OUR OWN STATE.

OGDEN.

Federal and District Court Notes—Information Wanted.

Special Correspondence.

Ogden, March 8.—The parents of Geo. Milan, who resides at 61, Paul, Minn., want to know where he is. He came to Ogden in 1896, with a large number of others to work on the railroad. He is 19 years of age, 5 feet 8 inches in height, ruddy complexion. The St. Paul police department has notified the Ogden police department to try and locate the young man.

The funeral services over the remains of the late H. B. Adams were held from the Methodist church today at 2 p. m., under the auspices of the Woodmen of the World.

No train has arrived over the U. P. since Monday morning. At a late hour last evening there was no report from out on the line, and it was not known when a train would come in.

Yesterday was the thirtieth anniversary of the arrival in Ogden of the first train over the Union Pacific railroad.

The funeral of Mrs. Annie Roth, the wife of O. P. Roth, collector for the Union Light and Power company, who died yesterday morning at her home of cancer of the stomach, will be held from the residence, 2257 Grant avenue, at 2 o'clock p. m. tomorrow. Yesterday she was nearly 42 years of age.

The Knights and Ladies of the Maccabees gave a pleasant social entertainment at K. of P. hall last evening. There was a literary and musical program and an address by Colonel L. H. Hayes.

The United States Federal court will meet again in Ogden on Monday, the 13th inst.

SECOND DISTRICT COURT.

The following business was transacted in the Second district court yesterday before Judge Hodgins:

Alma vs. Smith, defendant's demurrer sustained and plaintiff given ten days' time in which to amend complaint.

Herbert R. MacMillan vs. H. Brown; demurrer overruled and defendant given twenty days in which to answer.

Heberger vs. Topham; argument on motion to set aside.

PROVO.

City Council Meeting—District Court—Marriages—News Miscellany.

Special Correspondence.

Provo, March 7.—At the city council meeting this evening Caleb Tanner, volunteer observer of the U. S. weather bureau, presented a communication from Washington, recommending that Lake, standing in branch daily forecasts from st. state a day late was furnished and some reliable person secured to report to the bureau at this city. The flag pole in the court house will probably be secured for the purpose by the ensuing summer. Bids have been advertised and one of the city engineers will be detailed to display the weather signals.

An ordinance introduced by Councilor Keeler and passed in first and second readings. The ordinance provides that the street extension on 2 street may be used by bicycle riders between the first day of December and the first day of April of each year, except the sidewalk between Seventh and Eighth streets.

The purchase for surplus water at the reservoir was confirmed to Fred Graham vs. W. D. Roberts and D. L. Roberts and the contract for the lease was passed over the mayor's objection.

The sum of $1,767.31 was appropriated to the waterworks bonds sinking fund.

DISTRICT COURT BUSINESS.

In the Fourth district court yesterday the case of A. J. Bauer vs. Provo City was found by Judge Dusenberry, who took the case under advisement. Plaintiff asks that the city be restrained from running a sewer ditch through his city lot, and asks for $5 as damages for injuries already sustained by reason of the ditch.

C. S. Johnson vs. J. W. Hogan; motion to reinstate under stating execution argued and taken under advisement.

Pleasant Grove City vs. Artemus Holman, defendant; motion for a new trial granted.

Estate of Rodney D. Sessoms, deceased; petition to sell real estate granted.

Estate of George Mayer, deceased; hearing petition to sell real estate set for March 16th.

Estate of A. A. Taylor, deceased; petition for final distribution set for hearing March 9th.

Estate of Ann D. Brosnahan, deceased; final account approved and distribution ordered.

MARRIAGES.

Wm. H. Scott, 21, and Rose A. Lorenzo, both of Provo, and Joshua Bowley, 22, of Provo, and Elizabeth Poulson, 22, of Santaquin, were married by Judge Dusenberry yesterday.

NOTES AND PERSONALS.

Jos. S. Rundell is down from Charleston.

Prince Evans was over from Lehi yesterday.

J. W. Scott has returned from a six weeks' visit to California.

Chief Deputy U. S. Marshal Smith is in Utah county subpoenaing Federal court jurors.

The directors of the Engineer company have elected the following officers: President, J. E. Booth; vice president, John Henry Smith; secretary and treasurer, M. H. Graham.

Elder Louis Schoker of Knightville expects to start for the Southern States in a short time, where he has been called to fill a mission.

The Blue Cliffs Canal company is advertising for bids to complete their canal from its head in the top of Provo Bench, at the mouth of Provo canyon. The canal is to be completed by May 15th, and to have a carrying capacity of 1,500 cubic feet of water per minute.

