An Encounter with the Family Stove and Piping.

Putting up a stove is not so difficult in itself. It is the pipe that raises four-fifths of the mischief and all the dust. You may take down a stove with all the care in the world, and have your wife put away the pipe in a secure place, and yet that pipe won't come together again as it was before. You find this out when you are standing on a chair with your arms full of pipe and your mouth full of soot. Your wife is standing on the floor in a position that enables her to see you, the pipe and the chair, and here she gives utterance to those remarks that are calculated to hasten a man into the extremes of insanity. Her dress is pinned over her waist and her hands rest on her hips. She has got one of your hats on her head, and your linen coat on her back and a pair of your rubbers on her feet. There is about five cents worth of pot-black on her nose, and a lot of flour on her chin, and, altogether she is a spectacle that would inspire a dead man with distrust. And while you are up there trying to circumvent the awful contrariness of the pipe, and telling that you know some fool has been mixing it, she stands safely on the floor and bombards you with such domestic mottoes as, "What's the use of swearing so?" "You know no one has touched that pipe." "You aren't any more patience than a child." "Do be careful of that chair." And then she goes off and reappears with an armful of more pipe, and before you are aware of it she has got that pipe so horribly mixed up that it does seem no two pieces are alike.

You join the ends and work them to and fro, and to and fro again, and then you take them apart and look at them. Then you spread one out and jam the other together, and mount them once more. But it is no go. You begin to think the pieces are inspired with life and ache to kick them through the window. But she doesn't lose her patience. She goes around with that awfully exasperating rigging on, with a length of pipe under each arm and a long handled broom in her hand, and says she don't see how it is that some people never have any trouble putting up a stove. Then you miss the hammer. You don't see it anywhere. You stare into the pipe, along the mantel, and down on the stove, and off to the floor. Your wife watches you, and is finally thoughtful enough to inquire what you are looking after, and on learning pulls the article from her pocket. Then you feel as if you could go out of doors and swear a hole twelve feet square through a block of brick buildings, but she merely observes: "Why on earth don't you speak when you want anything, and not stare around like a dummy?" When that part of the pipe that goes through the wall is up, she keeps it up with her broom while you are making the connection, and stares at it with an intensity that is entirely uncalled for. All the while your position is becoming more and more interesting. The pipe don't go together of course. The soot shakes down into your eyes and mouth, the sweat rolls down your face and tickles your chin as it drops off, and it seems as if your arms are slowly, but surely, drawing out of their sockets.

Here your wife comes to the rescue by inquiring if you are going to be all day doing nothing, and if you think her arms are made of cast iron, and then the broom slips off the pipe, and in her endeavor to recover her hold she jabs you under the chin with the handle, and the pipe comes down on your head with its load of fried soot, and then the chair tilts forward enough to discharge your feet, and you come down on the wrong end of that chair with a force that would bankrupt a pile driver. You don't touch that stove again. You leave your wife examining the chair and lamenting its injuries, and go into the kitchen and wash your skinned and bleading hands with yellow soap. Then you go down the street after a man to do the business, and your wife goes over to the neighbors with her chair, and tells them about its injuries, and drains the neighborhood dry of its sympathy long before you get home.—Danbury (Conn.) News.

EASTERN NOTES.

Washington, April 29.—Under detailed instructions from the War Department, four of the five Inspector-Generals are now in the Indian country, or on their way thereto, to inspect the troops, equipments, supplies, depots, and everything pertaining to the military establishment. On their return they will prepare and submit full reports of their tours to the General-in-Chief, to be laid before the Secretary of War; but without waiting the completion of their journeys, they are, whenever circumstances require, to report, especially on any subjects requiring the immediate action of post or department commanders, the General of the Army or Secretary of War, or the Indian Bureau. General Sacest traverses Arizona; General Davis, Nebraska, Wyoming and Utah; General Hardie, Oregon, California and Idaho; and General Schower, Texas and the Indian Territory.—N. Y. Graphic.

In these days of affinities and divorces and such things, it is comforting to know that there are a few people who have tried matrimony and like it. The excellent Illinois woman who was married the other day to her seventh husband evidently believes in this institution, and the Michigan widower who led his ninth bride to the altar answered all the cheap flings at marriage in a mute but glorious fashion. Then here is the Portland minister of eighty-four, who was lately married to a widow of seventy-one, whose testimony is worth a score of arguments and speculations. Really such things tell. The people who decry marriage are generally the unmarried who don't know anything about it, or the mismarried who have got the thorns without the rose.—N. Y. Graphic.

A Norwich (Conn.) newspaper has discovered the reason for the salary steal." Its philosophy of it is that "Congressmen have been living at much greater expense than formerly; and without the slightest good reason; and as the deficiency must be made up in some way, they take pay for one thing and another, for which they ought not, and finally end the roll by stealing from the government." But it says we are all to blame for it, because we have "contributed to it" by our own "costly and miserable ways of living." Naturally enough, the wisdom that gives us such a satisfactory diagnosis flows right on with a remedy. "What is needed," it thinks, "is to correct these false notions of life, to live upon what one has, rather than upon what he has not. Simple and beautiful. In order to be good, it is only necessary to cease to be bad; to prevent theft, have nothing to steal. It's as easy as it is to edit a newspaper.
