ITALY'S DEFICIT.

It Has Swelled to Over Fifteen Million Dollars.

ROME, July 27.—It is announced that the Finance deficit for the year 1890-1 is about 78,000,000 lire, notably exceeding all the estimates. Thirteen thousand men who were, for economical reasons, to have received, at this time, unlimited furloughs, will, for ninety days, not be given them, but retained in the army for the present.

The recent heavy losses in the Vatican have compelled a series of economical measures there also. In response to dispatches from the Italian Bishops of Maryland, Virginia and the archbishop of Columbia, asking the government to take official part in the Chicago Exhibition, it is announced that the government will favor the exhibitors all that is possible, but, as a matter of principle, it cannot take an official part.

The president also regarded, among the means to be taken to prevent gambling, was that of preventing the newspapers from printing advertisements of the Brussels convention, gambling was right. Wesleyans, he said, held it wrong to begin with gambling either in the house of the aristocracy or stock exchange or commercial circles. AN INFERNAL DEED.

The St. Mark Bridge Caused by Somebody Deliberately Altering the Signals.

MOST OF THE VICTIMS WERE WOMEN AND CHILDREN.

A Constant Succession of Heart-rending Scenes in the Town Hall.

By Telegraph to the News.

THE ST. MARK'S COLLISION.

The Accident was Caused by an Unknown Miscreant.

PARIS, July 27.—Ex-Corts states that an investigation into the St. Mande accident has proved the fact that the disaster was caused by an unknown miscreant, who deliberately altered the signals so as to bring the trains into collision. He will be pushed if caught.

The majority of the victims were women and children. The work of rescue proceeded slowly during the night and dawn. People been began to flock to the Hospital Lariboisiere, many seeking friends who had not returned from the fete. By daylight there were 20 corpses laid out in the station, and the school room and town hall, where the bodies were gross, were besieged by distracted people. Inside there was a constant succession of heartrending scenes, as the identification of the shattered and mangled bodies proceeded. Among the injured sent to the hospital a number died immediately after admission and many more are expected to die.

Inquiry into the causes of the accident shows that the second train left Vincennes at regulation intervals of five minutes after the first train. The first train was delayed at St. Mande, owing to the enormous crowds of excursionists. The signal master at Vincennes blocked the advance of the second train for the accident. As the train was starting the station master advised the driver to go slowly, as there was a train in front of him, but the man paid no heed to the advice and went ahead at full speed.

The driver at first alleged that all the signals he passed were "clear," but inquiry confirms the report of the officials at St. Mande and Vincennes that danger signals were shown. The driver now admits that he knew the violation of signals on the part of some one who set the pace for the excursion, thus preventing them from bringing the train to a standstill.

The official statement makes the number of deaths forty-three and the injured 161.

Among the victims are the Marquis and Marquise Moulaberin. An artillery lieutenant climbed to the top of a burning carriage and, after his fall, left with her into the burning cases and neither was seen again. It is reported that a carriage load were passed at the arrest of the driver of the second train and the traffic manager at Vincennes station.

Suspended for One Week.

LONDON, July 27.—In the Commons today Henry John Atkins, member for Boston, was expelled for a week for charging the Speaker with the use of a word in placing on the records that he (Atkins) had fraudulently challenged the accuracy of the division.

When the prisoner vote was under discussion, Parnell claimed that certain members under life sentence, especially John Dillon, should be treated as prisoners or else treated as political prisoners.

Harcourt opposed any relaxation of the sentence upon Dillon, and John Redmond urged that further inquiry into Dalty's case would prove that the prisoner suffered no more than a common convict upon the part of the Irish police agents.

The home secretary replied: "The alleged proof of unknown have already been examined and have been found inventions, consequently the sentence must stand."

Mr. Armour's Vacation.

CHICAGO, July 27.—The Journal this evening, speaking of the incorporation of the Tolleston (Ind.) Yards company says while Mr. Armour has been in Europe, ostensibly on a vacation, he has been in constant communication with the Grand Officials relating to raising the embargo on the American hog.

The Journal asserts that Armour has substantially decided to leave all changes is raised to establish a plant at Tolleston, Ind., which in point of cleanliness cannot be surpassed. He will pay the salary of an inspector to be appointed by the German government, and in order to avoid any danger of contamination will have a steamer in Germany in a special line of steamers. In order to do this, it will be necessary to widen Welland canal or some other communication with the seaboard.

The Journal's informant asserts that the money for such a project would be forthcoming immediately upon the raising of the embargo. It is believed that the report of the inspector sent over by Germany was against the possibility of packers violating the German standpoint, so long as the hog yards remain as they are.

A Prize Fight.

