THOSE who desire to be regaled with one of the most delightful musical treats of a lifetime ought to attend the Gilmore concert at the Tabernacle tonight. Gilmore's band is acknowledged by high musical authorities as the best in the world.

In Gilmore's band there are natives of France, Germany, Austria, Hungary, England, Scotland, Ireland and America. Almost every civilized language is spoken among them, but the musical language is alike understanded in and over when the great Gilmore waves his baton and sets their mounted lips to music.

Gilmore has invented no new or especial melodies to the public that there will be a great desire to hide the new melodies to public view when he exhibits them. They are Sousa's Liberty Bell March, and the Milan Bersaglieri, who are branded as remarkably charming drill singers, and the music are arranged by the brilliant Sousa. The concert takes place at the Tabernacle this evening.

Gilmore's band this year has sixteen instrumental soloists, a sextette of saxophones, a quartette each of trombones, cornets and French horns, altogether there are twenty-six different instruments played upon during moment, and everything needed to make music till its delightful every limit is Gilmore's band. The four vocal soloists are of unusual eminence as entertainers, and the pianoforte soloist is in both classic and popular as well as new music. The concerts beginning tonight cannot fail to fill the highest expectations.

A huge "Bat-house."

A magnificent gray bat has just been received at the Desert Museum. It is of a rare kind, and of exceptional proportions, being one of the largest ever reported from this region. It measures, when expanded, fourteen inches from tip to tip. The rapere specimen was captured but a few days ago by Master George Talmage, an eight-year-old brother of Dr. J. E. Talmage, the Museum curator.

This is a choice addition to the very extensive and valuable collection of natural history specimens, to be seen at the Deseret Museum and some who are interested in the wonders of nature should fail to visit that worthy institution.

THAT GAMBLING BUSINESS.

The Hearing Commences Before Commissioner Pratt This Morning.

The investigation of the charges arising out of the arrest of the ten persons for gambling in the rooms over the Mirror saloon, on Tuesday night, began at 11:30 o'clock this morning before Commissioner Pratt. That the proceedings have awakened a deep interest among the gaming fraternity of the city was evidenced by the large number of persons present.

The prosecution was represented by Counsel Van Horne Murphy and Assistant Attorney Eichner, while Attorney H. H. Lewis was the only counsel employed on the side of the defense.

A jury was empaneled, at the desire of the defendants, to try the cases, which on the request of Mr. Lewis will be taken separately. The names of the transgressors are A. Mosher, John Weaver, Charles Cook, Alex. Reed, John Rogers, Frank Martin, Joseph Allen, Jr. Johnson, M. P. Hjorth, John Demers.

The jury was called as follows: E. D. Ferrell, O. Ogden, John G. Smith, Thos. Matthews, William Arnold, Geo. S. Scarne, J. F. Bowring, John McDonald, C. S. Heinemann, Geo. H. Sedgwick.

The swearing in and examination occupied a considerable time. Mr. Spence and Mr. Arnold were engaged by the defense and Mr. Matthews by the prosecution. The work was still in progress at the time of the news adjournment.

At present it seems likely that the investigation will occupy fully two days.

A SALOON ROW.

In which a Newspaperman, a Detective, a Policeman and Others were Implicated.

The Council saloon on Commercial street was the scene of an exciting altercation about eight o'clock last night. The principals in the affair were Joe Jenkins, city editor of the Salt Lake Mining Review, C. C. Elliot, reporter of the same paper, Detective Daggett and a sporting man named Hawley.

It appears that Jenkins and Elliot had some difficulty over a election matter, which resulted in a physical encounter between them. The newspaper and Hawley endeavored to separate them. While they were acting as peacemakers, Detective Daggett entered the saloon and in some way became a party to the trouble and struck Hawley a terrific blow in the face. The men then clinched and went down together, Daggett on top. The latter proceeded to pummel Hawley about the head and face, but was finally rolled off.

