IN VIRGINIA.

One Who Remembers the Prophet—Missionary Opportunities.

GOLANSVILLE, Carolina Co., Virginia, Dec. 2, 1895.

To the Editor:

It is not of frequent occurrence that we meet in the far East, those who were in Nauvoo "in yehalayon days." Indeed we find the number growing less each year who saw the Temple, fewer still who shook hands with the Prophet.

But while laboring in Smith county, Va., during the early fall, we we met Brother John Fanning Pitts, who, when a boy, drove team for his uncle from Wythe county, Va., to Nauvoo, making the journey in eight weeks. This was in 1842. A train of fifteen wagons, not all from Virginia, went to Nauvoo, via the Cumberland Gap, Louisville, Ky., (then a small town), Springfield and Carthage, Ill. While in Springfield, they were visited by Governor and Mrs. Ford, at whose house, Bro. Pitts obtained some milk for a sick child in the company. They were courteously treated by the chief executive. The state house was then in the course of construction.

Bro. Pitts described the flood on the Mississippi which extended that spring for miles on the Iowa side and up to the famous stone house on the Nauvoo side. It was on the wharf where he first met and shook hands with Joseph Smith. The description that he gives of the Prophet is that he was tall, finely proportioned, of magnificent carriage and God-like mien; with eyes "wonderous kind," yet able to read the very soul of man. The Prophet was carrying in his arms, Baby Joseph—now the leader of the Reorganized Movement. The Prophet Joseph had kind words for all and after a few commonplace remarks on the flood, left them.

Brother Pitts obtained employment on the Temple and worked there until the south side was up to the square. It was at the juncture that Brother Pitts told us he had often passed this sign, "W. Woodruff, Blacksmith Shop." While in Nauvoo, our narrator often heard the Apostles and other Church dignitaries; among others he mentioned J. M. Grant (who was the first to begin missionary work in this state), Heber C. Kimball, Parley P. Pratt and Brigham Young. But no sermon was so great as the one delivered by the Prophet himself at King Follett's Funeral. According to Bro. Pitts, thousands were in attendance and for hours listened in breathless silence, rapt in wonder and admiration as Joseph, with the eloquence he alone could summon, thundered forth the Gospel truths. History says that sermon was grand, that he spoke "by the Spirit," but a description of it at least would be but "words, words, words." It gave delay to hear how the Prophet was used visiting the sick, riding in his carriage drawn by the beautiful black horses in which O. P. Rockwell as coachman took such pride. The youthful curiosity of Bro. Pitts led him to visit the "mummies," for which he paid Mother Smith 25c. All this and more brought Nauvoo nearer to us than it ever was before; and it made us grateful that we were ministries of those glorious truths for which the founder of Nauvoo gave his life.

Brother Pitts left Nauvoo May 27th, 1844, and returned to his home in Burkes Garden, Va., which, by the way, is one of the prettiest and richest valleys in the state. It was here in Virginia that he first heard and gave heed to the Gospel teachings. It was at the time when Jedediah M. Grant and his brother Joshua traveled through southwestern Virginia and it was on this circuit that the Apostle preached his famous sermon from the "blank" text. Since that day the Gospel has had many preachers in this part of the Lord's vineyard, among whom are remembered Elder George Teasdale, the late lamented Elder John Morgan, and Prof. T. B. Lewis.

We are striving to keep up the work made possible by the valiant men of God who labored here in early days. And now, dear Editor, will you send us your paper? We want it—we need it. In speaking of Utah we intuitively turn to the News, it is our "oasis of the Desert." We are twenty-four strong and more coming.

The fields of labor now assigned the Elders are as follows:
