MORE HARD WORDS.

The Speaker of the House of Representatives Insulted: Obstructive Tactics.

THE SENATE AT WORK WASTING TIME!

Is Session till Midnight and Then Adjourning Without Having Approved the Journal.

By Telegraph to the NEWS.

IN CONGRESS.

The Journal of the Previous Day Approved by the House.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—In the House, when the reading of the journal was concluded this morning, Mills objected to its approval and stated that he desired to debate the question. In a moment McKinley was on his feet with a demand for the previous question on approval of the journal and he was recognized by the Speaker.

The previous question was ordered, Mills claimed the floor and his claim was recognized by the Speaker. Thereupon Mills yielded the floor to Bland, who said he understood a resolution was to be reported from the committee on rules to limit debate upon the Apportionment bill. He wished to offer a resolution as an amendment, that a certain day should be fixed for consideration of the Senate Silver bill.

The Speaker said the pending question was upon the approval of the journal.

Bland—I suppose the Speaker intends to dispose this bill, either in Committee of the House, [Cheers on the democratic side.]

Bland then read his proposed substitute making the free coinage bill the continual order from and after January 27th.

Rogers (Ark.) said the democrats earned a fair administration of the rules, with the Speaker had himself made. "Whenever," he said, "you (addressing the Speaker) or any other gentleman, and you especially, because you hold the third highest position in the gift of the people, violate the rules, you are a revolutionist; you destroy the dignity of the high station you are called upon to fill."

Hermann (Ore.)—How long is the House to be subjected to this disorder? How much longer is the House to sit and hear its speaker insulted day after day? Hereafter the insulting words will be taken down.

The Speaker—The Chair desires to say to the House that one reason why he expects this in due time his services to this country will be approved, is because the virulent attacks made upon him, the personal epithets and gibbeds of which this last gentleman (Mills) is the author, he understood them, and, as the House has sustained the decisions, the Chair will continue so to do as long as he occupies the exalted position to which he was elected.

Mills (Tex.) said the Chair had not given the House or the country any reason or authority for its decision of yesterday, relative to the approval of the journal, but he simply informed the House: "I am Sir Oracle, and when I open my mouth, let no dog bark."

The Speaker—The gentleman's time has expired.

The journal was then approved—Yeas 155, nays 116.

Cannon (Ill.), from the rules committee, reported a resolution providing the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the District of Columbia appropriation bill, and all pending amendments, a motion, and pending the previous question on its adoption. It was ordered.

Bland proceeded to argue in favor of his proposition to fix Tuesday next for the consideration of the coinage bill, when he was called to order by the Speaker, on the ground that he was discussing matters irrelevant to the pending question.

McMillan (Tenn.) attacked the committee on rules for bringing in the resolution, and Cannon defended the action.

McComas (Md.) said the majority of the House would rule now in the face of all obstruction would support the brave and manly administration which had stood by the banner of republican rule.

McKinley said that it was manifest to the House and the country that the minority intended to assert in every obstructive tactic in order to stay all legislation until it should be settled that a certain bill now pending in the Senate should be laid aside or defeated. These tactics were not new. He gave the gentlemen notice, so far as the republican majority was concerned, that it did not propose to turn its back upon a law providing for an honest vote. The majority would stay here until the clock struck 12 on the 4th of March in order to put upon the statute books a law to preserve the integrity of elections.

Bland moved to recommit the resolution, with instructions to the committee on rules to report a resolution discharging the committee on coinage, weights and measures from further consideration of the silver bill, and further providing that the bill shall be made the special order for the 27th of January.

A point of order against the resolution was sustained by the chair.

McMillin, Springer and others protested against the ruling, but the Speaker refused to entertain their appeal, and also ruled out of order a motion by Springer to adjourn.

The clerk proceeded to call the roll on the adoption of the resolution reported by Cannon, and it resulted: Yeas 152, nays 124.

The House finally went into committee of the whole on the District of Columbia appropriation bill. After debate, the committee rose and reported the bill to the House. While the roll was being called on an amendment, the democrats left the hall, leaving a bare half dozen of their members. The result was that no quorum voted, and the Speaker, being unable to note a quorum, the House adjourned.

IN THE SENATE.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—Aldrich was willing to concede that the Vice-President had not declared the motion carried and had no objection to the motion to amend the journal.

The Vice-President said, from his own recollection, he did not formally declare the vote so carried, though he stated the ayes appeared to have it, and he would therefore again submit the question.

