TOYS FOR THE NEW YEAR

HOW THEY ARE SOLD ON THE STREETS OF PARIS.

The Little Booths Along the Boulevards—The Ways of the Venders—Wonderful Variety of Curious Articles—Their Cheapness—Pharaoh's Serpents.

From Dec. 24 to Jan. 6 every year the city of Paris becomes one vast fair. [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

The principal spot is, of course, the main boulevards from the Bastile to the Madeleine, where about 400 of them are placed on both sidewalks of the thoroughfare. [illegible]

The maximum width of each booth is eight feet, and a space of three feet is left between each construction. [illegible]

[illegible]

...and the Louvre sell each [illegible]

[illegible] worth of toys, and the managers of the Parisian syndicate of toy manufacturers estimate that the total sales during the holiday season are not far from [illegible].

According to recent statistics there are in Paris alone nearly [illegible] manufacturers of toys, mostly situated in the districts of the Marais, the Temple and the Archives. [illegible]

[illegible]

The toy manufacturers each have their specialties, and generally deal only in that specialty. [illegible]

Ten years ago nearly all the high priced doll babies used to come from Germany. [illegible]

Cut Out for an Actor.

Romantic Youth—Father, I wish to adopt the stage as a profession, to interpret and embody the glorious inspirations of Shakespeare and the master pieces of later dramatists.

Practical Father—My son, you are cut out for an actor, there's no doubt of that. Your legs are exactly the right length.

Romantic Youth—Eh! Legs!

Practical Father—Yes, indeed. The other day, when we were out in the suburbs, you walked home railroad ties better than any of us.—Good News.

You Don't Say.

"Do you know it takes fifty leaves of gold to make the thickness of ordinary paper?"

"Oh, that's too thin!"—Jewelers' Circular.

HE SEEMS TO MAKE IT PAY.

The "Ideaist" Is What a Thinker in a "New Calling" Styles Himself.

The day of the [illegible] man has been long delayed, but it seems to have overtaken us at last. [illegible]

In a neatly furnished room on the first floor of a quiet hotel on [illegible] avenue, [illegible] young man, half buried in papers and books, was found, who makes a very good salary by the rather odd occupation of originating ideas. [illegible]

"I plan to remain in New York at least a year," he explained. "I have contracted to devote my whole time for that period to thinking for and making suggestions to one of your greatest business houses. [illegible]