The Utah county officers are looking for a man by the name of George Henry, about 40 years of age, whose full beard, mixed with gray, is long in left leg, about 5 feet 7 or 8 inches in height, speaks with an English accent, chews tobacco. He left Santaquin about February 21st, with a horse and light wagon belonging to parties there.

Provo, March 8.—The following orders were made in the Fourth district court yesterday:

Sunset Drug Co., vs. H. S. Pyne; by request, continued till March 15th.

George Patton vs. Payson City; continued without date.

A. J. Daniels vs. Provo City, previously submitted; decision rendered for plaintiff.

NOTES AND PERSONALS.

A marriage license has been issued to Wm. C. Hansen, aged 22, and Christena Hansen, aged 21, both of Provo.

A mistake will be given in the Third ward meeting house this evening under the auspices of the missionary committee, in honor of Elder Clarence M. Clark, who leaves on a mission to the Southern States on an early date.

A character ball will be given in the opera house March 10th, for the benefit of the First ward social hall.

The Max Bendix concert, given at the tabernacle last evening, was well attended, many people from adjoining towns being present. The celebrated violinist was highly artistic and greatly enjoyed. Max Bendix is violinist, Miss Jenny Osborn, soprano, and Miss Jennie Scott, pianist, each showed wonderful talent, and treated the audience most generously in the matter of encores. Professors McClellan and Stoddard deserve the gratitude of the community for arranging this series of first class concerts, and will without doubt receive ever greater patronage than last evening, for the two remaining concerts.

LOGAN.

Sudden Death of Abel Garr—Interesting Local News—Marriages.

Special Correspondence.

Logan, March 7.—The funeral took place today of Mr. Abel Garr of Millville, a pioneer of Cache and a widely known and respected citizen of the county. Mr. Garr dropped dead a couple of mornings ago, after eating a hearty breakfast. Heart failure was the assigned cause of death.

Elder Samuel H. Thatcher is home again after fulfilling a mission in the southern states. He was president of the East Tennessee conference, which also includes part of North Carolina. He returns feeling well and reports a successful and enjoyable mission.

Sheriff Crockett secured information this afternoon of the movements of James Peterson, the Bernstiled who is wanted here. Peterson was first located at Brigham, where he traded the animal stolen here, for another one, receiving $15 to boot. He then went to Ogden, where he traded this animal and the saddle for $5. This is as far as he could be traced, but the sheriff goes to Salt Lake this evening to try and find his trail again.

Mr. Thomas Jensen of Millville, a prominent man in the south end of the valley, is very seriously ill and is expected to live.

A twelve-pound daughter of Office Deputy Hill fell while getting into a buggy last night, and getting her leg caught in the wheel it was fractured in two places.

Clerk Owen issued the following marriage licenses today: John W. Waite and Martha Middleton, both of Dayton, Idaho; Andrew P. Hansen Jr. of Logan, and Nora E. Page of Hyde Park.

MANTI.

Gigantic Reservoir and Irrigation Enterprise.

Sanpete Democrat.

The Manti Irrigation and Reservoir company, which was organized two weeks ago, is going to accomplish a work which will be of vast benefit to land-owners in the Manti district. Funk's Lake will be converted into a reservoir for irrigation purposes, by the company referred to above, and a large extent of land can be irrigated from this source. Through the courtesy of Mr. E. W. Fox, we are enabled to give our readers the details of this new enterprise.

The present high water line of the lake or reservoir is 675.94 acre-feet. By raising the dam at the south end of the lake 5.75 feet, the capacity can be increased to 1,061.17 acre-feet. By raising the dam still 4.25 feet more, would give a capacity of 1,544.18 acre-feet. According to accurate surveys made by Mr. Fox, it is found that the dam can be raised 12.75 feet, thus giving the reservoir a capacity of the acre-feet last mentioned, and the work can be done at comparatively small expense.

The area enclosed at the present high water line is 43.32 acres; at 5-foot raise, 77.45 acres; at 12-foot raise, 47.79 acres.

A large force is now at work all along the line making ditch, and it is the intention of the company to have the work completed in time for this season's irrigating.

The water will be taken from the lake at the west side through a tunnel about fifty feet in length, following the old Allen Valley water ditch. Dome passing under the dug-way; thence following the bench down to the mouth of Little Round Valley; thence along the side hill to the Lowry warm springs; thence to the south and west edge of Manti.

Besides increasing the water supply for the fields, much new land will be brought under cultivation along the line of the ditch which heretofore lay waste.

The stock of the company is about all taken, and if it is decided later on to increase the capacity of the lake to its fullest limits, there is no doubt but additional stock will find ready takers.

SPANISH FORK.

Homeseekers Going to Alberta, Canada—A Season of Much Sickness.

