SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE For CATARRH

A purely vegetable distillation entirely unlike all other remedies.

IN the properties of this remarkable remedy every herb, plant, and root is subjected to distillation, whereby the essential medical principles are obtained in pure, concentrated form, thus giving results in the shape of inert, valueless, and totally useless for use in an organism so delicate as the nasal passages, 1 ounce of the concentrated fluid equal to 40 ounces of woody fibre; all tinctures, saturated solutions.

SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE

is a local and constitutional remedy, and is applied to the nasal passages by inhalation; thus affording immediate relief, as does a gun, spreading, cleansing, and purifying the secretions. Immediately admissible to the most delicate organs of vision; heals the raw mucous membrane, and neutralizes the acid poison that has found its way into the stomach and throat, causing the disease, and producing results in both directions, and it does not seem possible for human ingenuity to devise a more rational treatment.

SURPRISING CURE.

Gentlemen,—About twelve years ago, while travelling with Father Kemp's Old Folks Concert Troupe of a hundred voices, I was seized with a cold that was laid up at Newark, N. J. This cold brought on a severe attack of Catarrh, which I battled with every known remedy for four weeks without avail, and was finally obliged to give up a most desirable position and return home, unable to sing a note. My physician advised me to go South for a year, or all. The first attack of Catarrh had left my nasal organ and throat so sensitive that the slightest cold would fasten on it, producing a severe cough and irritation. In this way I continued to suffer. The fifth attack, the several days I was at home, I suffered the most excruciating pain in my head, was so hoarse as to be scarcely able to speak, and could not sleep for days and nights. I was confined in this distressing condition, I commenced the use of SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE FOR CATARRH, very reluctantly, I confess, for I had tried all the advertised remedies without benefit. The first dose of the Radical Cure gave me the greatest relief. It is hardly possible for one who has not suffered as I have, who can scarcely articulate distinctly on account of the choking accumulations in his throat, to realize how much relief I obtained from the first application of SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE. Under its influence, both internal and external, I rapidly recovered, and by an occasional use of the remedy since, have been entirely free from Catarrh, for the first time in twelve years.

Respectfully yours, GEO. W. HOLBROOK.

WALTHAM, MASS., Jan. 8, 1876.

P. S.—I purchased the RADICAL CURE of GEO. H. ROGERS, Druggist, Stanford Building.

Each package contains Dr. Sanford's Improved Inhaling Tube, and full directions for use in all cases. Price, $1.00. For sale by all Wholesale and Retail Druggists throughout the United States and Canada.

COLLINS' VOLTAIC PLASTER

An Electro-Galvanic Battery combined with a highly Medicated Plaster containing the choicest medicinal Gums and Balsams known to modern Pharmacy.

These Plasters have now been before the public for two years, and, notwithstanding the immense number of remedies in the form of Plasters, Ointments, Pain-drivers, and ordinary plasters, they have steadily increased in sale and still with universal success, as evidenced by over one thousand unsolicited testimonials in our possession. Many regular physicians use them in their families, in preference to any other plaster, and it does not seem possible for human ingenuity to devise a more rational treatment.

Have it if you have to send to us for it.

Sold by all Wholesale and Retail Druggists throughout the United States and Canada, and by WARD & POTTER, Proprietors, Boston, Mass.

The Last Siege of Gibraltar.

