SHE WAS TO OBEY.

"Nora."

The girl blushes a bright pink, but does not appear to resent his familiarity.

"Nora," he repeats, taking hold of the little hand in his, "you know already what I would say, do you not, my darling? Nora, I love you; love you more, I think, than ever man loved before. Nora, will you be my wife?"

The blue eyes were raised for one second, and in their misty radiance Jack Dalton read his answer.

"Nora," broke in a voice in tones of measured severity, which made Nora start like a guilty creature, "I have been looking for you everywhere. Nora, Mr. Pontifex has arrived unexpectedly at home and apparently from what I can gather does not wish to meet you first here. So of course you will at once leave and"—

"I do not see why, Gladys," said Nora, but her voice trembled, and her fair face was very white.

"Then allow others to judge of what is right and fitting under the circumstances," said Mrs. Hastings sharply. "I have made your apologies to Mr. Pelham, who quite understands the circumstances. Run quickly and get your cloak."

As the girl goes reluctantly forward Jack Dalton makes a hasty step toward her, but Mrs. Hastings gently detains him.

"Pardon me," she said in a soft voice in which there is a slight ring of pique, "but I cannot but fear you do not quite know the facts about my little sister. If you have been led to think anything from her manner, I am sorry, but it happens so often. Naughty child! She is a sad flirt."

Mrs. Hastings gave a gentle, amused laugh, which died suddenly as her eyes fell on Jack's white, stern face.

"Excuse me," he said in a haughty tone, "but I do not understand what you are endeavoring to convey to me. Why does the advent of this gentleman appear so important to her, and"—

"Ah, it is as I said. You do not understand the facts," laughed Mrs. Hastings. "They are briefly these: Nora is engaged to Mr. Pontifex, has been since the end of the season, and they are to be married in the autumn."

The place seemed to swim round Jack's eyes, but with a firm resolve not to be beaten, he set his teeth hard, and, with absolute composure, surveyed Nora as she returned to her sister's side.

"Is this true?" he demanded, and his voice to himself sounded far away. "Is it true that you are now going to meet your affianced husband?" Nora looked up, startled, into his white, stern face.

"I—I"— she faltered, but her voice broke, and she turned away.

"That is answer sufficient," he returned. "I fully indorse your sister's sentiment, Miss Carew—you are a sad flirt!"

With a harsh laugh he turned away as Nora, white and trembling, followed Mrs. Hastings to their carriage, leaving him standing alone, desolate amid the wealth of flowers and sweet scents, a bitter, broken hearted man.

"I have come for my answer, Nora," said Mr. Pontifex in his calm, measured voice.

Something in his assured confidence made the girl flush with sudden anger.

"By what right do you call me by my name?" she asked passionately, and as her eyes dwelt on his complacent, uninteresting face the girl tells herself she hates him.

"By what right! My dear Nora, surely your future husband may"— He ends abruptly, for Nora's eyes are flashing with unconcealed rage.

"My future husband!" she exclaimed. "Never! By what right have you followed me about, tortured me as the last few months? I never liked you, never said I would marry you. How dare you try to imply that you were ever treated by me with more than ordinary civility?"

"Your sister"— he says, but with some amusement in his assured tones.

"My sister is not me, Mr. Pontifex. She apparently thinks she can dispose of me as she chooses. I claim the right to choose for myself in the most important, holiest act of a woman's life. Mr. Pontifex, I have chosen and may I ask you to be generous enough in the future, when we meet, abstain from remarks over those of ordinary civility."

With a bow a young empress might have given, Nora swept from the room.

She felt choked, suffocating with conflicting emotions.

"Oh, for some air!" she cried, and rushing up her hat she ran from the house down the garden to the downs beyond, where she paused, exhausted, by a large clump of trees.

As she raised her head at a sudden rustling a man came quickly from within the thicket, and Nora confronted Jack Dalton—Haggard, white, haunted, he looked aged by many years from the handsome Jack Dalton of the night before.

He raised his hat mechanically and was passing on, but Nora spoke.

"Mr. Dalton," she said in a trembling voice, which reached Jack's ears.

He raised his eyebrows slightly.

"I am at your service, Miss Carew," he said icily.

Nora looked nervously at him. Would he not help her? No; he was gazing before him with a blank, set expression.

