only a Turk can fight, grew weary of the slaughter, and ordered a retreat. It was too late, the enemy had surrounded him, and Plevna was already in the hands of the Russians. With a last attempt he strove to pierce his narrowing bounds. He fell, and with him the Moslem hope and Moslem bravery fell, too. The confusion became terrible. Whole divisions flung down their arms. The artillery batteries ceased their fire, the infantry dashed their muskets against the gun carriage wheels. At length a flag of truce was visible. It was near Osman Pasha. Some fifty Cossacks rode forward, and were followed by Gen. Granetsky and other officers. Supported by two officers, Osman Pasha, handing his sword to the Russian General, said: "To the Emperor, through you, I surrender my sword and my army." Thus, after six hours' heroic fighting on both sides, Plevna fell, and its gallant defender and his army became the prisoners of the allied Russo-Roumanian troops.

Russian and Turkish Discipline.

A Turkish and Russian officer fell into a dispute as to the superiority in discipline of their respective soldiers. "I can prove to you on the spot," said the Russian, "how perfectly our men are trained," and he called his orderly: "Ivan!" "Sir." Go to Mehemet's, buy me a pound of tobacco, and come back at once."

The soldier saluted, turned on his heel and went out.

"Now," said the Russian officer, taking out his watch, "my orderly is walking straight to the next corner, where he must turn—now he is turning—now he is opposite the white mosque—now he is crossing Maydan—now he is at Mehemet's—now he is buying the tobacco—now he is coming back—now he is at the door—now"—and the Russian called out:

"Ivan!"

"Sir."

"Where is the tobacco?"

"Here, sir."

The Turkish officer, showing no sign of surprise at the precision of this Russo-tobacco movement, promptly broke out: "Ho! ho! my soldier can do that every day in the week," and he called:

"Muhktar!"

"Sir."

"Go to Ali Effendi's and see that you bring me a pound of tobacco; my pipe is empty."

"Instantly, sir."

Following the tactics of the Russian officer, the Turk pulled out his watch and went on: "Now Muhktar is in the street; now he is passing the palooch bazar; now it is noon and he is saying his prayers; now Ali Effendi hails him and asks him about my health; now Muhktar is paying for the tobacco; now he is coming back by another way; now he is on the street; now he is at the door; now"—

"Muhktar!" shouted the officer.

"Sir."

"Where is my tobacco?"

"I haven't found my shoes yet."

WOODCHUCK.—"THE SCHOOLBOY'S LATEST." Woodchucks is a very curious animal. It is made of hair and eyes, and has two front teeth, and can see a man with a gun when his eyes are shut and bolted. I have seen a dog shake a woodchuck till teeth were black in the face. A woodchuck can snivel up his nose, and show his teeth, and look as homely as I can without trying. They eat no one cat and eat with the other. A woodchuck can get home faster than a gun can shoot. He is round all over except his feet, which are black. When eaten they retain the flavor of their heels, and seem to have been cooked without being pared. A fat woodchuck, when eaten properly, is no laughin' matter. They come under the head of "domestic animals," and think there ain't no place like home when a dog goes for one of 'em.

A daily ration of green food is actually necessary for laying hens. Vegetables, either cooked or raw, are much relished also, and serve in some measure to supply the place of green food. Boiled chopped fine and mixed with their food are exceedingly wholesome, and if not a cure are certainly a preventive of disease in many instances. Growing chickens are even more anxious for green food than laying hens. They crave it, and when necessary to be housed from it on account of inclement weather, it should be provided for them. There is no food so wholesome for them as onions cut up fine.
