EVENING NEWS.

REPORT OF THE CHANCELLOR OF THE UNIVERSITY OF DESERET.

To the Honorable, the Legislative Assembly of the Territory of Utah:

Gentlemen:—In accordance with a usual custom, I have the honor of submitting to you the biennial report of the University of Deseret, covering the period since the last Session of your Honorable Assembly.

It is gratifying to me, that I am able to announce the last two years, a period of uninterrupted prosperity in the affairs of the University, especially in the department of instruction. Two events, however, have transpired within this period, affecting the institution with regret and sorrow.

In the death of Regent and Secretary, Robert L. Campbell, which occurred April, 1874, and of Regent Joseph A. Young, which occurred August, 1875, the University lost two worthy and efficient officers. Their zeal in the cause of education, and their counsel in the deliberations of the Board of Regents for the prosperity of the University, were always marked with prudence and wisdom.

Your Honorable Body will share in sorrow at their loss.

It is prescribed, that permanent and worthy institutions of learning are of slow growth, even in old and well established communities. In view of this fact, we have reason, I believe, for encouragement in the present condition and prospect of our institution. For though its charter dates back to the year 1850, and though the institution in its appointments and courses of study may not be fully up even to all its name implies, yet I can confidently state, it has fully kept pace with the educational demands of the people, and the material development of the Territory.

At present there are provided four regular prescribed courses of study; a preliminary, a scientific, a classical preparatory, and a normal course. The latter course was added at the beginning of the present Academic year, through the influence and exertions of the Territorial Superintendent of Common Schools with the different County Courts in the Territory. The funds, however, obtained through the County Courts, have not been nearly adequate to sustain the department. The object of this course is to give special training to students in the theory and practice of teaching.

Though but few students have pursued any of the courses regularly and to completion, yet all the courses have received an encouraging amount of patronage.

The accompanying tabular view will show concisely the kind and amount of patronage the University received during the Academic years 1873-4, 1874-5 and so much of the present year 1875-6 as has expired up to the present date.

Though we find in this exhibit an encouraging and constantly increasing attendance, and a reasonable advancement towards the higher grades of study, yet it may properly be asked, does the University provide conveniences that its courses of instruction are available to all the cities of the Territory?

To this inquiry, I am prepared to give a favorable reply, so far as the appointments and arrangements of the department of instruction are concerned. The institution has had constantly an extensive patronage from different parts of the Territory.

During the term of ten weeks, just closed, the number of students enrolled was 167; of these 67 reside outside of Salt Lake City and represent seventeen counties of our Territory.

This will denote how widely its patronage is distributed, and to what extent it can justly claim to be styled a bona fida State institution.

A knowledge of English literature, to the extent to which it is carried, is practical at this time in the University; surveying and general mensuration are illustrated by field work with instruments; chemistry is taught to the extent of practical analysis, quantitative and qualitative, of minerals, soils and fluids; botany, geology and zoology are all practically exhibited, and the theory of teaching is applied in actual class work by the student.

This field of useful studies is certainly ample to choose from at the present stage of education in our Territory, and with no compulsion to pursue what to him are useless or distasteful branches the student may easily acquire a competent education, suitable to his wants, at but little cost.

Though the institution has a classical preparatory course, designed to fit students for entering the freshman year of any thorough classical institution, I am not able to speak encouragingly of its patronage.

It is proposed, therefore, soon, either to abandon it, or to place it if possible on a self-sustaining basis. A limited knowledge of the ancient languages, I am convinced, is practically useful, to the extent of giving the student a knowledge of the nature and force of the numerous elements in the English language derived from them. I cannot justify, however, their study beyond this, believing that all necessary mental discipline may be acquired through the channels of practical study.

The nature and form of the instruction given at the University are such, and the character of its patronage is of that kind, that access to a library for reference and information by the professors and students, has seemed to be an imperative necessity. In consideration of this fact, an effort was made by the officers of the institution to establish and open for the use of the students of the University, and the public, a free library and reading room, using for the purpose one of the rooms of the University building.

The scheme was effected and inaugurated on the 19th of October, 1874, when a collection of nearly 2,300 volumes of standard and miscellaneous books, with many of the most popular journals, periodicals and magazines, home and abroad, was made accessible daily to our students and to the public.

