General Graham has been asked to have the objectionable inscription removed, and it he does not do so by next Monday, an appeal will be taken to the secretary of war.

MORE EVIDENCE.

Durrant's Movements on the Day Blanche Lamont was Murdered.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 22.—The trial of Theodore Durrant will be resumed today after a delay of nearly a week caused by the illness of Judge Murphy.

The prosecution accepted the delay as an opportunity to take up the thread of several minor stories dropped by the counsel to pursue more vitally important issues. Absolutely nothing has been left undone to make the evidence against the accused conclusive.

Charles L. Hedemarkt and his wife were visited again by the prosecution and repeated the recital of the story they related soon after Durrant's arrest. The story, so little thought of at the time, has gained significant interest in the last few days, particularly in relation to an important statement made by the police. Captain Lees and his detectives have said that they will show beyond the power of contradiction the movements of Durrant during every hour of the day on which Blanche Lamont disappeared.

It is believed that they have a witness who saw Durrant near the church between 5 and 7 o'clock on the evening of April 4. The dramatic story told by Hedemark and his wife is in the main followed. In the shadows of the church they saw a man moving from place to place. As the darkness of night deepened they saw him in the calcimine of the deserted place, joined in his terrible work by the light of a candle.

At first the moving light behind the great church window made them think the church was on fire, but closer watching quieted their fears, and they concluded that someone was repairing the sanctuary. They had no suspicion that they were watching the last grewsome detail of a horrible crime.

The man whose shadow they saw was holding the ussefy record of his crime. He was busy among the coffers of the steeple, gazing now and again down upon the body of the girl whose life he had taken. Subsequent events give an intense interest to the part which Hedemark and his wife played.

That is one reason why they have again told their story to the prosecution. Every detail was invented. It was shortly before 7 o'clock that Mrs. Hedemark called her husband's attention to the light in the church window. She is able now to recall the event for several reasons. April 3 was her sister's birthday and Mrs. Hedemark had paid her a visit on that day. She had returned to her home somewhat late and was sitting with her husband in the dining room when her attention was drawn to Emmanuel church.

The Hedemarks live directly opposite the church. Between their home and the Bartlett street church there is no obstruction.

Mrs. Hedemark saw the moving light in the church at dusk. She thought it strange, and, watching it for a moment, called her husband to the window. Together they traced the badness in the church windows. The man was in the gallery of the church. Now and again he would stop and the light would flicker. He moved slowly from that part of the gallery into which the door from the vestibule opens towards the door to the belfry. When he had slowly made the journey sinking at the foot of the tower he was suddenly dark, passed. Mrs. Hedemark waited for a few moments, and then left her station at the window. She and her husband had seen the light in the shadow of a murderer but thought they were looking at the reflection of some workman in the church.

Whether or not Hedemark or his wife will be summoned by the prosecution remains to be seen. With their testimony possesses a singular charmlair interest. It tells nothing of the identity of the murderer. Whatever other witnesses might tell, Hedemark and his wife would say nothing on that score. They did not even see the light in too early.

FRUGHT FOR DEATH.

Battle Between a Suicide and Three Policemen.

CHICAGO, Aug. —Patrick Gilligan, a railroad man, was tired of life, and in seeking death by drowning, came near robbing Chicago of three guardians of the peace. Gilligan, who had been without work for some time, and became despondent, went to the sixty-seventh pier, and after careful preparation, jumped into the lake. Policemen Thomas Hanley, who had observed the man's movements, tried to pull Gilligan out with a pike pole, with Gilligan resisting. Hanley being reinforced by two other policemen, Spaunn and Rafferty, the three launched a small fisherman's yawl and attempted to rescue Gilligan in that way. The waves were running very high, and the officers had great difficulty to get the drowning man. When they finally succeeded in his side there was a fight, in which the boat was upset and the three officers were soon struggling in the water to save themselves. Gilligan went shortly after being rescued. His efforts at self-destruction had filled his lungs with water which choked him to death.

The Iron Trade.

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—The Iron Age says of the iron and metal trades that it looks as though the enormous wire industry of this country will soon be entirely controlled by a series of associations closely affiliated with one another.

So far as raw material is concerned, the central west is again on the upward drive. There have been heavy sales of Bessemer pig for delivery during the remainder of the year and for the first quarter of next year. The leading Cuyahoga furnaces and two large Ohio steel works have been the most conspicuous buyers.

Rolled billets are firm and display an upward tendency.

Chicago records sales of 30,000 tons of steel rails this week, and it is understood that six 15,000 ton lots are under negotiations. Some car orders are coming up in the same territory, and a pretty large tonnage of bars is being placed.

In the East the trade is less inclined to operate with cyclone vigor. It is not it may be jocky said that there is a distinct lull, which some welcome as affording a second breathing spell, while others use it as a pretext for gloomy forebodings. The great majority, however, are inclined to believe in a further advance.

On foundry men the principal event is the collapse of the effort to secure an advance of 50 cents a ton on pig iron freights on Southern iron to Ohio river points.

Copper is very firm. This week the total of American copper resold on European accounts has arrived from Liverpool.

And Notes Concerning the People, Weather and Crops.

After the usual opening exercises the Bishops of the various wards gave in their reports, which showed that the Saints were improving spiritually as well as temporarily. As a general rule the health of the people in the two valleys is remarkably good.

The speakers all through the conference spoke on topics of immediate interest to the Saints, and addressing them for a little longer than usual on their everyday duties, for it imposes upon their minds the necessity of observing the Word of Wisdom, the paying of their tithes and offerings so that the tent could be rated for and all relatives legislated to the worship of God.

Harvesting is being carried on as rapidly as possible, but owing to the severe frosts this summer the crops are not as great as we would fond them in more favorable seasons, the potato crops is nearly a failure this season.

Some of the Saints were disappointed in not seeing some of the First Presidency of the Church on the stand, but it was announced that arrangements had been made for them to visit the Star Valley in the near future.
