NEWS OF THE WEST.

Glenwood Springs Officers Have a Lively Time With Tramps.

IT PRISON WHEN HIS BABY DIES.

Suit on County Warrants—Jumped Over Board—Deal in Southern California.

On Sunday the temperature at Los Angeles, Cal., was only 56 degrees in the shade. At San Diego it was 58 degrees.

The subject of the discussion at the Lookeyby Saints' meeting in Salt Draw, Ariz., on Sunday night was "Joe Revelation is Not Apocalyptic."

The jail part of the Whatcom county, Wash., courthouse has been used for racing, as twenty the cells and hallways that it has been necessary to remove the prisoners for safe keeping.

The late Ariel Irwin completely gutted the Fox on grass shop on the Von Schmidt farm near Santa Ana, in San Luis Obispo county, Cal., it is estimated that the damage to the outfit will exceed $10,000.

For two weeks and Santa Barbara, Cal., has been enjoying an invasion of thousands of yellow and black bees with brilliant red tails, known as the New Orleans hangers. These superstitious are a terror in California.

Jim M. Odom, for many years a prominent citizen of Fort Worth, Ariz., has mysteriously disappeared. It is thought he has been murdered for his roll without a wrill. It was found in two suffering from a sudden aberration with which he was ill not long before.

J. Jacobson, a Swedes Fine, leaped overboard from the steamship Pedro on Saturday afternoon between Point Conception and Cape Mendocino, Cal., and was lost. The ship was stopped and circled about for an hour, but without being able to pick up the unfortunate.

Saturday night was a wild one for the police force and a sorry one for the people living near the city jail in Glenwood Springs, Colo. The crowd of tramps that were thrown in began the most unearthly yells ever heard, and they tried to break down the door that separated them from injuring the town. Finally the police turned a hose on the crowd, but this did not improve matters, and not until the hose became disjointed and were on the point of throwing some of the tramps out the latter quiet. How long the war was.

James Cullum, a teamster, left the San Francisco city prison Monday morning a very perfect man. While he slumbered behind the bars awaiting trial on a charge of disturbing the peace his baby daughter died. The father, whose general reputation for honesty and sobriety is excellent, was nearly distracted when the news was whispered to him between the bars by another little daughter, a child of six. Judge Conlan, before whom Cullum was made acquainted with the facts and at once drove to the prison in his buggy. He had a few minutes conversation with the prisoner, Cullum, and then allowed him to go on his own recognizance.

James Cullum, the old gentleman who was traveling on his way from Milwaukee to California, and who was obliged to leave the train at Laramie, Wyo., a week ago Sunday, died Monday night at about 8 o'clock. When he reached Cheyenne he felt a pain in his leg, and it became so severe by the time that he reached Laramie, that he was obliged to leave the train. Blood poisoning set in and on Friday it was decided to amputate the leg with the hope of saving the man's life. He continued in quite a low condition until the time of his death. The deceased was 68 years of age, and was a veteran of the late civil war, having enlisted in the 24th Wisconsin Volunteers in 1862 and served three years.

Suit was commenced in the United States court at Cheyenne, Saturday by Mr. Sweet D. Caley of Philadelphia against Natrona county. The entire action relates to over $4,000 worth of Natrona county warrants owned by the plaintiff, who claims that the county treasurer is diverting county money to other purposes when it should be used in paying these warrants. The suit will test the constitutionality of an act of the Wyoming legislature of 1895. Up to that time it was provided by the laws of Wyoming that county funds should be used in paying county warrants in the order of their presentation for payment. In 1895 the legislature provided for the issuance of certificates of indebtedness for current expenses and made the certificates first charges on all money collected by the county during the year of their issuance. This, the plaintiff claims, is in conflict with the Constitution of the United States in so far as it relates to warrants issued prior to the passage of the act.

The San Francisco Chronicle has the following account of the Latter-day saint services in San Francisco on Sunday last: President Henry S. Tanner of the California Mission of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints discoursed in Pythian Castle hall sight upon the "Latter-day Glories of the Book of Mormon." He touched briefly upon the publication of the first edition of the book in the spring of 1830, and "Prophet Joseph," he said, "was little was known of its value of a great civilization throughout the Americas. Many theories of the origin of the Indians were in circulation, yet none were able to intelligently answer the question as to whence they came. This book gave an account of a great and powerful people once inhabiting this country. It contained the story of their migration from the Old World and the history of their doings on this continent for 1,000 years. In accordance with its prophecies there are two distinct races of the American Indian, one of which leads the norm of civilization, the other those of barbarism. The Book of Mormon is to bind together what the Bible is to the Eastern World, a record of the dealings of God with His people, and evidences now being obtained in rock monuments will unmistakably give a greater proof of its authenticity."