The patronage at once seemed encouraging, under the circumstances, for up to the end of the same Academic year, in June following, 1637 volumes had been taken from the shelves and registered as visitors, not to say anything of those who visited the library only for the purpose of reading the newspapers and periodicals, of whom no record was kept.

From the beginning of the present Academic year, in August, 1875, to the present time, January, 1876, 2854 volumes have been given out, which, as before stated, does not include the patronage of newspapers, periodicals, etc., making an aggregate of 4,491 during the twelve months the University has been in session since the first opening of the library in October 1874. I am convinced that the University, by taking this step, has proved a greater public benefactor than ever before, and deserves the support of your liberal provisions. As the University is under the patronage of the Territory, its officers desire that everything possible shall be done for the benefit of its students, who represent almost every district in the Territory. To this end their exertions have been directed. It is believed that whatever is in your power to do, will be done to aid them.

In thus setting before you the progress and present condition of the University, I am convinced that you must believe with me that it is an essential institution to our community, and that its officers, your servants, have spared no pains in carrying out your designs and economizing, to the utmost extent, the provisions you have made for its support.

No institution for higher education has ever been supported by the money patronage of its students. It is a legitimate question therefore, to propound: Do such institutions pay? In considering this enquiry, it is proper to suggest that the importance and profit of an enterprise is not always to be measured by its immediate results of dollars and cents.

Reflection will bring to your minds many appropriations that have been made by your Honorable Body in view only of remote or general results, and that show no immediate return.

Intellectual communities are always the most prosperous. The proper study of science is but making ourselves acquainted with the laws of God; and what, today, is a knowledge of these laws doing for the melioration of mankind and the accumulation of wealth? Aside from this consideration, what would be the direct result, economical and social, of sending even one half of the present patronage of the University to the States, or elsewhere, away from home for an education?

The estimate in dollars and cents, to say nothing of the other losses, will convince the most liberal critic that it is far better policy to educate at home. Let us then have liberal legislation, and provide amply for the intellectual and moral development and training of the youth of our Territory; yet I do not suggest in this, that the Territory educate the people, but simply that it open such channels that they may educate themselves.

The report of the secretary will show the receipts and expenditures, for the last two years, from January 1874 to January 1876, in which it will be observed, the present existing indebtedness amounts to only seven hundred and thirty-two (732) dollars, which could easily be met if all outstanding dues were collected.

There has been increased expense attending the opening of the library, which, with the increased force of the faculty, impels the necessity of asking, for the ensuing two years, 1876 and 1877, a further appropriation of six thousand (6,000) dollars, to be drawn, three thousand (3,000) dollars for each year, as needed.

In regard to University lands, matters remain unchanged from the last report, and again I repeat the suggestion therein, "That your Honorable Body, assign, grant and convey, under such restrictions and regulations as you may see proper, the grants of lands, so far as located, and to be located, to the University, as contemplated by the Act of Congress making the donation."

All of which is respectfully submitted.

DANIEL H. WELLS,
Chancellor.

From New and Rare Medicinal Plants recently discovered in the Rocky Mountains!

PURELY VEGETABLE.

FIFTEEN years of patient botanical research among these mountains and valleys have resulted in the discovery, not only of many new varieties of plants, but of new species, some of which have wonderful medicinal curative properties. By continued experiment their virtues have become known—and thus from attracts of these newly discovered plants are these pills compounded.

If properly used, they will cure very many diseases, some and most of which are especially valuable in DYSPEPSIA, LIVER COMPLAINTS, INDIGESTION, JAUNDICE, and all cases of FEVERS, COLDS, URINARY AND KIDNEY DISEASES, RHEUMATISM, COSTIVENESS, DEBILITY, HARDNESS, MUMPS, MEASLES, for PURIFYING THE BLOOD, and in many other cases, and all cases of BIliousness and DISORDERED STOMACH.

On orders accompanied by the cash or postal order, I will send safely by mail, postpaid, 1 box pills for 25 cents; 1 dozen boxes, $2.00; 1 great bottle, $2.00.
