TWO BRITISH AXIOMS

The Channel Ships Not Be Bridged and Egypt Not Evacuated.

ENGLAND NOT AFRAID OF EUROPE

But Her Rulers Have Any Fears for Russia for Her Self-Conversation Robinson's Opinion.

NEW YORK, APRIL 2.—Appeared in the Herald from Paris regarding the European position of the Herald (this is the following signed statement from M. Hanotaux:

"There are two things to which England will never consent. The construction of a bridge over the channel and the evacuation of Egypt. Mr. Chamberlain-Salisbury, have at the Jubilee mansion's party exactly one year to do in London. We are prepared to allow no more explanations only the means of making these friends with the continent of Europe, for the main which we are our "friends" and on the "allies" of the continent, and we make no Russia in itself that it feels in our relations.

"Only for British government, for the moment, the question of the Egyptian question, France and Russia are two powers, which, in a general which is nothing to a case to which is the sovereignty of Egypt, particularly at the moment of French, Russian, Italian, Austrian and Turkish, in Europe, which, I believe, Germany, will not, I believe, Germany, will not, I believe, Germany, will not