Special Correspondence.

Spanish Fork, Utah Co., March 7.—Some of our young men started for Alberta yesterday in a search for homes. This is a very rational move as there are many of our young men without places, besides being considerably crowded. It is safe to say that the young people of Spanish Fork have all the necessary qualities to become good colonists.

A few days ago a fine bear arrived in the family of Morris Martel. Mother and child doing well.

The stiff mountain breeze that generally comes down into the city from the Spanish Fork canyon every morning, has at times been regarded as annoying; but its return yesterday after three months absence, was hailed with pleasure, as this winter there has been more sickness and more deaths than ever before in this locality during the same time.

Our city mills have been preparing to go to show shortly the latter part of this month. One is going to Thistle, one to Springville and the other to Milford.

HUNTSVILLE.

Old Folks Honored with a Banquet—Plenty of Snow.

Special Correspondence.

Huntsville, Weber County, March 7.—A reunion of the old folks was held here on President Woodruff's birthday (March 1st). The committee in charge brought the old people to the Relief Society building in sleighs. Its were present, twenty-six of the number over seventy years of age; two over ninety, being Bro. P. P. Peterson, 92, and Sister Annie Lund, 92 years of age. We have altogether in the ward sixty over seventy years of age.

The festivities commenced at 11 a. m. Welcome speeches by J. W. Grow and Joe Wilson, members of the old folks committee. Short addresses by President Woodruff were delivered by Angus McKay in English, Lars Nielson in Danish and A. P. Brunson in the Swedish language. At 1 p. m. dinner was served in the upper room. Forty well filled baskets were sent to those who were unable to attend in person. Sweet music was rendered by the choir in the afternoon the exercises commencing at sparkling cobbler, comic songs and dancing, and a remarkable speech by Bishop David Stringham. The laureates were principally so held till the old people were taken back to their respective homes. No accident of any kind marred the pleasure of the day, and everything was in charge of the committee and all who added in any way to make the day a success.

We have at this writing over two feet of solid snow on the level, with a good supply in the mountains, so the prospects are good for an abundant supply of water next summer.

KAYSVILLE.

Orton A. Williams, Through a Fall, Breaks His Arm.

Special Correspondence.

Kaysville, Davis Co., March 7.—About 4 o'clock this afternoon Orton A. Williams fell from an apple tree and met with a very bad accident. He was what the doctor called a "hickory bone" in the arm about an inch above the wrist. Mr. Williams was pruning the tree and the branch that broke was large enough to hold up two men, but the worm had eaten the center of the limb out until it looked like a three inch pipe. He fell about 12 or 15 feet. D. W. P. Ingram is attending him.

The committee of citizens appointed to compromise the difficulties between Kaysville and Layton met today, but on account of the absence of one of the members they failed to accomplish anything and the meeting was postponed for one week.

QUEER RELIGIOUS TEST.

How a Mountaineer Was to Prove His Qualifications.

Washington Star.

"I was away upon the headwaters of the Big Sandy recently," said the show promoter, "and I discovered something new, even in that land of yesterdays and eventlessness. I was riding along a creek valley, when I was told lived a mountain preacher who had a practical idea of what religion should do for those who experienced it and had adopted odd ways of putting his ideas into practice. As I reached a rise in the road I saw as the bottom a young man driving a pig into a potato patch, and before I could reach him he had followed the pig through the narrow gate and was trying to drive it out again. It struck me as a peculiar proceeding, and when I came opposite the gate I called to my horse and sat watching the young fellow and the pig. It just never tried to get a pig out of a potato patch, you can form no idea of what a job it is, and as I watched the young mountaineer patiently chase the pig hither and yon, I thought it well headed toward the gate only to have it double on him and go back into the patch again, time after time. I began to wonder what manner of youth this was that had come into the mountains. Finally he brought it over very carefully, and as he got it almost out, it gave a sudden grunt and dodge, and into the patch again it went.

"Look dang the hog," he said, yanking and blowing and mopping his face with his shirt sleeve.

"Why didn't you say that before?" I asked, laughing.

"Excuse me stranger," he said, noticing me for the first time. "I didn't see you was there, and he blushed violently and seemed to be really confused.

"Oh, that's all right. I learned to see. I only wonder you didn't case the last one of him."

"Well, I reckon I don't know a durn," he said. "I done the best I knowed."

"How do you mean?" inquired, catching an idea of the situation all at once.

"You don't know it, I reckon, bein' a stranger in these parts," he said, "but Elder Martin set me to doin' that to see if I was fitn for religion yit. I've had a notion for about a year past that I would be a Jinte of the church, and I told Elder Martin, and he said as how he had his doubts yit if I was ripe, and he said if I'd drive one of Sam Yates' razorbacks outen cap's taler patch without roosin' a oath I was ripe, and that's what I been doin'.

