LONDON.

THE LARGEST CITY THAT EVER EXISTED.

Americans are charged with a tendency to exaggeration of expression in describing anything or in giving vent to their feelings and opinions. But there is no danger of committing this error in describing London. One may use the strongest adjectives and intensest verbs with safety, and strictly within bounds of naked truth. It is safe to affirm that it is the largest city in the world, or, for that matter, that ever was in the world. It contains more inhabitants, and more houses, and more miles of street, than any other city of ancient or modern times. And it is far the wealthiest city that ever existed. London is to the modern what Rome was to the ancient world, in respect to population and wealth. But Rome, in her palmiest days, was a poor city in comparison with London. The 3,500,000 of souls which compose the population of London need never do another day's work for wages. They have capital enough invested in bonds and stocks, in domestic and foreign securities, and money at interest, and income from real estate and railroad earnings, and other sources from which they derive dividends, comfortably to subsist, the entire population, to purchase them food, clothing, fuel, drinks, furniture, literature, make all repairs of their habitations, pay all their taxes and assessments, and, in short, defray all their household expenses and personal outlays, to the aggregate total of what they now expend in cost of living.

All the productive labor performed by the people of London adds itself to their capital. London is in the condition of a family whose income, in the shape of dividends on stocks and bonds, exceeds the cost of their style of living, and who may, therefore, go out of business and live on that income without trenching on a dollar of the capital of the family. Of what other great city can this be said?

But the property of London is not owned and held in common, or in equal portions. One man has a hundred times more than he needs, and a hundred men have less than they need. London has some thousands of citizens worth tens of millions each, and also has 100,000 citizens in the poor house. But the great mass of the people are prosperous and in comfortable circumstances, tens of thousands of them worth tens of thousands each.

The leisure class—those living on fixed incomes and regular dividends on investments—are very numerous, numbering tens of thousands. Their only business is to amuse themselves and fight ennui. Their lives are a continual picnic. They are habitues of the club, patronize the turf, keep fast horses, support establishments, ramble about the island, roam over Europe, and make excursions up the Nile and to the Holy Land and the "farther Ind." London is the headquarters of the landed aristocracy of the three kingdoms, who are in receipt of rents aggregating nearly a thousand millions of dollars per annum. The absent Irish landlords may here be found during the "season," flourishing like "green bay trees." Here is concentrated the banking wealth of the empire. Here is held the bulk of the bonds representing the national debt, and a large part of the national, state and municipal debts of the world. Here are owned a majority of the railway stocks and bonds of Great Britain and the colonies, including 2,100,000,000 invested in the India railway system, besides vast sums in railway stocks and bonds of other countries, the United States included. Here is the grand depot of the tea, coffee, sugar, spice, and drug commerce of Great Britain. Here are held the largest stocks of woolens, silk, leather, and even cotton goods, in the Empire. Great as is the shipping of Liverpool, it is not nearly equal to that of London, for here is the focus of the shipping trade of Great Britain and the East and West Indies, China and Japan, the Mediterranean, and most of Africa. The greater part of the exports of California and Russia, and the beef, wool, and gold of Australia, come up the Thames to London for a market. The chief part of commerce carried on with France, Spain, Italy, Germany, Scandinavia, Russia, and, indeed, all Europe, is transacted in London. It is the headquarters of the exchanges of the world, and its quotations fix the value, in a great measure, of all the raw and manufactured products of all nations, and go far to determine the current value of the stocks and bonds, of every kind, of other lands. London is the world's clearing house, its largest warehouse, its biggest bank.

Looking at London geographically, it is difficult to convey an accurate conception of the space it covers, and, indeed, it is hard to describe in any respect, for it is the elephant among cities. On the clearest day, from the highest point of observation the whole city cannot be seen, but beyond the range of vision are streets and thousands upon thousands of houses. Taking Charing Cross as a centre, its suburbs cannot be reached in any direction in less than eight or ten miles, and in some not in twice that distance. The Thames runs twenty-five miles through the city. If London were put down in Cook county, it would reach along the shores of the lake from Evanston to the Calumet, and spread out far beyond the Des Plaines river. On this space is concentrated a population equaling that of the States of Illinois and Wisconsin, or, according to the census of 1873, that of the cities of New York, Brooklyn, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Cincinnati, St. Louis, New Orleans and Chicago, all combined. But, immense as is the population of London, it has not ceased to grow. On the contrary, it never added so many people to its numbers as during the last decade. The Board of Public Works report that 148,320 buildings were erected between 1861 and 1871. The addition was but little less than the whole population of New York.

