FOR U. S. SENATOR.

It is not an open secret nor much of a secret of any kind that a great deal of the interest that is being and will continue to be so furiously taken in the coming State election, centers upon the personnel of one office which the people do not fill directly. This is the United States senatorship. There is no one who is not taking considerable interest in the voters of the realm taking such interest, albeit deprived of participating directly in the choice, nor is there anything specially if at all commendable in a qualified citizen sneering at an institution to fill the place. When such things are considered in the light of their own contemporaries the post of a senator of the United States has not two or three superiors in the whole governmental fabric, the exceptions being the Presidency certainly and in any event, the secretaryship of state, which filled as it was by Seward or Fish, and the dissatisfaction when the functions are presided over by such a man as Salmon P. Chase.

The senator is not merely a law-maker but in many respects a law interpreter. He sits in a place which is called the upper house for other reasons than figurative altitude. It is the body which represents the states in their sovereign, aggregate capacity, as the representatives do the individuals who compose the sovereignty. The Senate jointly with the Executive, doth with foreign powers in the matter of treaties, and assists—sometimes controls—the President in the matter of the higher grade appointments. It so exercises a steadfast surveillance over his official actings as to correspond with the great charter and the enactments of Congress, and for gross violations of either, or for general unfitness not in consonance with the dignity and bearing of the station, can remove him from office. When a man holds a position of this kind and in addition has for himself extensive education, a comprehensive intellect, a copious and always available vocabulary, a good presence and a fairish delivery, he is not to become conspicuous if not famous, and it is not difficult to understand why it is that the place is rated as high and why there is always so great a demand for it.

It is only fair to say that it is very rarely that military generals or incapable men succeed in making their way to the Senate as members thereof. In the first place a man must have a high and honorable standing in his state before he can even so much as be seriously mentioned in such connection. He must then be popular enough to have at the beginning of the legislative term when comes the senator a majority at their body favorable to him and not a few who prefer him to anyone else. With a divided following, even though many votes short of a majority, he is still not necessarily without hope unless a majority are unanimously against him. Here is where much of the odium attaching to senatorial elections has its origin. The loser sought to of such great importance and the struggle for it sometimes becomes so exciting and confused that men are induced too often to act without consuming their best judgment, and not infrequently they yield to the influence of money. As much as the practice has been denounced, it is still and present early as it has been legislated against and as thoroughly as investigations have been made, it is no matter of dispute, we dare to say other than in the nation's history, on the contrary it seems rather to have taken deeper root. Undoubtedly these aggregated campaign expenses which these contested seats cost and there should be no reproach upon the candidate or the candidates. Friends who say the side for serious propriety and legislation tendered. There is no fault found with this for so, although the practice is so conspicuous of abuse—it is so difficult to discriminate where legitimate expenditure leaves off and actual corruption begins—that it is not and cannot be, in the general premise on a large scale to be liable.

A man or woman who will permit himself or herself to receive money other than what was nominated in the bond—what he or she legitimately was expected to perform the official duties for—or to take by fraud or coercion, or without methods anything of value not embraced in the contract, is not to be a member of a legislature or to hold any other office of trust from or emolument. There are not numerous instances of such in this country, and it is sincerely hoped they never will be. While all this has previously been said regarding the qualifications of a senator for the honorable station, it does not follow that any one, no matter where he lives or what his status, has any right to employ such agencies to effect his purpose or cause he sought to light without subjecting the parties thereto to a criminal prosecution on the part of the men of all law-respecting people. And this does not refer exclusively to the use of money, although, this is the most method of corruption. It is more if we may so talk to have members of a political convention thus betrothed for private consideration for the Senate who will be sure to "guard" for some particular person for senator. This simply means the purchasing of a votes upon those who will not commit themselves beforehand that they need not apply, not being the right stuff, and those who will not expect opposition and votes if it can be brought about. This is certainly intimidation, coercion, and the suppression of free speech and action, those who should be free to cast their votes for whom they please, and not being in a position to do so, are deprived of any participation in public affairs. Let the conservative Americans and patriotic citizens refrain from electing from the delegate one and all a pledge that they are not so much shifting responsibility of anybody's shoulders to that individual who is sent to act at some time on an honored appointment.

After submitting the foregoing the "Knows" have appeared in succession. He claims for the association, "A man who is sworn to be sworn, somewhat like, public-spirited, capable and disinterested to the public service than to his own gratification; one who is thoroughly identified with Utah, whose welfare is sought to here, who glories in her fame, and will love and cry aloud for her welfare at all times."

THE FALL OF MANILA.

It was apropos that not only Manila and surplus were surrendered to the American forces under Admiral Dewey and General Merritt, but that the entire Philippine group was delivered up. The same journal also informed us, that "the formal proclamation of sovereignty was not made by the Spanish commander, but that the transfer of the government to the Americans, it is safe to conclude that Dewey didn't keep all his commission for the enemy to front.

It is stated that English experts have arrived at the following conclusions concerning the naval fortunes of the late war with Spain:

"First—Money is everything.

"Second—Have big batteries aboard.

"Third—Know how to shoot well.

"Fourth—Have a good navy, and you can lick anything that flows."

It is doubtless true as claimed that if all the great navies aligned were overhauled and the obsolete and unsecurity early weeded out, some of the navies would show to avoid shiftlessness while that of the United States would rank still higher.

The Madrid papers announce that "General Weyler scanned beneath him" Spanish towns are either greatly mistaken or a hard lie, according to that statement.

Mr. Day retires from the state department because he is not wealthy enough to support the position properly. And yet this is a republic.

The battle of Manila took place after peace was concluded. So did the battle of New Orleans, but they had no cables then.

The Klondike season is narrowing down to the close. So apparently is the gold.

"I scarcely stayed at home," replied Nora, "but have worked hard every day. But I have been taking that wonderful medicine, Dr. Miles' Nervine, and it has done me, oh, so much good. You see I always was to tell well when I got away, and I knew for the mountains next week."