"I—I don't know how to say it," Nora broke out impetuously, "but I heard you were going away today, and—oh, Jack, don't look away from me; listen to me first. I—I was never engaged to him. I never even liked him, but Gladys wanted me to marry him, and—and I cared for no one else. And one day before he came here, when he had worried me out, I said I would give him an answer three months later. The three months aren't up yet, Jack, but he came down yesterday, and I—I told him today that I could never be his wife. Oh, Jack, if you are going away today, say goodby to me kindly, for—I love you, Jack!"

There was an instant's pause, and then, ah, Jack's strong arms were round the little weeping figure, and her wet face was pressed to his.—Forget Me Not.

The Ways of the Opossum.

Just why the great zoologists of the present day should have chosen to consider the opossum an animal of a lower order than the stupid and helpless sloth, and the third order from the lowest of all, is not so easy to understand as it ought to be. As a matter of fact, nature has done a great deal for the opossum—far more than for the great majority of quadrupeds. Note what the creature is, and can do, and match it if you can. It eats almost everything that can be chewed—wild fruit, berries, green corn, insect larvae, eggs, young birds and quadrupeds, soft shelled nuts and certain roots. It is a good climber, and has a very useful prehensile tail. It forages on the ground quite as successfully as any squirrel. It usually burrows under the roots of large trees, where it is impossible for the hunter to dig it out, but sometimes it makes the mistake of choosing a hollow log. When attacked, it often feigns death to throw its assailants off their guard. Like the bear and woodchuck, it stores up a plentiful supply of fat for winter use, when food is scarce, and, above all, the female has a nice, warm pouch in which to carry and protect her helpless young, instead of leaving them in the nest to catch their death of cold or be devoured by some enemy.—W. T. Hornaday in St. Nicholas.

Queer Wills.

A Paris medical journal states that on opening a short time ago the will of a Parisian the following clause was found: "I request that my body be delivered to the Paris Gas company for the purpose of being placed in a retort. I always used my mental powers for the enlightenment of the population at large, and I desire that my body be used to enlighten the people after my death." Squire Hawley of the village of Hatfield, near Doncaster, left the whole of his estate to his groom, on the condition that his funeral should be conducted in a certain way. He died on a Christmas day and was buried in his own garden in the center of the graves of his cattle that had died during the rinderpest. He was laid out in full hunting costume, including spurs and whip, and was carried from the house to the grave on a coffin board, when he was placed in a stone coffin, which, weighing more than a ton, had to be lowered by means of a crane. His pony was shot and buried at his feet in bridle and saddle, and his dog and an old fox were buried at his head.

A Weasel's Hypnotic Power.

A London correspondent writes: A friend on whose word I can rely told me the following. He saw a lark flying above the turnpike road, fluttering some four or five feet above the ground in evident distress. As he looked he saw a weasel in the middle of the road waiting for the bird to come down. This it did, falling helplessly close to the animal, which killed it and carried it away. This incident seems to show that a weasel has some fascination in his eye.

Bicycle Not Cause For Divorce.

The bicycle as a cause of divorce is something new. A male petitioner in a recent New Zealand divorce case had the audacity to urge it. He alleged that his wife was nearly always away from home wheeling about in rational dress and neglecting her domestic duties, and he contended that this amounted to "habitual desertion" within the meaning of the act. The judge, however, was unable to agree with him in this latter contention, and New Zealand married ladies with a fondness for the wheel now breathe more freely.

Wise Precaution.

Maud—Isn't that new process of photographing through solid substances wonderful? How I do wish I could get a photograph of Algy's brain!

Dora—Why, do you think there is anything unique in the matter with his brain?

Maud—No, but I want to be sure he has one, you know.—[illegible]

Tiles

The latest, finest and handsomest; derbies that are expressions of everything a hat should be; in short, everything in hats for spring wear is offered in our stock. Our hats will wear well because they are good, not cheap imitations of a genuine article. Poorly made hats are a counterfeit that can never pass current. We exclude them from our stock. Your hat won't wear seedy this season if bought of us, and this is the great point for hat buyers to consider.

Come and examine our immense stock, for we have made great cash purchases to obtain low cost, therefore small profits on low cost bring low prices and many customers.

