SUNDAY SERVICES.

Elders Lorenzo Snow, Rudger Clawson and Smith Akin are the speakers at the Tabernacle.

The usual services of the Tabernacle Sunday afternoon were presided over by President of the Stake Angus M. Cannon.

Choir sang the hymn:

Great God attend while Zion sings
The joyful train thy presence springs.

Prayer was offered by Elder Wm. B. Preston.

Choir further sang:

Glory to God on high
Let earth and heaven reply
Praise ye the name.

Elder Charles Larsen a returned missionary from the Society Islands was the first speaker. He said he considered it a great privilege to be at home again mingling with the Saints in Zion. For over three years he had been privileged to labor as a missionary in the Society Islands, which field was made up of four conferences in one of which—the lower Tuamotu archipelago—he had labored during the whole time of his mission. Here he had found a kind, hospitable people, a people who would do anything in their power for the missionaries who travel in their midst. They are a people who are of a roving disposition and live from island to island, making their living by diving for pearl oysters, and making robes from the cocoanut, which is found more in great abundance. These products they trade with the Europeans for clothing and other food which is not found there.

The speaker said that during his experience among the natives of those islands, he had fared well, and while his food had been largely that of rice and cocoanut, he had taken it with a relish, and with the blessings of God, had been enabled to perform his duties with joy and rejoicing. The Elders while laboring among the natives travel generally in small boats, and the traders are a class who operate these boats, are very considerate and obliging to the missionaries and allow them to travel from place to place at only a nominal charge. Twelve to fifteen meetings a week are held on the islands and the Saints there are in a fair condition of prosperity as compared with some of the other inhabitants. They are fast adopting European customs and are growing readily in the scale of intelligence. In conclusion Elder Larsen spoke in the Tahitian tongue, carrying to the Saints assembled an account of his missionary labors, the interpretation of which was given by Elder Thomas L. Woodbury.

Elder Thomas L. Woodbury who had also returned from the Society Islands was the next speaker. He felt highly privileged to find himself at home among his brethren and sisters once again. While away from home he had learned that the Gospel work was one of divinity—a knowledge which he did not have when he left to perform the duty which called him away. At home he had attended meetings quite regularly but still he did not realize fully the position which some day he would be called to fill. The speaker while away had highly enjoyed his labors among the natives, and through the blessings of God he and his brethren had been enabled to organize Sunday schools in different parts of the islands, where the native children were now being taught the principles of life and salvation. A number of hymns had also been arranged in the native tongue and the children and their parents now sang them in their different gatherings. By request Elder Woodbury sang one of the hymns arranged in the native tongue, and closed his remarks by bearing his testimony to the truth of the Gospel, he knew that it was of God for he had proved it. The speaker then gave the Lord's prayer in the Tahitian tongue, as learned and spoken by the natives.

Elder Heber J. Grant in addressing the congregation said that it was ever a joy to him to meet with the Latter-day Saints and to listen to the testimonies of the brethren who had been laboring as missionaries in foreign lands. The speaker had never heard the testimony of a returned Elder but felt that Elder had testified to the success of him in him while away from home. These testimonies had made manifest in going from their homes to preach the Gospel to the citizens of the earth and as sacrifice brings forth the blessings of heaven, God had been with His servants and had poured out His blessings upon them. The speaker said he felt that the joys of an Elder in the mission field were simply a foretaste of that heavenly bliss which would come to all who would strive to live righteous and upright lives before God.

Elder John Henry Smith was the concluding speaker. He said he had been highly instructed and edified in listening to the testimonies and experiences of the young Elders who had been laboring in the nations of the earth. The circumstances under which they were placed in were so diverse from those which surrounded their fathers lives that it looked like a task for a young Elder to plunge himself into them, and were it not for the blessings of God that were poured out upon them, the chances are that they would have shrunk from their labors and failed to be the performance of them. But the Father was at the helm of His work and He was liberal in bestowing His blessings upon those who would serve Him and do His bidding. The Latter-day Saints should be the best people upon the earth. They were continually blessed of the Lord and had every opportunity offered them to improve themselves and become pure and holy in His sight. In concluding Elder Smith admonished the Saints to be alive to the duties and obligations resting upon them that they might lead without in every act that they were Saints of the Most High, and as such were trying to patterns after the example set them by our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

Choir sang the anthem:

Let the nations shout for joy, after which the choir and congregation sang the Doxology, and benediction was pronounced by Elder Henry F. Richards.

Death of Jesse Hawkes.

On Sunday evening, Jesse, the twelve-year-old son of Elder Heber Hawkes and wife of the Fifth ward, this city, departed this life after an illness of about three weeks. The cause of death was typhoid fever, which latterly developed into inflammation of the bowels, a condition which caused the little fellow much pain and suffering. Jesse was the grandson of Elder Jesse West and while the main ward, was a lovable boy and gave promise of a brilliant future career has he been spared to longer sojourn upon the earth. He died in a sad and sudden blow to the family and they have the sympathy of a host of friends in their bereavement. Two other children in the family are sick, but their recovery is hopefully looked for.

Present Your Warrants.

The city treasurer is now prepared to pay city warrants up to the number 14,403. Parties holding these warrants should present them at once and receive their equivalent in cash.

Agricultural College Notes.

The second week finds 115 students enrolled, about twenty in the sub-freshman department, the others in regular college classes.

There is a much larger proportion of old students back than in previous years; most of the incomers are from the sub-freshman class; there are thirty-five sophomores from last year's freshman class.

The new names on the roster of instructors and assistants are Zauner, Foster, Cannon, Robinson, Dunning, Merrill, besides a few who stand for laboratories.

Painting and repairing give the campus a trim of premier liveliness. The new blacksmith shop are going forward rapidly. Chimneys, roofs, windows, and outbuildings destroyed by the recent hurricane are being lightly replaced.

The new director of experiments, Professor Foster, finishes half of that end of the college work this year. The station is one of the most telling factors where the graduates, first or the professors are now busy making up lots of boxes, for exchange purposes to be purchased by the $15,000 recently appropriated for the station. Houses are looking up the most approved apparatus of which to expend the $5,000 appropriated for that purpose.

President Tanner has settled in the college handsomely and so has Professor Robinson. Professor Foster will occupy the latter house, formerly used as residence of the president, as soon as his family comes from Belmont. Professors Shepard and Foster are domiciled with Professor Cutler. Professor Mae Nesse has moved into one of Bessie Poole's houses. Professor Fortier lives in the house recently occupied by Lieut. Sigel. Professor Jensen is "housekeeping," with his mother and sisters. Mr. B. Simon dwells in the college dormitory, presided over by Mrs. Tanner.

Lafayette Tadlock.

I would like to have the address of Lafayette Tadlock if it is possible to get it. I knew him at Soda Springs, Idaho, and at Ogden, Utah, in the winter 1889, and should like very much to hear from him. He, I think, was an Elder in the Mormon Church.

Respectfully,
MRS. A. S. MASON,
(Nee Gurlock).

Why Is It.

It cannot be a good reason, as some claim, that proprietary medicines are chances of life and disease to the suffering? Cancer is a chronic affection, but nothing but a local remedy is a change of climate will cure it. Ely's Cream Balm is so efficient as to sweep away with the necessity of having home and friends, causing instant relief and a real cure of catarrh.
