CARVING A STEER.

What Becomes of a Beef Animal After It Is Dressed.

The New York World furnishes some useful information about the prices of beef and the methods of cutting up a steer in that city. A wholesale meat dealer, Mr. Davis, was interviewed as follows:

A wholesaler is a person who buys beef by the carcass and sells it in quarters or quantities of 30 to 60 pounds to restaurants, hotels, steamships or other large consumers.

Such beef as I handle will weigh 800 pounds—that is, two sides will weigh 400 pounds each. This is dressed beef, all of which is cut up and sold. There is no waste. The fat and bones are sold. Such extras as you see on the butchers' stalls, as brains, tongues, liver, tripe, oxtails, etc., do not come to us as dressed beef. These are special lines handled by special men.

There is a steer (and Mr. Davis printed through the glass door of a refrigerator as big as a small house) that weighed 800 pounds when laid on these scales today. I paid 9 cents a pound for it. Don't believe those 11 and 12 cent stories, for they are not true. I handled it here, must pay my men to cut it up and deliver it and all that. What will I get for what cost me $72? Keep your eye on your diagram and follow me closely.

The rump will weigh 40 pounds, for which I will get 10 cents a pound, or $4; the round, immediately below it, will weigh 80 pounds, at 12½ cents, or $7.50; the sirloin, 50 pounds, at an average of 14 cents, for steers are at least three cents of sirloin; it depends upon the butcher—that makes $11.20; the porterhouse is a steer of 800 pounds will weigh 60 pounds, and 20 cents is the market price, or $12.

Next comes what we butchers call the eye of the rib and what is known on bills of fare as prime rib roast. There will be 100 pounds of this at 15 cents, or $15. Next is the chuck, really a fine portion of the carcass, but a sufferer through its name. There are 60 pounds of this, and it brings today 10 cents, or $6. Immediately adjoining it is the neck, 80 pounds, much of which is sold as chuck. The price is 4 cents, or $1.60.

Below the neck comes the lean flesh that is called in the slaughter houses the "hanging piece," and in butcher shops the "brisket." It is good boiling beef, but is much in demand for corning. There are 50 pounds of it at 6½ cents a pound, or $3.25.

The section marked "ribs, plate and navel" is the cheapest meat on the steer. It is for corning and soup meat particularly, will weigh 80 pounds, and sells at 4½ cents, or $3.40. The shoulder piece, beneath which lies part of the brisket, is sold with the skin and is generally called soup meat. It will weigh 55 pounds, and sells at 4½ cents, or $2.48.

The flanks weigh 35 pounds and are mostly fat, selling in their entirety at 6 cents, or $2.10. The hind legs yield 55 pounds of meat at 4½ cents, or $1.58.

I have now accounted for 715 pounds of meat. The remaining 85 pounds is fat and bones. At least ten pounds of fat is thrown in with orders, people having learned to expect it, and 75 pounds a pound for fat and 25 cents per hundred for bones will yield $2.80 at the outside.

The total receipts from the steer that cost me $72 will be $73.26, a profit of only $1.26, or would be a profit if I ran a business that entailed no expenses whatever.

I am not a slaughterer now, but I know enough of the business to know that the slaughterer loses nothing. A steer goes into an abattoir on the hoof, and every ounce of him goes out a commercial commodity. A 1,200 pound steer will net 600 pounds of beef. The hide is sold to the tanners. A limited number of tails go to dealers in ox tails, and special dealers buy the tongues, and in Chicago go to the canners of "lunch tongues." There is a limited demand for brains. All livers find a ready sale, and the lining of the paunch, known as tripe, is growing in such favor that it is all disposed of to dealers, who pickle it.

From the pure fat is extracted the highest quality of oleo oil. This is generally exported to Holland, where it enters into the makeup of the gilt edged Dutch butter that commands fancy prices in England. From other fats come the lower grades of oleo oil. From selected bones is secured by boiling gelatin, which is the basis of all cheap jellies and marmalades. Shearing, used as a base of chewing gum and for many other purposes, is the product left from the process of pressing out oleo oil.

All hoofs are boiled, and the valuable commodity known as neatsfoot oil is secured. The horns are sold to manufacturers of combs and fancy goods. The hoofs after boiling are also used in the making of horn ornaments. Everything that is left—blood, carcass, etc.—is made into fertilizing material, not the least valuable commodity turned out of the abattoir. I have no positive figures, but believe that the 800 pounds of "offal," the term used as applying to everything except the actual beef, will net the killer from $40 to $75. The wholesale slaughterer does not get any of the wool of it at any stage of the game.

On the Country Road.

The horsepower corn harvester and the machine hooker bid fair to solve the problem of utilizing the stalks in our great western cornfields.

Prairie Farmer tells that a large number of farmers in the central portion of Minnesota have been experimenting to a moderate way with winter rye, with success in nearly every case.

Experiments at the Utah station make it appear that in vineyard irrigation subirrigation gives more fruit per vine than surface irrigation.

laid 151 eggs in six months. They are not so much desired by market men as many other breeds, owing to the dark color of the meat and bone. The race is likewise somewhat delicate when young, and hard to rear, but when 6 or 8 months old they seem to have become quite hardy.