A RESOLUTION.

Granting Pioneer Square to the Utah & Pacific Improvement Company for Railroad Depot Purposes.

Whereas, the Corporation of Salt Lake City is desirous of aiding in the construction of a railroad from Salt Lake City to the Pacific Coast at or near Los Angeles, and of a railroad from Salt Lake City to the Deep Creek mining regions, and recognizing that the same would contribute greatly to the prosperity of its citizens and establish grounds for depot purposes for such railroads being necessary, therefore,

Be it resolved by the City Council of Salt Lake City, State of Utah, that all of Block 49, in Plat "A," of Salt Lake City survey, known as Pioneer Square, is hereby granted and donated to the Utah and Pacific Improvement company, its successors and assigns, for railway depot purposes, on the following conditions:

First. The acceptance of said donation in writing, signed by the president and secretary of said company, and filed with the city recorder within thirty days of its date.

Second. The payment of one dollar.

Third. The construction and operation of at least one hundred miles of railroad within this state, on either or both of said lines, within two years from the date hereof and the erection of depots upon said Square.

Fourth. That at the end of every date after the acceptance of the terms of this grant of the Pioneer Square to the Utah and Pacific Improvement Company for railroad terminal purposes, the said company shall have ten miles of their grade under construction. At the end of six months to have 25 miles of road completed. At the end of twelve months to have 50 miles of road completed and under operation. At the end of 18 months to have 75 miles of road completed and in operation. At the end of 24 months to have 100 miles of completed road built and in operation within the State of Utah towards Los Angeles, or from Salt Lake City in a westerly direction towards Deep Creek.

And on acceptance of said donation by the president and secretary of said company, and the payment of said sum of one dollar, the Mayor and City Recorder are hereby authorized and directed to make and execute a proper deed of conveyance of said described premises to said Utah and Pacific Improvement Company, its successors and assigns, and to deliver the same to Hons. Robert N. Baskin and Thomas D. Webber, to be held in escrow by them and upon the performance of the third condition hereinbefore mentioned, to be delivered to them, or their successors or administrators, to the said Utah and Pacific Improvement Company.

And in the event of the failure of said Company to comply with any of the terms and conditions of this resolution the deed hereby conveyed to be returned to the City Recorder of Salt Lake City.

Passed by the City Council of Salt Lake City, State of Utah, March 11, 1896, and referred to the Mayor for his approval.

BYRON GROO, Register.

AN ORDINANCE.

Granting a right of way through certain streets of Salt Lake City for a railroad to the Utah and Pacific Improvement company, its successors and assigns.

Section 1. Be it ordained by the City Council of Salt Lake City: That the Utah and Pacific Improvement Company, its successors and assigns, have the authority and consent of the City Council and permission is hereby granted, to construct and operate, by cable, electric, steam or other motive power, a single track, standard gauge railroad, on the following streets of the said city, to-wit:

Commencing on North Temple Street at a point about [illegible] feet west of the west side of Fourth West Street, running south easterly on about an eighteen degree curve to the center of North West street, thence south to Third South street, thence east on Third South street to Third West street, thence southeasterly into Block [illegible] of Plat "A," Salt Lake City Survey, said block and all of said streets being in Salt Lake City and County, State of Utah, subject to the following conditions, to-wit:

First—That all tracks except curves laid by said grantee, its successors or assigns, shall be in the center of the streets, unless otherwise directed by the City Council, and in such a manner as may be approved by the City Council.

Second—That all of said railway tracks shall be laid upon and conform to the established grade of the several streets upon which the line is laid; and if said grade is afterwards changed by order of the City Council, said grantee, its successors or assigns, shall, at its own expense, change the track to conform to the same, and shall keep the road ballasted with gravel to within one and one-half inch of the top of the rails. Provided, that wherever any of the streets along which the said railway is laid shall be paved, then said grantee, its successors or assigns shall pave between the rails, and for a space of two feet outside of each rail, with the same material as that used in the street so paved.

Third—That said grantee, its successors or assigns, shall grade and maintain in good condition, when paved, at the established grade, the entire width of said streets along which the track runs, subject to the approval of the supervisor of streets. Said improvements to be made within one year after the commencement of the building of said road.

