BANKERS ARRESTED.

James Walsh and Son Arraigned on the Charge of Larceny.

THE COMPLAINANT'S STATEMENT.

Books Said to Have Been Fraudulently Kept from Day to Day.

NEW YORK, April 15.—James Walsh and his son Thomas Walsh, who joint December last conducted a banking business as Walsh & Son, have been arrested and arraigned before Magistrate Mott on a charge of larceny. The complainant is James A. Walsh, a manufacturer of tags. He claims that the defendants sold his shares of building and loan feeding stock, valued at $9,500, belonging to him and failed to pay over to him the proceeds.

The accused Walsh said they were all ready to go on with an examination and asked that the case go over until today. Mr. Walsh then asked the court to his examination could not be at another time, as his son had joined him and he did not wish to have their examination together. Magistrate Mott agreed and fixed bail at $10,000 each. The father at once furnished the required amount, but made no effort to keep his son from going to jail.

The complainant Walsh said he first began to do business in 1891. He deposited with them $6,000 and gave them orders to buy and sell shares on the account, putting up marginal money (as fall of 1893 when he had a credit with them of about $25,000. The shares were principally in gas and building and loan feeding stock. They always gave him notice of sales and purchases made in his account, but never had they informed him from who or the shares were purchased or to whom sold. On December 31 last the firm of Walsh & Son made an assignment. In an affidavit Mr. Walsh, the complainant, says:

"At a meeting which I was claimed the firm had made a profit of $20,000 and speculations, I stated to Mr. Walsh that if he or his son would show me where they had lost in stocks or speculation I would not only give them time but would loan them $5,000 on reasonable collateral.

"I placed an expert on the books and he could not find by them where any stocks or shares had ever been either purchased or sold for my account, nor could he find where the blocks were. Walsh told me did not keep a blotter. The expert informed me that the books were fraudulently kept from day to day and that to no instance did they show any speculations that would even have endangered the firm.

"From all I can learn, I am satisfied I was instead of buying stock with my money they used it and increased the loan my others had been entitled to."

Mr. Walsh, the senior member of the firm of Walsh & Son, declined to make a statement, saying that he had been relieved financially by his son's wild speculations and this fresh trouble was due to his old enemies in China. The son has had nothing to say.

Bob Fitzsimmons, a near academy tonight, in the ring, he demonstrated this new method of his opponent three days ago. He knocked his opponent efficiently the wearer, in an electrical registering device to count the number of blows struck. This will result in making sparring a contest for cash in which no science is needed to win the decision. When a knockdown point is struck a stiff spring is compressed, an electrical contact is made, a small bell makes a single stroke and the registering mechanism. The batteries, wires, registers and bell are all fitted in the back of the vest. The new sparring suits. Only punching bags are made to count.

"The bicycle," said Mr. Jones, in discussing his novel plan, "is every man's vehicle. An enormous increasing number of people are using it in their personal service. AND DECLARE AGAINST SILVER.

McKinley Men Jubilant Over Their Success in Forcing a Recognition from their Opponents.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., April 16.—The Republican convention convened here this morning with the prospect of at least two more contested seatings. While the Bradley men were south of the Mason and Dixon line, their seating is contested and the McKinley men are sure to make stubborn fights when the resolutions are up for action and we are sure it delegates to be seated. On yesterday's vote the Bradley men had a majority of 91 out of a total vote of 1,507. At 9:15 the chairman announced that the first test vote cast was the report of the committee on resolutions. The committee was not ready. Judge O. H. Bradley and Samuel Cook were chosen temporary chairmen.

The resolutions committee then presented their report. The committee against now either either a great demonstration or approval. There was even greater cheering, however, when the resolution was read defining Grading the action of the committee for President and directing the delegates to cast their votes for McKinley and Bradley second Williams.

The platform was adopted without opposition. It is an empty victory for the Bradley men, whose plan has been to place the administration against them. The McKinley men are jubilant over their success in forcing a recognition from the Bradley people, and applied the resolution from the center.

The money plank is as follows:

"We are opposed to the free and unlimited coinage of silver, believing it would operate as a Democratic ruin. The gold standard is the best and the best basis in Kentucky, and we are opposed to the free coinage of silver except by international agreement, and we believe it is the duty of the Democratic national, we have it as the standard money of the United States, and maintaining on a parity every other dollar, either silver or paper."

A. G. Dawson, one of the original McKinley men, Col. Lee C. Patton, one of Governor Bradley's right hand men, and Senator W. J. Deboe, also a Bradley man, received a nothing on the first ballot and were chosen electors at large.

A proposition was made to suspend the rules and elect by acclamation Col. C. V. Smith, colored, who, had made an able campaign in Bradley's interest. Before the chairman only answered the question, there was a chorus of ayes, but it was succeeded by equally demonstration in opposition. Half the convention was on its feet yelling and demanding recognition. There were excited colloquies between the white and black delegates. The confusion continued or death was prevented and another ballot was necessary. Smith was finally elected.