The most memorable, in some respects of all the fourteen sieges to which Gibraltar has been subjected was the last, called the "great siege," one of the mighty struggles of history, which began in the year 1779. The famous General Elliott was commander of the fortress. Spain, in alliance with France and Morocco endeavored to surprise Gibraltar, but a Swedish ship gave Elliott the alarm. The garrison comprised but five companies of artillery, and the whole force was less than five thousand five hundred men. The enemy's force was fourteen thousand. The siege began by the blockading of the port, and a camp was formed at San Roque with the design of starving out the garrison. When the English Governor resolved to open fire upon his besiegers a lady in the garrison fired the first shot. Never did a siege of war rage more furiously than did this for more than three years. The garrison was often reduced to scanty rations for food; "a goose was worth a guinea," and Elliott tried upon himself the experiment of living upon four ounces of rice a day for a week. Exciting stories are told of the privateers that ran in amid terrible dangers, with provisions, and of the storms which threw welcome wood and cork within the reach of the besieged. The rock at one time would surely have been taken, had it not been for Admiral Rodney, who sailing off the strait, captured a small fleet of Spanish war ships and merchantmen, and cleaning the strait, of besiegers, brought his prizes into port. But all danger was not yet averted, Gibraltar was again blockaded; scurvy broke out in the garrison and Morocco refused her harbors to English ships. The enemy kept closer and closer to the fortress, but relief coming every now and then enabled the English still to hold out. The bombardments were fearful to endure. "The city was almost destroyed; scarcely a house habitable, and those left standing pierced by shot and shell." At one time the desperate garrison fell to plundering the town; Elliott shot the leaders in this outrage. The long agony, full of terrific combats and frightful privations, ended by the final abandonment of the siege early in 1783. If in that year the English had to make up their minds that they must let go their American colonies, they had at least the consolation that Gibraltar was still there.—George M. Towle in Harper's Magazine.

About How High Do You Rank Sir?

I was one of President Lincoln's guard stationed at the time at the Soldier's home, the President's summer residence. Sometime I think in the summer of 1864, the outbuildings of the Harewood Hospital took fire, and as it was in plain sight of our camp, some of our boys ran down to render any assistance they could. It was on the Sabbath, and Mr. Stanton being at home, also went down to help put out the fire. When he got there he helped form a couple of lines of men, passing the empty pail down one side and filled with water up the other, to throw on the fire. He himself was in the line working like a hero. Observing a lieutenant that was stationed to do guard duty, standing with his hands in his pockets. The Secretary said to him, "Lieutenant, fall in, and help us to put out the fire!" The lieutenant replied (not knowing the Secretary of War), "About how high do you rank, sir?" "Well, I don't know," said Mr. Stanton, "about how high do you rank?" "I am second lieutenant of —— company," answered the lieutenant. Mr. Stanton replied, "Sir, I am Secretary of War, and if you don't fall in, I will reduce you to the ranks." Well, that lieutenant dropped several inches below his shirt collar and picked up the pail in double quick time.—Pittsburg Telegraph.

SHORT AND SHARP.

Burlington Hawkeye. In the bright lexicon of American youth there is no such word as fail. A man merely becomes embarrassed and compromises with his creditors for thirty cents.

A photographer presented a revolver at the head of a gentleman who was sitting for his photograph with the cheering remark: "My reputation as an artist is at stake. If you don't look smiling I'll blow your brains out." He smiled.

The phonograph may bottle up the voice and pass it down to future ages; but the smile that twists the face of a man as he seeks solitude and gazes upon his name in print for the first time will always have to be guessed at.

"I suppose you miss your husband very much," he remarked to the charming relict. "Miss him! Of course I do. He was very useful in attending to the fire, winding up the clock, and turning out the gas."

A needle left in a night shirt may bring a man to a recognition of his wife's goodness in mending the garment, but he will, as a rule, insist that he would have noticed the repairs if she hadn't directed his attention to them in such a pointed manner.

In a MS. found in 869, and now in the Escurial, Madrid, it is distinctly stated that "Peter (el Calvo) was chosen chief of the apostles, and gifted with the keys of heaven for the following reason: That he alone, of all the apostles, had endured in this world the punishment of purgatory, in so far as he was married, and suffered the pains of Gehenna in having his mother-in-law living in his house. Peter was the only one of the apostles who was bald—hence his nickname, 'el Calvo.'"

An Englishman hunting in Algeria had a native for a guide, and found himself late in the afternoon in a desolate spot and entirely out of provisions. The native suggested that he should shoot a monkey and broil it over the camp fire. "What does monkey taste like? Is it good to eat?" said the hunter. "Well," said the native in the most natural tone, "it tastes very much like man, but is not so juicy." The Englishman at once struck out for home, with his guide well in front of him, and never took his eyes off him until they reached a civilized place where food was plentiful.