Fourth—Said grantee, its successors or assigns, shall put in and maintain such crossings at each end side of each railroad crossing of streets of Salt Lake City, as shall be from time to time required by the City Council, and shall, without unnecessary delay from said City Council, at once upon construction of their said road, put in and maintain said crossings.

Fifth—That said track shall be laid and the road operated so as to cause no unnecessary impediment to the common and ordinary use of said streets upon which it is laid. And said grantee shall comply with the ordinances of said City Council in the construction of the line and the operation of the same within the limits of said city.

Sixth—The rate of speed at which trains, engines or cars shall be run through said city shall not exceed eight miles per hour. And no train or car shall be run on said railway without a locomotive engine or other motive power attached thereto.

Seventh—Good and sufficient drains to carry water shall be laid and maintained in good condition at the expense of said grantee at all the water ditches crossed by said railway, so as to admit of the free passage of water.

Eighth—If engines, trains or cars are run at night a red light shall be kept on rear end of every train, and a white light shall be placed upon the front of each engine, car or train.

Ninth—The permission and authority hereby granted are upon the further expressed conditions that the said grantee, its successors and assigns, shall and will forever indemnify and hold said Salt Lake City harmless against and from any and all damages, judgments, decrees, costs and expenses which it may suffer or which may be recovered or obtained against it for or on account of any accident or damage that may occur upon said road by reason of the construction or operation thereof, or which may be recovered or obtained against said city for or by reason of the granting of such privileges and authority, or for or by reason of, or growing out of, or resulting from the passage of this ordinance, or any matter or thing connected therewith, or with the exercise by said grantee, its successors or assigns, of any of the privileges and authority herein granted, or from any act of acts done or committed by said grantee, its successors or assigns, under or by virtue of any of the provisions hereof.

And if any judgment for damages for any such loss, injury, inconvenience, accident or injury to persons or property shall be recovered against said city, the attorney thereof, and the judgment therefor shall be final and conclusive as between said city and said grantee, its successors and assigns. Provided said grantee has had notice of the pendency of the suit in which such judgment is recovered and has been given an opportunity to defend the same. And it is expressly provided that upon the recovery of any final judgment or judgments against said city as aforesaid, the said grantee, its successors or assigns, shall immediately and without delay pay the amount of such judgment or judgments to said city, or be liable to pay and shall pay the amount of amounts thereof, with costs, interest and expenses therein incurred to said city; and the fact that said city may not have paid such judgment or judgments, costs, interest and expenses, or any part thereof, shall constitute no defense on the part of said grantee, its successors or assigns, to the immediate payment of the whole thereof to said city.

Tenth—No right whatever shall be acquired by said Utah and Pacific Improvement Company, its successors or assigns, under this ordinance, until it or they shall have complied with all the terms of a resolution of the City Council of said City, approved March 12th, 1896, entitled "A Resolution granting Pioneer Square to the Utah and Pacific Improvement Company for railroad depot purposes."

Sec. 2. That the franchise is granted for the full term of twenty-five years from and after the passage of this ordinance.

Sec. 3. That said grantee, its successors or assigns, shall operate said road by the running of at least one train each way one day and every day after the completion of said road.

Sec. 4. That if the grantee, or its successors and assigns, shall fail to keep and perform all the conditions of this ordinance, or shall fail or refuse to comply with all the laws, regulations and ordinances of Salt Lake City relating to railroads and the running of the same within the city limits, which are now enacted, or which shall hereafter be enacted, then the City Council, after sixty days' notice, and on failure on the part of said grantee to provide a remedy or make satisfactory arrangements therefor, may, by a majority vote, declare the privileges herein granted forfeited, and proceed to take possession of the said road and control the same as if this ordinance had not been passed.

Sec. 5. If this grant with the terms and conditions herein appended, be not accepted in writing by the grantee within thirty days after the passage of this ordinance, the same shall be void and of no effect.

Sec. 6. This ordinance shall take effect from its passage and approval.

Passed by the City Council of Salt Lake City, State of Utah, March 31st, 1896, and referred to the Mayor for his approval.

[SEAL.] DAVID S. EMERY, City Recorder.

Approved this second day of April, A. D. 1896.

JAMES GLENDINNING, Mayor.
