The barber took to his heels and Lee followed, but was caught and arrested by Officers Pratt and Pickett. When Lee was taken to the City Hall, the police started to empty his pockets before putting him in jail. He fought, kicked and struggled, shouting "Me likee die!" as rapidly as he could, evidently preferring death to giving up his valuables. These were placed in safekeeping, however, and the disconsolate Chinaman was lodged in jail to await trial.

When the halls of Congress come to be used for slugging matches, it is time the session should be adjourned.

CORRESPONDENCE.

A YOUNG LADY DIES OF DIPTHERIA.

MOUNT PLEASANT,
August 4th, 1886.

Editor Deseret News:

Louisa B. Madson, daughter of Andrew and Johannah Madsen departed this life on the 1st inst., another victim to that dread disease, diptheria, making in all 20 since its first appearance here last winter.

Sister Madson was born in this place Aug. 10th. 1861; was a faithful Latter-day Saint and a kind of affectionate nature and highly beloved and respected by all who knew her. The entire community sympathize with the family in their affliction.

Your Brother,
C. N. LUND.

THE June number of the Political Science Quarterly opens with a defense of Andrew Jackson, by Prof. Morse, Amherst College. W. A. Dunning gives a scholarly resume of the Constitutional questions which arose during the Civil War. Hon. W. L. Scruggs pleads for certain reforms in our law of citizenship. Dr. Seligman gives an interesting account of the Christian Socialists of England. H. H. Neill defends the recent decision of the Supreme Court in the Legal Tender question against Bancroft's criticism. The last two articles deal with foreign questions—Prof. Burgess on the victory of the Norwegian Parliament over the King, and Dr. Bowen on recent history of Egypt.

"BABYHOOD" in its August issue, introduces a department of "Nursery Observations," consisting of short extracts from its large and varied correspondence describing special traits of children. It says: "Such a complication of the observations of parents, representing as it will a great variety of circumstances and surroundings, should, we believe, be useful for the purpose of comparisons, since comparison is the most helpful way of solving many questions, great and small, which arise in the minds of parents who are interested in knowing whether certain individualities are usual or peculiar. While making no pretensions to scientific acolevement, such a record cannot fail in time to have a scientific value." The other departments of this number are unusually entertaining and instructive. One of the most important articles is "Diarrhœa from a Hygienic Standpoint," by Dr. H. D. Unapin. Other medical authorities discuss "The Baby in its Carriage," "Sea Bathing for Children," and "Water Filters." Marion Harland writes on "Old Wives' Fables," and Mrs. Lucy White Palmer on "The Coming Guest."

WHAT CONGRESS HAS ACCOMPLISHED THIS SESSION.

Of 12300 Measures Introduced about 1000 Became Laws.

WASHINGTON, C.—The first session of the Forty-ninth Congress, which ended to-day, began on Monday, December 7th, 1885, and covered a period of seven months and twenty-eight days, or 241 days, exclusive of Sundays. Of this time the Senate was in session 164 days and the House 185 days. During that time there were introduced in the two Houses 13,202 measures, of which 10,014 were House bills and 214 House joint resolutions, 2801 bills and 83 joint resolutions of the Senate. The measures proposed for enactment into laws exceed in number by 2949 those introduced at the first session of the Forty-eighth Congress, which set for seven months and four days, or 185 days of actual working time. They covered all sorts of subjects. From the payment of the laborers at the Capitol for extra services, to the complex question of tariff legislation and legislation with respect to National finance. Of the entire number, comparatively few were of what may be termed National importance. The greater number were measures of a private nature or of merely local importance, such as relief and pension bills, bills for the erection of public buildings, for bridging rivers, for granting right of way to railroads through military or Indian reservations, for the removal of political disabilities, for changing judicial districts, for establishing new Land-Offices, for changing names or locations, for increasing the capital stock of National Banks, for printing public documents, etc., etc.

A very small percentage of the whole number of bills introduced, of either general or a private nature, became laws.

A comparatively small number succeeded in getting through the committees to which they were refered, and touching the calendars of their respective Houses. Some secured passage in the House in which they originated, but failed of action in the other branch, and a very large number still remain unconsidered by committees to which they were referred.

The total number of measures that passed both houses was 1,101, being 241 Senate bills and 860 bills which originated in the House. Of this total, 806 became laws with the President's approval, 181 became laws by limitation, the President failing to either approve or disapprove them within the ten days after they were presented to him.

113 WERE VETOED,

and one failed by reason of the adjournment without action by the President.

Of new laws 746 were House measures and 241 Senate measures. The laws that became such by limitation were, with two exceptions, private pension and relief bills. The exceptions were the bills to authorize the Kansas City, Fort Scott & Gulf Railway to construct a road through the Indian Nation, and that to retire Lieutenant Randall.

Of the measures vetoed by the President, 36 were Senate bills and 77 bills of the House. Twenty-eight of the Senate bills vetoed were private pension bills, three were for the erection of public buildings (at Dayton, Ohio, Sioux City, Iowa, and Zanesville, Ohio,) one was to grant to railroads the right of way through the Indian reservation in Northern Montana, one to make Springfield, Massachusetts, a port of delivery, one to provide that the bodies of paupers, criminals and strangers dying within the District of Columbia unclaimed within a specified time after death, shall be turned over to medical colleges, and one to quiet the title to settlers on the Des Moines River lands, and one to provide for the construction of a bridge over Lake Champlain.

Of the House bills disapproved by the President, 74 were private pension bills, and three for the erection of public buildings. The proposed public buildings were for Asheville, North Carolina; Duluth, Minnesota, and Springfield, Mo.

The number of measures vetoed during the session were four more than have been vetoed from the foundation of the Government to the beginning of the session just closed. While nearly all of the vetoed bills of the Senate were reported back from the committees with the recommendation that they pass notwithstanding the President's objection, and while similar action was taken on some of the House bills, only one, that granting a pension to Jacob Romesier, was passed by the two houses over the veto. The Des Moines river bill passed the Senate over the veto, but failed to receive the requisite two-thirds vote in the House. The motion to pass the bills to grant a pension Mary Anderson and Andrew J. Wilson over the President's veto were defeated in the House. The consideration of the other veto messages has been postponed to the next session.

The measures of importance that have been enacted into laws during the session in addition to the consular appropropriation bills, are as follows:
