GRASS ON THE MOON.

Gothman Again Asserts that He Has Such Signs of Vegetation

ON THE FACE OF OUR SATELLITE

A Model of His Sectional Lens Telescope Exhibited—Objections Answered.

CHICAGO, Sept. 26.—Before a company of twenty-five or more friends and neighbors who met at his residence last night, Louis Gothman exhibited a model of his sectional lens telescope. He also answered the objections made by Astronomers Hale and Barnham to his announcement that he had discovered what seemed to be signs of vegetation on the moon.

In answer to the objection that astronomers with excellent telescopes had never seen a green spot on the moon, Mr. Gothman said:

"There can be but two reasons for this fact. First, no first class telescopes were in use for making observations the night I saw the spot. Second, it was various were made the telescopes were inferior to mine."

Mr. Gothman said his sectional lens has been examined by Prof. Colton who said it was excellent and would prove of great interest to the whole scientific world. Many eminent foreigners had pronounced the sectional lens instrument superior to any instrument of the same size. "A twenty inch built up lens," Mr. Gothman said, "with clear glass of even density, will be equal in power to any telescope that has a forty inch solid lens."

He then spoke of his observation of a green spot on the moon. "About 9 o'clock in the evening of August 12, in sweeping with my telescope over the face of the moon, I saw a spot of vivid green in the midst of mountains in the Valley of Sinus Iridis. Green is hitherto unknown among the shades of the moon. I thought there might be an error somewhere, but after changing the eye-piece six times I saw there each time, a well defined space of green. The idea of its being an area of the same color is out of the question because when allowing the moon to pass through the whole field the change spot kept stationary on the moon with a very magnifying power used. Before I came home to myself was 9, and it is not to be suspected that all of us were color blind.

"If Luna has a flora it must be far different from ours, because the conditions on the moon are vastly different from those on earth. Science has not discovered so far as to know the atmospheric air prevailing on the moon. In fact, all the elements of the earth's atmosphere are not positively known. To say that vegetation cannot exist on such a large planet is to make an exception which cannot be proven. Lunar vegetation must be very different from that of the earth. That Luna should be without animal life I cannot understand. On earth, in the arctic region, where the cold is intense the year around, we find the polar bear, the reindeer and other animals suited to the climate and the conditions. If man had never known of the existence of these animals and if we common men were asked if such animals could exist there we would say 'We do not know.' But most scientific men graduated from our universities would simply say 'No.' Because scientific men did not know of their existence they would conclude that such animals could not exist there. That there is vegetation on the moon is highly probable, but it does not follow that the color should be green. The greenish tint observed August 12, may have been a rare exception."

In conclusion Mr. Gothman said he believed the inhabitants of Mars were making signals to the earth, and he thought communication between neighboring planets by means of signals would eventually be established.

TYNAN AND SLATER.

The Doctor Does Not Believe the Spirits Revealed His Whereabouts.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 26.—Dr. Tynan, the capitalist who after a disappearance for two years was found by Slater, the spiritualist, does not believe that Slater was aided by spirits in finding him. Slater said the ghost of Maria Marvin Tynan, the doctor's first wife, told him where to find the missing man. Tynan says that Maria Marvin Tynan was his mother, not his wife, and that he believes that Slater merely saw him on the streets of Boston and recognized him as any other man might have done. Tynan says he does not believe in spiritualism.

HER FIRST ANNUAL ACCOUNT.

Filed by Mrs. Stanford as Executrix of the Estate.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 26.—Jane Lathrop Stanford has filed in the probate court her first annual account as executrix of the estate of the late Leland Stanford. The account covers the period from June, 1893 to September, 1894, during which time Mrs. Stanford has loaned money from the estate to the amount of $1,575,000 and has disbursed during the same period $1,371,000.

Had Taken Poison.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Sept. 26.—Louis Nielsen, who lost heavily in wheat recently, was found dead in Kilbourn park last night. He had taken poison.

CONTEST AND CITIZENSHIPS.

The Corbett Brady Challenge and Other Sports.

Thinks it Very Funny.

LANSING, Mich., Sept. 27.—Champion Corbett, who appeared here last night in Goldman's Jack, was made acquainted with the fact that Dressler had challenged a local champion to fight. Dressler was read his letter about to Steve O'Donnell, and when he came to the place where the middleweight pledged himself not to attempt a knock-out, he roared with laughter.

"Well, Steve, what do you think of this?" said Corbett, while O'Donnell smiled. After he had finished reading, Corbett said: "Of course I expected Fitzsimmons would do something of the sort, but he is too worthless. I will attend to him, however, when the proper time comes, and will knock him silver in a few days."

"I don't propose to fight him," exclaimed the champion, "until he has defeated some one worth mentioning. What's the use of my fighting a middleweight when there are plenty of men who can do him easily? He wants to skip over all the heavyweights and challenge me."

"That's right, Jim," said O'Donnell. "You fellows are for me," O'Donnell added, "that I'll make the same proposition to spar Fitzsimmons in New York that he makes in Canada, and bear if I don't prove that he is out of his class with me. If he wants to talk about meeting Jim."

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 27.—As Corbett arrived at Fitzsimmons must defeat O'Donnell before he will meet the middleweight, President Schoit of the Olympic club has determined to bring the affair to an issue at once. He will wait three days for a reply, and if the same does not materialize he will call a meeting of the board of directors and a decision will be issued giving Corbett a reasonable length of time to reply. Should he fail to agree to a meeting with Fitz, the club will announce the title as heavyweight champion of the world and ready to hold the title against any and all comers. The club claims the right to do this, as the title was lost and won in its arena.

The Strike Commission Adjourns.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 27.—The United States commission appointed to investigate the conditions of the strike, after a two days' executive session for the purpose of discussing and deciding on the nature of the report to be submitted to the President, adjourned this evening until the last week in October.

More Forest Fires.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Sept. 27.—Metz settlers report fires are reported tonight from Crow Wing county, and serious fatalities are feared. A dispatch from Brainerd says a large part of that county has been laid waste by the fires, which have been raging with terrible fury this afternoon, and probably a dozen farmers in the eastern and southern part of Crow Wing county have lost nearly all their buildings, and in some cases everything contained in them.

Lou Vincent and his family had a very narrow escape, and his farmhouse was destroyed.

The only thing John Swanson saved was his team. County Treasurer John T. Fisher suffered greatly, all of his fine herds of cattle and horses being consumed. Albert La Fore lost considerable grain with his barn buildings.

The flames spread with the greatest rapidity. Many families knew to be in the fire fell have not been heard from, and grave fears are felt for their safety. The fires are still burning, but the wind has died down.

The Trial of Mayor Bemis.

OMAHA, Neb., Sept. 27.—Evidence in the impeachment trial of Mayor Bemis on the specifications filed by Councilmen Hascall and Wheeler is all in, and but for the court adjourned for the night, the arguments of the counsellors were well under way. The mayor was again recalled and testified that he had acted in good faith when he took steps to keep the members of the army of the commonwealth from starting, feeling that an emergency existed and that immediate action was necessary. He added to be allowed an opportunity to express his views on "this conspiracy," referring to the charges brought against him.

Attorney Clarkson insisted that it was the duty of the mayor to enforce the laws and ordinances, and that he had no right to set himself up against the wishes of the anti-Coxey crusaders.

Attorney Macomber began his reply to Mr. Clarkson, urging that there had been no attempt to show corrupt motives and that the managers of the impeachment were relying solely upon instructions.

CHINESE RATS.

Captain Fung Condemned to Death.—Dishonest Officials.

LONDON, Sept. 27.—A dispatch from Shanghai dated today says: The Chinese naval officers now at Port Arthur and Tien Tsin are squabbling among themselves as to the responsibility of the terrible Chinese losses in the naval battle off the Yalu.

A court of inquiry is sitting and has already found Captain Fung of the warship Tai Yuen guilty of cowardice in the face of the enemy. He was condemned to be beheaded and it is believed that other officers will lose their heads.

A telegram from the Kiuk Tasial at Port Arthur, received by the commander at Wei Hai Wei, positively accuses the commander of the Cum Yuen of taking flight with his vessel before the battle, at the first sight of the enemy's smoke. Admiral Ting, who remains at Port Arthur, has also telegraphed to Wei Hai Wei making grave charges against some of his officers. The admiral declares that the Ping Yuen, the Kwang Ting and the Chin Chung, together with four torpedo boats, were up the Yalu river when the battle commenced. There they remained until all the fighting was over. They then sneaked out and made for Port Arthur. Two of the torpedo boats are still to be still missing.

SOLD A GUN.

LONDON, Sept. 27.—The Pall Mall Gazette late afternoon publishes a letter from Shanghai, dated August 17th, saying the Chinese navy cannot fight because the ships have only about twelve rounds of ammunition, the supply of ammunition having been sold, according to the Pall Mall that the correspondent, by the captains of the war ships. The correspondent adds that one of these commanders actually sold one of his ship's Armstrong guns, and went to sea one gun short.

SECRETARY HARLIN'S REPORT.

More Police Needed on our Northwestern Frontier.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Hamlin has returned from his tour of the customs districts on the Pacific coast and a brief visit to the Puyallup islands. Restated the northwestern frontier was generally in need of a more comprehensive police system. With the very limited number of revenue officers available for this duty it is comparatively an easy matter to smuggle opium into the country, and no doubt many of the Chinese have been able to evade the officers and were now safely within our borders.

Additional revenue cutters, and a number of steam launches, he said, should be provided.

HON. WILSON IN LONDON.

He is the Honored Guest of the Chamber of Commerce.

Toasts and Speeches—Mr. Wilson Recites the Events of the Tariff Struggle in America.

LONDON, Sept. 27.—The dinner given by the chamber of commerce of London to Congressman W. L. Wilson took place at the Hotel Metropole this evening. About seventy guests were present, including J. Sterling Morton, secretary of agriculture, and his two sons, Paul and Joyce Morton; Congressman Dinsmore, of New York; the Countess E. Boyle, permanent secretary of the board of trade, and a number of leading men in the and commerce. United States Embassador Hayes and Julius H. Roosevelt, secretary of the embassy, sent regrets.

After the toasts to the queen had been drunk, the chairman proposed a toast to the President of the United States.

Proposing a toast to the guests, Sir Albert Rollit said Mr. Wilson's name had become honored and familiar in England. In honoring the guests, he said, they were honoring London, and the chamber of commerce wished them to take back with him a message of peace and good will. Nothing, he would, could be worse than a war between the two great allies. That was why arbitration in the Alabama and Behring sea was acceptable to Great Britain. He was not sure that the worst wars of the future would not be tariff wars. If, as he hoped, the period of tariff war beginning to end, both countries ought to honor Mr. Wilson. Benefits had already been experienced in England. Furnaces had been reopened in Wales and Yorkshire and an impetus had been given to the tin plate industries.

Mr. Wilson, rising to respond, was greeted with cheers which lasted several minutes.

After acknowledging the honor conferred upon him and reciting the events of the long struggle to overthrow protection, Mr. Wilson said: "As the people saw our system was generating a brood of monopolies so powerful as to defy the law and which used part of the wealth they drew from workers, to the power of taxation, to increase their profiteers, control elections and corrupt legislation.

"I am quite sure our protective policy has already served to promote the trade of other nations, and, I maintained, it would still further promote such trade and prevent merely our own. So standing before you, a representative of those who are striving for a freer commercial policy for the United States, I feel I cannot ask you to relinquish in its entirety the ground you deem right principle to reclaim advantages. Protection has seen our voluntary withdrawal from the sea and from the natural markets. Our protectionists have been building defenses to keep you and other nations from competing in our home markets. The tariff reformers are breaking down these defenses. Let us compete in all the markets of the world. Not only is our production of cotton and food products growing more rapidly than our consumption, but we have today a much working plant which, urged to its full capacity, would in six months fully meet our demand for a year.

"The nations of the world are growing more and more neighborly, and the manufacturing supremacy of the world must eventually pass to that nation which, having the largest supply, shall apply it to the highest intelligence and enterprise."

Secretary Morton was the next speaker. He said Mr. Wilson had stated what was absolutely correct, and that the people of America had humbly and silent in the protective system.

Sir Courtney Boyle, toasting Sir Albert Rollit, said they owed a debt of gratitude to Mr. Wilson and his colleagues in Congress and they hoped their action was not final.

A Suggestion as to Alaska.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 27.—The whaling schooner Nicolina, Captain H. F. N. Tilton, has reached port from Fox Island, Alaska, after a passage of twenty-six days. She brought nearly 15,000 pounds of whalebone, bear skins, sea skins and 800 pounds of ivory.

Captain Tilton confirms the report of the loss of the schooner Liberty Schooner. The vessel was wrecked in Macrynl's inlet, Point Hope, October 13th, 1893. At the same time the schooner Silver Wave was ashore in the sand, but floated easily.

In July last at Point Hope the ice was very thick, but all vessels had passed that point by the 15th on their way north. The Andrew Hicks is reported having three right whales.

In speaking of missionary work in Alaska, Captain Tilton said: "I think the government should do something for the natives of Alaska, as they are a quiet and intelligent race of people, and are suitable to live like a civilized people. The missionaries should be noted after, and good men, and especially women, should go to Alaska. Men should be sent that a native would respect—not men that are lighter than the natives themselves."
