CORRESPONDENCE.

Civil Service Reform—Extra Session of Congress—Weather and Society—Departmental Corruption and Decapitation, etc.

WASHINGTON, D. C.,
April 18th, 1877.

Editor Deseret News:

People are at last beginning to open their eyes to the fact of civil service reform, and to find that the President and the cabinet really mean business. Secretary Sherman has commenced operations in his department by discharging the superfluous force from the Treasury, and is still engaged in sifting out the chaff, discharging the inefficient employees. Secretary Schurz, of the Interior Department, this week promoted the chief clerk to the office of assistant secretary, simply because of his fidelity to duty and his intelligence in discharging it. He is known to be a strict economist, guarding public money and trust as zealously as he would his own, but has no political influence, and has made no effort to procure his own promotion. Such a case of reward of merit has been unknown in our civil service for many years, and it is not wonderful that it is creating open-mouthed astonishment in this vicinity. If all corrupt politicians, abusers of public trusts, axe grinders and political hangers-on are to be cut off, the government will soon have to be advertising for honest men to serve the country in office.

Alexander H. Stephens, who has been confined to his room by illness all winter, is gaining in health and strength and his friends have strong hopes of his being able to take his seat in June. He occupied it but twice during the last session.

The special reason for calling an extra session of Congress is to make necessary appropriations for the army. But while it is convened and organized, other things will undoubtedly be attended to, for many "have waited long, are waiting still," which are of even more importance than the army supplies. The stagnation of business throughout the country could be relieved by immediate legislation, and one important step towards it would be the passage of a bill restoring the old federal dollar to its original and historic place in the currency. The national debt was contracted while silver and gold were equally money, and with the express stipulation that it should be paid in "coin," and justice to the people, as many think, "demands the immediate remonetization of silver, that they may be enabled to meet their obligations in the same coin in which they were contracted." An appropriation for the navy is also necessary, and many other minor bills which Congress will probably be glad to act upon and get out of the way before the next regular session.

We are having most delightful weather. All the little early weeds and spring wild flowers are in blossom, chick weed, knot grass, dandelions, &c. Peach trees are lovely with their rose pink blossoms, the turf is everywhere like the softest green velvet, and all nature is smiling and joyful.

Washington ladies have very generally put on their spring toilets—they consist mostly of a head gear which is so close to the head and has such a big fluffy sort of a crown as to remind one of the crapple crowned Biddy; an outer garment called a dolman, a thing of light cloth with wing-like appendages after the flying squirrel order, and which is anything but graceful; and dress pushed out behind by what is termed a long bustle. It makes me think of the cow-catcher of an engine. It is an abominable affair at any rate, and the sooner it goes out of style the sooner our ladies will begin to look like human beings.

The latest sensation of domestic origin, and which is having a similar effect upon some of our ex and present officers as Tweed's has had on his fair weather friends, relates to the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, Treasury Department, otherwise known as the official Botany Bay of the departments here. A discharge of about 300 employees from it to-day will bring despair to many who have found it difficult to keep the wolf from their doors in the past. It is said that a still further reduction of one or two hundred is contemplated on the 1st of May. The Secretary has deemed it incumbent upon him to make some explanation of this wholesale decapitation; and while he is very careful to place the odium of mismanagement on no one in particular, his statements will go far to confirm the truth of many of the scandals heard in the past relative to the management of this Bureau. Among the charges often heard against a late superintendent who "bossed" its affairs, for five or six years, were these of a system of favoritism and the exercise of a petty tyranny that is the reproach of so many of the departments. He seems to have been responsible to none but himself and is said to have regulated the pay of the employees according to the dictates of his own partiality or those of "influential" members of Congress and other powerful officials who are claimed to have had the places crammed to repletion with their male proteges and female friends; and the discharge of nearly half of the entire force within a month, invests these stories with an air of great probability. It is alleged further that many of the hardest workers of the female employees received the lowest rates of compensation because deficient in influence. On the other hand it is a subject of common report that some of those receiving the highest salaries were rarely seen about the building, except on pay day; or if they were in attendance they were applied to ornamental and other uses other than the legitimate work of the bureau. Still another charge has been to the effect that in more than one case have the hard worked, poorly paid girls been required to pay to the preferred bummers a certain percentage of their pittance each month, it being tacitly understood that if they refused or turned informers they would lose their places, and that the whole machinery of the government of the bureau has been so prostituted that it was not difficult to discredit any statement that those mutinously inclined might dare to make. The fact is a good deal of "reform" can be utilized in the departments here. The work cannot begin too soon, and it would not be any damage to the service to extend it upwards to the higher grade of officials and not confine it exclusively to clerks who are too often made the scapegoats of their superiors.

As one of the first fruits of the expected European war, we have to pay six instead of five cents as heretofore for every loaf of bread consumed.

The new board of police commissioners seem to be in earnest in their efforts to break down the gambling dens that have disgraced our city so long. K.

If you don't believe that honesty is the best policy, the difficulty is not so much with your own prejudices. If you will only try it once you will surprise your friends and learn something new.—New York Herald.
