NEWS OF THE WEST.

Danger of a Conflict Between Colorado Sheepmen and the Farmers.

ELECTRICAL CLOCK INVENTED.

Beaver Democrats Moving.—A Home Blown Down.—Suicide.—Mexican Outlaws Killed.

A young man died of consumption at a sheep camp on Snake river, Oregon, last week, and while being carried out on a horse for shipment to his relatives, the horse and pallet were precipitated into the river and lost.

At Genesee, Washington, on the morning of June 3rd, E. Frank Brigham, brother of ex-State Senator Brigham, while insane, attempted by cutting his throat with a piece of glass bottle. At 4 o'clock in the morning, his wife discovered that he had left his bed, she suspected for what, and found him in the barn with the razor buried. Standing at the window, she saw him repeatedly slowly draw the broken glass across his throat, she being powerless to prevent it.

Although the wind has become rather noticeable at intervals in Oregon during the last week or ten days, in other parts of the country it has barely escaped being felt to its whole, says the Bourse Chronicle. Mr. Hall, a of this city received a letter from his sister, Mrs. Richardson, formerly of this place, but who now resides on a Rabbit valley, about Day 1st, in which she states that their newly erected brick house has been blown down by a terrific wind storm. On the night of the storm, the house was occupied by Mr. Richardson, and her children, one of whom is a boy, and her father-in-law, the boy's grandfather being gone to the county seat. Mr. Richardson, after unbolting timber, succeeded in getting the unfortunate children from under the debris of brick and mortar with which their cots were covered, all bruised very badly and the baby was supposed to be dead, but, happy to say, it was not, as it revived in a short time. Mr. Hewett, who was an eyewitness, says the effects that he witnessed in a wind-storm in Oregon further illustrated by five or six bricks.

The Democrats of Beaver are after the scalps of the postmaster and postmaster at that place, and in the case of the former seem to have specially good grounds for taking action. They are, in fact, so called by the schoolmaster who, when called at a recent meeting held there, at which a number of resolutions were adopted, one of them being as follows: Whereas, the present incumbent, C. C. Woolhouse Sr., is not in sympathy, politically, with the party in power, and is acting as deputy postmaster and has so acted for about four years, whereas, the principal of said office has practically abandoned and vacated the office by absenting himself from said office for more than four years, and has not been personal supervision of the said office, nor he he visited the said office for about four years, therefore,

Be it resolved, by the Democrats of Beaver precinct, in a general mass meeting assembled, that we protest against the continuance in office of the present incumbent, either the principal or deputy.

A Grand Junction, Colorado, dispatch says: There is trouble brewing in the plateau country. The farmers and ranchmen who have taken up land and made their homes there are complaining loudly and bitterly of the sheepmen, who have come into their hitherto peaceful community. The ranchmen say that they have at their to meet all the stock the valley can stand and all there is range for. They have no difficulty in obtaining all the feed their stock needed until the sheepmen came in and overrun the valley. The men in charge are all heavily armed with revolvers and rifles, and are sold to care nothing for the rights of others, in pushing their flocks in every part of the country. Thirty-three thousand head of sheep are pastured in this little valley and are eating the range down so close that the cattle are suffering. The sheep not only overrun the range, but are destroying the shrubs of the mountain and running wild on their property. The ranchmen have started the idea that it would take but little to start a conflict which would just be bloodless. Both parties are exporting Hand and parties are prepared when it comes. If it comes at all it will be silent, sharp and decisive.

After nine years' hard labor, E. T. Evans, a jeweler of Golden, Colorado, has invented a clock which has electricity for its motive power. It is said to be the only actual electric clock that has ever been produced with electricity for a motive power. It has neither weight nor spring, but consists only of three wheels, a pendulum, two electro-magnets and a battery. Unlike any other clock, the motive power is not transmitted to the train, but to the pendulum, and only enough power is required to overcome the inertia of the pendulum. The two electro-magnets are arranged similar to a motor. In starting a pendulum connection brings on one side, and at a certain angle is automatically cut off again, the pendulum swinging back by its own gravity, and as it passes the center of gravity, it makes a connection on the other side, and when it reaches the same angle the current is cut off. The time of motion at each swing of the pendulum is just long enough to give sufficient force to overcome the last motion. One cell which makes the revolution every minute, and by a very simple device this wheel is connected with the minute wheels. The advantages in this clock are that it never needs winding, but will run as long as the battery lasts, which is from twelve to twenty-four months.

Advices were received from Mazatlan, Mexico, today, under date of May 22nd, giving the details of the killing of two more of the gang of bandits which attacked the house of Onofre Hanna, in Rosario, killing him and wounding two others, on May 10th. Seven of the gang of twenty have been disposed of, four by shooting and three by capture. At the seventh the prefect of Rosario, with a posse of citizens, was closely following the gang. One of the men who was killed on the afternoon of May 19th in the village of Cosalacha. He was the two remaining robbers fled and fired upon their pursuers without wounding them. They finally ran to cover and a sharp fusillade began. An attempt to kill or capture the bandits moving rurifles, one of the police, Eusebio Morales, made a break for another building from which to get a cross fire on the outlaws. The latter put a bullet into the officer's body and he dropped in range of the marksmen's fire. Though prostrate, Morales quickly kept on shooting and made things so warm for the bandit that he failed to notice the other officer, who managed to reach a spot where he could get a shot at the bandit, and he fell like a log. The body was taken to Rosario. On the evening of the same day the prefect and officer came upon one of the bandits while he was in the act of robbing a woman, whom he had just stripped. The woman wounded and the robber was stripping her of everything valuable. When the officer rushed up the bandit turned and attempted to make a bolt as suddenly that the latter had no time to draw his revolver. The attacked and killed near the body of the woman with the officer continued to reach his gun. In the greatest hurry he had left his bed from somewhere else brought by a stone after bringing his gun to bear and killing he survived. Both bandits after a short legal inquiry, were buried in the pauper grave. Residents of the neighboring town of Agua Caliente are convinced that the bandits are the same who robbed the Chinese store a few weeks ago.