At this juncture Officer Jenkins mixed in and secured the one so opportune of the same name, who was still struggling with his opponent. The reporter escaped, and struck the officer a blow to the left eye which temporarily blinded him. Discovering that he had hit an officer he managed to make an apology. Here the quarrel ended. The matter was reported to Marshal Young and that official issued an order for the arrest of Editor Jenkins, who was brought in police headquarters and afterwards released on his own recognizance, with the specific understanding that he should appear before Justice Rice at 10 o'clock this forenoon. This he did, but as no one appeared who would act the role of prosecutor, he went his way, and thus the matter stands at present.

Policeman Jenkins' vision is somewhat clouded today, his eye being badly swollen and discolored.

Amusements.

The programme given by the Robin Velez company last night at the Salt Lake Theatre was varied, bright and entertaining. There was a very good house, and the three one-act plays were all well received. "Percy Pendragon," the first in the bill, was given without Miss Velez. In "My Milliner's Bill" she appeared as the unhappy wife, and portrayed the misery, wretchedness and anxiety of a lady in financial difficulties so vividly that in several situations it caused no laughing matter. Her singing of "His Art was true to Polly" was exquisitely rendered, and consequently warmly applauded.

The acting of the other members of the troupe, both ladies and gentlemen, was excellent, and the audience had a delightful evening.

Tonight will be presented "The Old Maestro," "Wig and Gown," and "A Quiet Evening." Matinee today for Miss Velez' engagement for the season.

P. S. Gilmore begins his engagement at the Tabernacle tonight. In the New York and Boston Herald's last September Mr. John Philip Sousa, the bandmaster and director of the United States Marine band, who had just returned from Europe said: "I found no band there better or even equal to Gilmore's fine organization. In fact but one that was at all worthy of comparison to it. As a leader I consider Mr. Gilmore far ahead of any there." While over zealous friends and writers often make extravagant attempts yet commendation like this from a competent and unbiased authority like Mr. Sousa accounts for a good deal and emphasizes the fact that Gilmore's band is still the leading band of the world.

THE Friday and Saturday nights of this week "eclipsed by the light of the Moon" will be given at the Salt Lake Theatre. This production, which has been a laughing sensation in all the principal cities of America from New York to San Francisco for several seasons, now appears in Salt Lake City after an absence of several years.

The American Extravaganza company which will present "Orlando" at the Salt Lake Theatre next Wednesday night is the same organization that gave us the "Crystal Slipper" last year. The sale of seats begins on Tuesday morning.

For the week commencing November 9th the programme at "Wonderland" contains many new features. The great wonder of the week is the dog "Tony," which can detect a counterfeit, and scent out a pile of genuine ones. Whoever decrys the dog will get a present of $5.

DANGEROUSLY HURT.

Thomas Kendrick Kicks With a Serious Accident and is Rendered Unconscious.

Thomas Kendrick, a young man who drives Martin Lennon's meat delivery wagon, met with a painful and serious accident shortly before noon today.

He had left the horse, attached to the wagon, standing adjacent to the sidewalk on Second South street, near West Temple, while he went into a building on the north side of the street to fill an order. Returning, he climbed into the wagon and as he reached for the lines the horse took fright and started into a run. Kendrick finally got hold of one of the lines and with it managed to prevent the animal from running against several vehicles which were passing up and down the street. Unfortunately, when near the corner of Second South and East Temple streets, an electric pole was struck with terrible force, throwing Kendrick to the ground with such violence that he was rendered unconscious. The wagon was completely overturned and fell heavily upon the broken driver. He was picked up and carried into Mr. R. Evans' gun store, where he was waited upon by Dr. Amos R. Smith. Restoratives were applied and the injured man gradually regained sensibility.

His left lower jaw was badly broken and he shall fractured, while he sustained severe bruises about the body. He was subsequently conveyed to his home near the penitentiary.
