CATARRH

Of Ten Years' Duration. The Discharges Thick, Bloody, and of Foul Odor. Senses of Smell and Taste Wholly Gone. Entirely Cured by

SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE.

MESSRS. Weeks & Potter: Gentlemen—I feel compelled to acknowledge to you the great benefit SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE has been to me. For ten years I have been afflicted with this loathsome disease, and especially in the winter time has it been most severe. The discharge has been thick and foul, emitting a foul odor so bad that my presence in a room with others was very offensive to them. One week after commencing using of SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE I was not troubled with it at all. Myself and family consider it the best medicine we have in our family for catarrh, and my general health is much improved. Very truly yours,

MELBOURNE H. FORD, Mem. Mass. Writer.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH., Nov. 2, 1878.

LATER.

Gentlemen: The package of SANFORD'S CURE arrived here to-night all right. I don't know what I should have done if I had not been for this remedy. I have tried Nasal Douches and everything else, and thought I have been able to stop the disease discharge, but have not been able to recover the sense of taste and smell until I tried SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE. Send me your one dollar's worth, as soon as you can, and I will cheerfully inform them in detail as to the benefit the remedy has been to me. Yours truly,

MELBOURNE H. FORD.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH., Nov. 26, 1878.

SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE

Physicians have now to use as the scientific physician is to the horse-doctor.

Opening Scenes in Congress. The Architects of their Country's History at Its Altars. How they Look. Prior Records and Political Vicissitudes of Recent Campaigns. Honorables Sayler, Cox, Garfield, Butler, Foster, Hill, Lamar, Cameron, etc., etc. Senator Blaine Secures the Initiative. Presidential Aspirants. The Chinese Embassy in the Diplomatic Gallery of the Senate.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 24, 1878.

Everybody in Washington got up this morning with the recollection that it was the day for Congress to meet, and everybody's wife and daughter looked at the leaden sky, threatening protoxyd of hydrogen in some shape or other, with a regret that it would be perilous to wear her best hat. Still she wore it, trusting to luck and her umbrella. There are certain days on which feminine Washington literally inundates the Capitol. They are the first day of Congress, the last day, and the intermediate days on which great lions are killed to roar. I have seen it crowded for Andrew Johnston, Sumner, Morton, Conkling, Thurman, Verheen, Hill, Blaine, Butler, and, sometimes, when grave charges or crises give very little men fictitious prominence, as when Patterson, of South Carolina, defended his vote for the admission of M. C. Butler. But, usually, when the ladies and the third estate are in the gallery, you may know that something will say something that will find its way into at least four thousand American journals, and may be will be cabled, after reduction to three sentences, across the Atlantic. Pity that the cable tariff cannot be placed on all oratory, then would be saved of what Hamlet calls "words, words, words."

By 11 o'clock, the galleries of the House were densely crowded, and the adjoining lobbies and stairways were filled with a disappointed throng who had come too late, or without sufficient influence to get a seat. I imagine they manage things better in the capital of the Utopian Republic. There the galleries of the capital are Res publica, and the lady from Oregon has equal rights with the lady from the district to a seat from which she may look down upon the great(?) men, but courtesy gives the preference to the lady from a distance, and a judicious distribution of tickets prevents the crowding out of those who have come from afar, with a patriotic desire to see the architects of history at work, by residents who can go to the capital any day, and select this day simply for its attraction of a crowd.

By half-past 11, nearly all the members were in the hall, and this is how they appeared to your correspondent who, like any other Christian, sees men and masses through the distorting lenses of his prejudices. Whitthorne of the naval committee, sat alone, thinking seriously, I imagine, of the not distant day when his bete noir, ex-secretary, Geo. M. Robeson, will occupy a seat on the republican side of the House. Hon. Sam. Cox has shaved his chin, but he still resembles, in one respect, those old Norwegians whose ideal of happiness was to fight all day and drink all night. Milton Sayler, of Ohio, I thought, had a defeated air; he came in for a large share of hand shaking, congratulations,(?) I suppose, and assurances that he should have a cabinet position, a foreign mission, or a port collectorship after 1880, when Thurman shall be made President. Alex. Stephens wheeled himself into the arena just before prayers, but he was not received with his usual warmth by democratic members. His independent course since the adjournment has not endeared him to those who hold that political success can be obtained only through party discipline. The venerable Georgian has gained two pounds since his last appearance, and now weighs 87. He appeared to-day in a new chair, with a high back. Gen. Butler was not seen until after prayers. Garfield has not changed a hair. Waddell, of North Carolina, and Foster, of Ohio, wear their recent defeat with the grace of men who expect another chance, or that they will be remembered when their respective parties come into power. Many members had their desks decorated with bouquets, and the Speakers' stand was adorned with a pyramid of rare flowers.

When the large clock in the hall indicated, to the second, 12 o'clock m., the Speaker's gavel fell, and most of the members rising to their feet, the sonorous voice of the chaplain was heard in prayer. After this began the calling of the roll, and your correspondent hastened to the Senate end of the Capitol. This smaller and more wieldly mass of presidential aspirants had passed the preliminaries and were already at work. Senator Blaine, who looks fresher and in better training than at any time since the Cincinnati convention, had just taken the initiative by proposing a bill directed against the alleged recent election frauds and intimidation in the South. It was edifying to see Secretary Sherman, who has no political chances, come around to Turnbull's desk and shake hands with him in the friendliest manner, and "bloody" Matt Butler, with a rose in his button hole, go over to Don Cameron and exchange greetings. What must those political antipodes think of one another! The two southern sons of thunder, Lamar and Hill, appear to be in fine health, and the former will probably break his long silence during this session, when Mr. Blaine's bill comes up for debate. Senator Davis, of Illinois, has not decreased in tonnage, and looks as guileless and amiable as when he wore a silk gown and rested his enormous chin on the desk in the Supreme Court. Senator Davis, of West Virginia, actually begins to look somewhat clerical and statesmanlike. He was in Paris last Summer. Among the notables on the Senate floor were Secretary Evarts, and General Sherman. In the diplomatic gallery the attraction was the venerable and imposing presence of the Chinese ambassador, dressed in the flowing robes of his country and reminding one of pictures of Confucius. C. Dr. H. Locke (Petroleum V. Nasby), of New York, states that he had "on the forefinger of his right hand one of those pleasant pets, a run-round; the finger became inflamed to degree unbearable.

I procured and dressed it with Carbolic Salve, and in a few minutes the pain had so much subsided as to give us the night's rest.

The inflammation left the finger in a day."
