CONFERENCE VISITORS.

I BELIEVE that the Citizens of the Territory could afford to pay a commission for my day to examine into the merit of articles offered, thus preventing the palming off of inferior articles on the market, and the consequent loss of thousands of dollars, to be repeated semi-annually by making a few changes in names in the market. When this time comes I, the Undersigned, Editor and Sole American Sewing Machines will take a front rank for simplicity of construction, durability and darning! Until then, I will guarantee, and be learned to operate them free of charge if buying one.

GREAT BRITAIN.

The Queen's Message.

LONDON, 29.—In the House of Commons the Secretary of War, Gathorne Hardy, said it was necessary to call out the first class of the army reserve, numbering 14,000, and the militia reserve, which was between 25,000 and 30,000, and that the Queen's message to that effect would be presented probably on Monday. This would be followed by a proclamation calling out such a number of the reserve force as might be required. Hardy pointed out that this is not an embodiment of the militia, which would not take place until it was necessary to send the regulars abroad.

Lord Derby's Resignation Regretted.

LONDON, 29.—The House of Lords was very crowded this afternoon. Many members of the lower house were present. Lord Derby entered soon after 5 and took a seat below the gangway instead of on the ministerial bench. He read his resignation and announced his resignation as Secretary of Foreign Affairs, which, he said, had been accepted by the Queen, and he only continued to hold office until the appointment of his successor. He regretted that under the circumstances it would not be justifiable for him to follow the customary course of explaining, in detail, the difference which led him to resign. The cabinet had arrived at certain conclusions of a grave and important character, in which he was not able to concur. To prevent needless alarm, he would say he did not consider these measures as necessarily tending to bring about war. He gave the cabinet credit for sincerely desiring European peace, but he could not regard the measures which have been resolved upon as prudent in the interests of peace or necessary for the safety of the country. When the concurrence of parliament is asked for the measures of which he had spoken, he would vindicate his opinion. He would state, however, that he did not dissent from the cabinet's view of the conditions upon which Europe might go into the congress. He lamented the obstacles of the meeting of the congress, but the fault did not rest with the government of this country.

Lord Beaconsfield said that he would willingly refrain from noticing the reasons which had influenced Lord Derby to resign until a period when those reasons might be legitimately considered by the house. So much mischief might occur from unnecessary mystery that it was his duty to say that in consequence of the belief of government that the congress would not be held, and that the hopes of rectifying the disturbed balance of power in the Mediterranean had ceased, it was the duty of the ministers to consider what step should be taken to prevent the impending mischief. They had therefore advised Her Majesty to avail herself of the services of her reserve forces. A message to that effect would be laid before Parliament.

Lord Beaconsfield deeply deplored that he would not have the support of Lord Derby when he submitted the measures on which the cabinet had resolved. He had felt of late that the political ties between Lord Derby and himself must soon terminate, but he had believed that it would be in a very different and more natural manner, namely, that he (Lord Beaconsfield) would disappear from the scene while Lord Derby would remain to take a leading part in public affairs. He was sustained at the present moment by the confidence that the policy government recommended to Her Majesty would tend to the maintenance of her empire, the freedom of Europe and the greatness and security of the country.

The opposition, in the absence of definite information, abstained from raising any discussion for the present.

The Royal Message and the Eastern Difficulty.

At the evening sitting of the House of Commons, the Marquis of Hartington pointed out that as on Monday the House was to receive the royal message, which must indicate that the situation was either one in which war was imminent, or at least the crisis was one of extreme gravity, the eastern correspondence should contain not only communications between Russia and England, but communications showing the opinions of the other great powers.

Sir Stafford Northcote stated that the papers submitted would give full information as to the correspondence with all the powers. He would postpone consideration of budget until April 8th, so as to enable the House to discuss the royal message on April 4th. Government felt that the time had arrived when they should take a decided step. They also felt, in view of the recent event which, in a great measure had set aside the force of the treaties under which Turkey had hitherto been governed, that it was perfectly right and proper there should be a fresh examination of the question. Government did not object to the treaty of San Stefano being taken as a basis for the new arrangement. They had not attempted to stand on any question of form, but only desired a full and fair discussion. They regretted the efforts to bring it about had not been more satisfactory; but, having resulted as they have, government was obliged to consider the position of the country as one of the great Powers, having an interest in the European settlement, and obliged also to consider the peculiar interests, and whether it should be by means of a conference or in any other way endeavor to maintain them, he asked to be excused from entering into details as to the course government might feel it their duty to adopt.

Gladstone deprecated the attempt of the Chancellor of the Exchequer to vindicate the government before the production of the correspondence. He hoped the correspondence would satisfactorily explain why England was main responsible for the failure of the congress.

The Last Day.

A Belgrade dispatch says: To-morrow is the last day for the Servians to retire within the treaty boundaries, but the troops as yet have received no orders to that effect.

The British Fleet.

A Constantinople special says: It is thought that Safvet Pasha will request England to withdraw her fleet, as Russia and Turkey are now allies.

Russia's Attitude.

The Times, in a leading article, says: Russia has adopted an utterly indefensible attitude, and unless she withdraws, it may be necessary for us to be prepared to fully assert our rights.

Orders for Troop Ships.

A special from Portsmouth says: Orders have been received at the dock yard for the immediate preparation of all the troop ships belonging to both the Indian and Imperial Governments, except the Simoon, and assistance for transportation, in the event of an emergency, of an expeditionary army corps. Rumors to this effect have been for some time current, but orders, now positive and definite, have been issued with the concurrence of controller of the navy.

A Private Conference.

A telegram from Constantinople says: On Wednesday the Grand Duke Nicholas and the Sultan, and Vefik and Safvet Pashas had a private conference, which lasted three hours.

Russian Troops Ordered to Return.

A Bucharest dispatch says: It is stated that two divisions of Russian cavalry have been ordered to return to Roumania from Bergaria immediately, to occupy a strategical line from Sinaia to Predeal.

Steamer Purchased for a Troop Ship.

The admiralty have purchased the large mail steamer Menatua, building on the Tyne, for a troop ship.

Servian Troops to Occupy Sophia.

In consequence of the request of the Russian headquarters, the Servian cabinet, after a council to-day, ordered 80 battalions of Servian troops to provisionally occupy Sophia, the Russian troops there having been ordered to join the army before Constantinople.

RUSSIA.

Gortschakoff's Reply.

ST. PETERSBURG, 29.—The Agence Russe says: The version of Gortschakoff's reply, which appeared on Thursday morning, is wholly inaccurate. Russia does not maintain the right of vetoing the discussion of the terms of the treaty outside of European jurisdiction. Gortschakoff has maintained throughout for each member of the congress absolute liberty to discuss every clause, and also perfect freedom of opinion and decision.

Not Surprised.

Lord Derby's resignation has caused no surprise in official circles in St. Petersburg, where it was expected.

FRANCE.

Ignatieff Interviewed on the Present Situation.

PARIS, 29.—A correspondent at Vienna has had an interview with Ignatieff, who has not despaired of the meeting of congress. The General said that England, by entering the Sea of Marmora in violation of the treaty of 1856, had placed herself in a difficult position, out of which she was endeavoring to extricate herself in such a manner as would save her amour propre. She consequently puts forward unacceptable demands, but the Russians will stay before Constantinople so long as the British fleet remains in the Sea of Marmora. Ignatieff has authorized the contradiction of the report in the New York journals respecting his journey to Vienna. He says he has had no conversation with any correspondent of a New York journal.

AUSTRIA.

Ignatieff's Interview with Andressy.

VIENNA, 29.—It is reported that Gen. Ignatieff's first interview with Count Andressy has yielded satisfactory results to Gen. Ignatieff, who, in conversation to-day, said that Count Andressy would leave nothing standing of the San Stefano treaty. It is stated that the attempt has been resumed in Vienna to find a middle course in regard to the congress, as a compromise between England and Russia.

FAMILY RECORDS

WE ARE NOW PREPARED to receive orders for FAMILY RECORDS of an approved form.

Each book is divided into four forms.

The first form is that of a

Family Record,

With ruled and printed spaces for births, marriages, and deaths, in each family, also for names, dates and places, one page accommodating one family.

The second form is a

Church Record,

With spaces for blessings, baptisms, confirmations, ordinations, endowments, and patriarchal blessings and various particulars of the same.

The third form is a

Sealing Record,

With spaces for name of person sealed, birth, death, time, place, etc.

The fourth form is a

Baptism for the Dead Record,

With spaces for names, dates, birth, death, baptism, confirmation, etc.

Each book is furnished with a title page, on which the person owning the record can enter his or her name. An explanation of the forms, or instructions how to keep the record, is also printed in each book, and its pages are numbered.

These Records are well printed and ruled on good ledger paper substantially bound in full sheep, English roan, or Back. We can furnish them of any size, from one to five quires or larger, but probably five quires is as large as will be desired. We can also furnish the various forms in a record, proportioned to each other to order.