CHICAGO, July 27.—A prize fight for $500 a side, Queensbury rules, between given, took place tonight in Hardy, the crack Brazilian heavy boxer. The contestants were Edward Gorman of Columbus and Billy Dacey, also of St. Louis, late of San Francisco. Gorman was the victor in the fifty-third round, after a struggle that lasted over two hours of the best ever seen here. It is said fully $20,000 changed hands on the result. Gorman weighed 150 and Dacey 155. Gorman fought on the defensive all fled.

In the fourth round he suddenly threw out his left hand barely in advance of Dacey's neck, sending the unfortunate down like a log. Dacey has for years been a sufferer from spinal lameness, this time with his right and down again went Hawkins.

During the succeeding rounds Hawkins fought for Gorman's life and time and, but the latter never gave him, and a clever dodger, and in the ninth round once more got in a smacker on Hawkins' nose.

In the tenth Hawkins got first blood by landing hard on Gorman's nose. From then till the fifteenth the fight was fast and furious, with honors about even.

Both men were bleeding freely and presented a horrible appearance, but Hawkins was beginning to weaken rapidly, and when the fifty-third round began was almost done, while Gorman seemed to freshen. Finally Gorman landed his left hard, laying Hawkins flat and, Hawkins' seconds threw up the sponge.

Places that Have Been Benefitted by Fetlon.

[Toledo Saturday Journal.]

How many people realize that American health resorts are in this country from two to twenty million dollars ahead of those of Europe? Not one in a hundred, we fear, do realize it. Does anybody imagine that they come here to look at our buildings and abroad? No. Upon reflection anybody can fall to see that the main reason why the bulk of them visit us is to see the places made memorable by Shakespeare and Johnson, Scott and Burns, Dickens and Thackeray, George Eliot and Charlotte Bronte, Blackmore and Black. The indirect benefit to our country, in money, therefore, by no means inconsiderable, particularly when it is remembered that it is, for some reason, a hundred times more to the same direction. Shakespeare has indirectly secured millions of pounds on the inhabitants of those places with which his name is associated. Not to mention Stratford-on-Avon, there is for example, Rochester, a town which makes reminiscence of the great humorist and of Dickens. Near Gad's hill stands an inn on the very spot that Shakespeare doubtless had in mind when writing that scene in Henry IV., in which Falstaff meets with the "men in buckram." Round about, as everybody knows, are the hallowed and historic made famous by the course of the Pickwick club. To this neighborhood American pilgrims come in droves, and, as a consequence, after having gone round each bit of Dickens's London as still remains, Scott, even while living, catched while the iron was hot, and, before his death, published, the scenes of the little town honored in the romance "Rob Roy." Shakespeare, say Lockhart, "that the old name of Innerleithen should be, as far as possible, dropped therewith, and that of St. Ronan's substituted. Not were they alone in their surprise. An unbound influx of water laborers forthwith crowded their forces and spread shifts and tents, and, by indefatigable exertions, to disturb worldly every association that had indeed Sir Walter to make. Innerleithen thus became St. Ronan's. Not were they alone who profited by these inventions of the genius for at all scoring to their ancestral inheritance. The traveler reads on the corner of every new edition these Abbotsford Place, Waverley Row, The Mermion Hotel, or some other of the Scott nomenclature. Such was one case in point. The interest in the works of the Northern Magician has, of late years, very much declined, diminished. Abbotsford itself is still so popular a resort that the fees paid by visitors amount to $5,000 a year. Rob Roy's cave is about to as great numbers as of yore. The "Lady of the Lake," "Marmion," or one of the "Scotch novels" to read, taking up long lost ideas, they have long plighted in imagination, with much the same feelings that Colston had when he visited Bristol's grave. "He drank from a glass," says John Morley, "as falling over with enthusiasm upon approaching Chatterton's solid hanged Dick, the Bigg of Dorn, and the scene of Tam o' Shanter's hedging bite." Though the new worship was driven out of him, he had been not of long other and more humble, by the inevitable utilitarian who is pretty sure to be knocking about a place balmed by great deeds to exclaim of some that Dr. Dick, the principle that the punishment should fit the crime, such men ought to have blotting merchants constantly going on in their back garden and be made to turn a treadmill in order to get to bed.

Jim Smith and Pritchard.

LONDON, July 27.—The fight between Jim Smith and Pritchard for $10,000 took place this evening, and Pritchard lost Smith in three minutes.

Smith showed a strong inclination to take punishment and was easily defeated by Pritchard. The fight lasted only ten minutes.

In the first round Smith took a decided lead. He gave Pritchard a heavy blow on the body, drove him all over the ringside floored him twice before time was called. Pritchard then secured lead. In the second round, Pritchard received a surprised change round, Pritchard was spightly, while Smith appeared weak. Pritchard forced the fighting with such effect that Smith showed signs of having enough. Twice the men went down, but at the close of the round Smith was barely able to stand.

The third round was a one-sided affair. Pritchard had it quite his own way and placed his opponent prone and weak on his feet. The display was so far from admirable. Both men tried to settle the affair as quickly as possible.