"Judging by what I heard you say a while ago, I should say you were not ripe," I said, laughing at his explanation and manner of it.

"Oh," he exclaimed, "that ain't no sign; I'm just practicin'. The real thing don't come off till next week Sunday at quarterly meetin'."

DECOYING ENGLISH GIRLS.

Young Women Victimized by Russian "Theatrical Agents."

The practice of inveigling English girls abroad on the pretext of providing them with lucrative engagements in music halls has recently assumed the dimensions of a nefarious traffic. Representations having been made to the foreign office, an official inquiry has been instituted with the view of stopping the business complained of. A representative of Lloyd's is officially informed that ample confirmation has been received of the enormity of the evil, and that, in consequence, private detectives are actively engaged tracing the traffic to its permits, or organizations, concerned in it. The police have their suspicions fixed upon supposed agents located in London, who negotiate the transference of girls to Riga, their remuneration being commissions for girls procured. Several managers of West End music halls, knowing cases of girls being lured abroad by fraudulent inducements, have provided the police with addresses of certain suspects.

There are numerous glaring examples of theatrical girls of good character who are now virtually exiled in Russia, without the means of returning home to England. They had gone there relying upon the good faith of so-called foreign theatrical agents whose glowing pictures of fortune were fatally soon after their arrival. When the young ladies pleaded the terms of the written agreement, they were up and duly signed in London, they were told that an English contract had no validity in Russia. It is a terrible indictment to bring against the nation ruled over by the pacific and chivalrous czar that only one more halo in his wide domain are these victims, being enticed to Russia by misrepresentations, lured and novelty. Yet one of the last improvements made in the Russian law was to Lloyd's representative and repealed it without qualification, saying that he knew what he was talking about.

Mr. Stanley, of the Congo Free Mission, in Hertfordshire street, has received letters from young women now in Russia who had been victimized. One girl says she had previously entered at Mandy house, wrote a piteous letter, begging for assistance to enable her to return home. She has an irreproachable character, and had taken good parts in London theatres. Several people have sent money to send paying for her return fare. The girl's story is one of revolting deception practiced upon her in St. Petersburg, and it is certain that her experience is typical of many which never come to the knowledge of the police or the public. A significant fact is that the London agents for these foreign music halls usually take the precaution of entering into the new so family ties in this country. Recently one of the managers and other gave to their machinations.

Only a short time ago nine young women simultaneously disappeared from the Marlborough Street of Deadfield, and it is supposed that some, if not all, are now on their way to Russia. This supposition is founded upon the fact that Deadfield has long been canvassing about Bradford very recently for some time previously. The colonies of Russian Jews in Manchester are having respectable characters.

When parliament opens Colonel Dalziel, and other members are pledged to raise the question of suppressing the scandal. Lloyd's Weekly.

A BISMARCK STORY.

[Chicago Tribune.]

It has always been asserted that Prince Bismarck from the moment of his dismissal until shortly before his death, entertained a fine conviction that he would be summoned by the emperor to resume the position of chancellor, and there is no doubt in Germany that he is treating his domestic withdrawal from office and his memorable departure from Berlin does not tell to attribute to him the words "I go but to return." That is to say, "The king will call for me one more time," which was the favorite phrase of Cardinal Richelieu whenever his enemies by dint of intrigue succeeded from the king in procuring the exile and spiritual disgrace of the proud prelate and statesman.

This myth on the subject of Prince Bismarck has now been dispelled by the discovery that within six weeks after his dismissal from office he sent all his Prussian orders as well as those of other variety, to the jeweler at Berlin in order to have the diamonds with which they were ornamented removed from their settings and converted into cash.

When a personage already possesses the highest class of the principal orders of a country, he is entitled to wear, if it is desired to confer a still higher distinction upon him he is granted the insignia of the highest class of his orders with stars in large diamonds. Bismarck possessed all the principal orders of Prussia and of the other German states, as well as of Russia, Austria, etc., set in large diamonds and it would have been contrary to every law or rule of etiquette for him to wear any of these orders without their brilliants. Consequently when he sold the diamonds it was equivalent to an admission that he never hoped or proposed to wear any of these orders, either Prussian or foreign again.

It is the rule that on the death of the recipients of the principal orders of Europe the eldest son, or next heir to the honors should return the insignia to the sovereign by whom they have been conferred, which in the case of foreign orders has been set in brilliants, and Prince Herbert Bismarck was accordingly assigned by the kaiser for the purpose of restoring to the latter all the insignia of the old chancellor's Prussian orders, from which the stones had been removed.