VICTORY! VICTORY!! THE WILSON Sewing MACHINE TAKES Five Medals AT THE WORLD'S FAIR at VIENNA.

Three separate dispatches from Vienna combine to dispel all doubt as to what sewing machine has won the first honors of the great Exposition. The first was a special to the New York press on Monday, and was as follows:

VIENNA, August 15, 1873.

The Wilson shuttle sewing machine was awarded the grand prize at the Vienna Exposition for being the best sewing machine. RAYNOR.

The second was the regular American Press report, compiled from a long special to the New York Herald, in which the "Wilson Sewing Machine of Cleveland, Ohio," was named as among the exhibitors which received "gold medals for merit," the highest class of premiums awarded at the Exposition.

The third was a private cable telegram received yesterday from Vienna by Mr. Wilson himself, which was as follows:

VIENNA, August 19.

You have received two medals—one for merit and three co-operatives.

The meaning of this is then explained to be that the Wilson Machine has received the gold medal as the best sewing machine, and a second gold medal as the machine best manufactured—that is, embodying the best mechanical workmanship. Besides these, a special medal was given for excellence of workmanship on the machine another for the best sewing on leather, done by the Wilson, and the other medal for best samples of family sewing and embroidery, done on the Wilson machine.

This makes the fourth medal that only has the Wilson Sewing Machine been pronounced the most capable and efficient sewing machine in the world, but its work on both dry goods and leather, is pronounced superior to that of all other machines. This verdict is a World's Fair verdict, all the leading sewing machines of both continents have competed before a thoroughly competent committee for more than three months, is the most complete triumph ever won by a sewing machine.

ZION'S CO-OPERATIVE MERCANTILE INSTITUTION

IS DOING THE LARGEST BUSINESS ever carried on in the Territory of Utah, arising from a uniform system of dealing principally with manufacturers of standard goods, buying in immense quantities and selling on the closest margins.

The largest part of their purchases for the

Wholesale and the Retail

Dry Goods Department

Are made through their New York office, from whence all fluctuations in the Foreign and Home Markets are closely watched.

The Institution is complete in all its various departments, and fresh novelties are added to the stock as fast as they are offered in the market. Visitors are shown through the buildings without the slightest importunity to purchase.

The gentlemen in charge of the several departments are among the most widely and favorably known in the Rocky Mountains, and we commend them to the confidence of the public, promising that no effort on their part shall be wanting to ensure a continuance of its patronage.

They are enabled not only to suit the tastes of an intelligent trade, but also to compete successfully with Eastern dealers. In fact, no country merchant can afford to pass by this city under the impression that Eastern markets will give him lower prices, better stock or more favorable terms. Their

Grocery, Hardware and Drug Departments

For completeness and variety of stock have never been equalled west of New York, and merchants in the neighboring settlements and Territories cannot do better than replenish their stock from this source. Their

Clothing Department

Is now opening its magnificent fall and winter purchases, among which is the most varied assortment of Gentlemen's Furnishing Goods ever brought to Utah. Since merchant tailoring has been added to and made a specialty in this department, that branch of the Institution's trade has attained a perfection never arrived at by any similar house in the Territory. Foreign and domestic fabrics of every style and price are made to order or sold in piece.

The Shoe Factory Department

Keeps thirty hands constantly employed on all classes of work, and has never failed to secure the Prize Medals at our Territorial fairs. Their facilities for turning out first class work have never been equalled by any similar establishment in the Territories. Gentlemen and Ladies visiting the city would do well to leave their measure with that Department, thus enabling them to order by mail at any time they desire a perfect fit.

Among the Specialties of this Department are those of Horse Collars, and supplying the trade with Leather and Findings, a large and complete stock of which will always be found in their establishment.

The Institution deals in every class of merchandise, and all persons, however remote from business or manufacturing centres, can have their orders promptly filled by mailing them to
