A NEW JERSEY POKER STORY.

Four Straight Flushes Result in an Equal Division of the Stakes.

A straight flush in the great American game of draw poker is such a rarity that the person holding it is regarded as one of the most fortunate and blessed of mortals. Devotees of that game will peruse the following story with incredulity, but its absolute authenticity can be verified by at least ten thoroughly reliable witnesses. A party of four players entered a place not a thousand miles from Summit one night not long ago and prepared to enjoy a few hours of recreation at their favorite game. Another game in progress at the time was full, so the four players were obliged to start at an adjoining table.

The "jack pot" came around, each of the four players filled in, and the game proceeded. The cards, regulation pack, 52 cards, were cut by the player to the right of the dealer and dealt out in the regular manner. The first player to the left of the dealer opened the "jack pot," and each succeeding player in turn raised. The limit was 10 cents, and the players are usually light betters, so that the raising and lively chipping in before the draw caused considerable surprise. When the dealer prepared to serve the cards for the draw, each of the players stood "pat," and the betting again started.

When each of the players had chipped in $10, it was decided to stop the betting, as that amount had never before been wagered on a game in the place, and none of the players could afford to risk a greater amount. When the hands were shown, none of the players almost succumbed to heart disease, for there lay four straight flushes, one of each suit and all running from four to eight. The pot was divided, and the cards were carefully put away in a case to be preserved as a reminder of the greatest poker hands ever held in this section and probably in the United States.—Summit (N. J.) Record.

OLD "JIM CROW."

How Rice Introduced This Unique Character to the Stage.

In the early twenties Thomas Dartmouth Rice first entered upon his theatrical career by "doing little negro bits," between the acts of plays, says the writer in the Boston Herald. While in Louisville the theater at which he performed looked out back upon an old stable yard, around which there was constantly lounging an old, decrepit slave named Jim Crow, who was so frightfully deformed as to appear inhuman. His left shoulder sloped off from the neck in a way that would indicate that the bone had been inverted. His lower limbs were dreadfully distorted, the left knee being a huge bony knob larger than his head, which caused him to move about with a painful, yet ludicrous, hobble.

This forlorn darky was in the habit of crooning a queer old tune, and designated the close of each verse by taking a peculiar step—"turkin de heel." Rice closely watched this uncouthness performer, and conceived the idea of producing a similar stage character, which, he felt assured, would "take" wonderfully. Accordingly, he made up precisely as the original and appeared upon a Louisville stage singing a score of humorous verses to the air—slightly changed and quickened—of the poor wretched cripple. The audience received this innovation with burts of applause, encoring him a dozen times the first night. And thus "Jim Crow" jumped into fame and immortality.

The nights in August are often cool, while the sun is boiling hot in the daytime. This brings out all the poison that decomposing organic matter throws upon the air. Disinfect your premises with the utmost care. Look to all the drains and see that they flow freely and are perfectly clean. Watch all the outhouses and shads and remove after every object that can give out a bad smell.
