THE GIRLS CAUSED TROUBLE.

The excitement here in the tragedy-explosion density which occurred in Ogden canyon on Wednesday, the 5th, has held an investigation and informed a verdict to the effect that while the tragedy resulted from a premature discharge of powder, the local authorities and all persons from any criminal neglect or intent. This assumes the view which has generally prevailed since the terrible arrestal occurred, for nearly all who knew anything about the matter were ready and willing to believe that any element of criminal negligence had entered into the actual affair. With some knowledge of the men and methods employed in the work in question, the News was unwilling to believe that anything more than possibly one or a few persons' acts of omission or commission could be held to account. Even this latter possibility is now not warranted; the event is terrible enough as it stands without adding to the loss to its darkness.

Perhaps by far the worst thing of the kind on record in Utah. Five men died instantly and five more received fatal injuries that some of them may die, is an awful fate to fall and one whose horror for a time at least must grow rather than diminish. Hands of lamentation will be heard, and for those words of regret are no palliation. Of course generous and as nearly as possible adequate action will be taken; the sufferers must have the best care and attention that can possibly be procured, and the dependencies of the dead and wounded will be overlooked or ignored for. Neither will this in main relieve to those who linger and those who mourn, but it is the best that can be done now and should not be restricted or held back to the slightest. It is a subject calling forth the almost endless pity only from those near at hand, but from all there is whom the ghastly news shall come.

VERY SENSATIONAL INDEED.

A dispatch which appeared in yesterday's NEWS from Mexico had thrown remarks, the elements of which so transcendered are even somewhat beyond the sensational and to the startling side of events. It is reported that President Cleveland has sent a personal note to the Spanish minister at Washington in which he sets in effect that the minister sign his government to take such action as soon as will end the Cuban hostilities, if the United States will intervene. If this report be true, then surely the scientific method has taken on the rigid kind of inevitable to suit the purpose and is as adept in the use of money. It is one of the most startling dispatches that has floated along the wires for a long time. If the report shall, however, prove to be true, we have been nearly treated a real crisis time of long time to last years, and even retrieving the Venezuela incident.

While Spain is in no sense able to cope with or Cuba in an adversary as the United States, it should be borne in mind that sometimes will not always permit itself to be crushed out of the face out actual forces or what it looks upon as or what it considerable. The Spanish government has shown for a long time that it perhaps have entertained a secret animosity for Cuba and have given every sort of aspect a continued antipathy than all the actual causes that have caused doing so usually. As the matter was at a time when would be to see the island annexed, among the possibilities, not only because of the things stated but because German-Spanish administration offers upon the island, which was presumably if the annexation were made, would be to the United States, and consequently if the annexation were made it would be to the United States, and consequently if the annexation were made it would be to the United States, and consequently if the annexation were made it