After a long discussion Eustis took the floor and spoke against the election bill. He said it was aimed at the Southern communities and the Southern States. It was intended to revive, reorganize and rejuvenate the republican party in the South. It was intended as a second reconstruction measure and it deserved the failure.

Eustis inferred to the Boston riot against the execution of the fugitive slave law, and said that never in any Southern State had there been such an exhibition of fierce, determined and relentless opposition to a federal law as that in Massachusetts, and that riot, he said, was headed by the first and leading citizens of Boston, and in the face of that record the senator from Massachusetts was constantly arraigning and condemning the Southern communities and Southern States.

Hoar replied to what he termed the diatribe and the philippic from the senator from Louisiana and thought it the most extraordinary spectacle of colossal assurance he had ever witnessed. General Sherman, when in command of the Department of the South, declared that more men had been murdered in the State of Louisiana for their political opinion than had fallen on both sides during the Mexican war. It was a State whose annals were known by its terrible and bloody history.

Carlisle addressed himself directly to the question, the proceedings of yesterday and the motion to correct the journal.

Vest gave as a justification of his addressing the Senate now the fact that the shadow of a cloture rule rested on all that the senator might do or say now. He went on to give a review of the time that the cloture rule was proposed by leading republicans, and he was quoted from Hoar's article in the Youth's Companion, in which he said: "In that assembly (the Senate of the United States) speech is absolutely unfettered." He also referred to articles in republican newspapers all over the country in condemnation of the Theodore bill. He said if the republican senators passed the bill, and especially as they proposed to pass it, by trampling on the rules of the Senate, the States in the Union would give them their electoral votes. He warned the republican senators that they were playing with edged tools and they might inflict a mortal wound on the south and on the whole country.

At 5 o'clock a motion to adjourn was lost. The absence of a quorum was noted, and the sergeant-at-arms was directed to report the attendance of the absent senators.

The time of the Senate was taken up in roll calls and in the delivery of Vest's speech in section, and at midnight the Senate adjourned, leaving the journal of yesterday, as well as that of to-day, to be approved tomorrow.

THE ROYAL REMAINS

Of Kalakaua Taken on Board the "Charleston"; San Francisco in Mourning.

THE AUTHORITIES AT WASHINGTON PERPLEXED.

The Hawaiian Minister on the Political Effect of the Death of the King.

By Telegraph to the NEWS.

THE LATE HAWAIIAN KING.

Preparations for His Funeral.—The President's Sympathy.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 21.—The board of supervisors held a meeting today for the purpose of making arrangements for the funeral of King Kalakaua tomorrow. The Federal and municipal officers, representatives of commercial bodies and other associations, Knights Templar and troops will participate in the obsequies. The body was embalmed today and placed in a handsome casket. Before being taken to Trinity Church it was removed to the reception room of the Palace Hotel, where a black catafalque had been prepared to receive it.

The remains of the King were removed this afternoon to the mortuary chapel of Trinity Church. Flags were half-masted on public and private buildings and on naval vessels in the harbor. They will be flown so until the Charleston leaves the harbor tomorrow afternoon for the Sandwich Islands with the remains of the dead King on board. King Kalakaua was expected to reach home a week from next Thursday, and efforts are being made there to give him a welcome, but the contents of rejoicing will be turned to those of mourning when the Charleston arrives.

THE PRESIDENT'S SYMPATHY.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—The first official information received by this Government of the death of King Kalakaua was conveyed in a note from the Hawaiian Minister to Secretary of State Blaine today. The secretary communicated the fact to the President and subsequently replied to Minister Carter, expressing for the President deep regret that Hawaii has lost a wise and good sovereign, under whose benificent rule the people of Hawaii have prospered and whose efforts have been so constantly and signally put forth to strengthen the ties of mutual advantage between the kingdom and the United States. He further requested the Minister to convey to the royal family the heartfelt sympathy the President feels for their bereavement. [illegible] the Executive until official notice shall have been received of the formal installation of Queen Liliokalani. Instructions, however, were sent to the general commanding the division of the Pacific and the admiral commanding the naval force of the Pacific to pay full military honors to the dead King. Acting under these instructions the army and navy authorities at San Francisco have assumed charge of the funeral arrangements, and the transfer of the remains to the flagship Charleston will be marked by the highest military honors authorized by the regulations. The Charleston will make the trip to Honolulu as rapidly as possible, will remain as that port to participate in the ceremonies attending the burial of the King and the coronation of his successor, and will at the same time see that the interests of this country are fully protected.

THE AUTHORITIES PERPLEXED.

While the authorities at Washington are desirous of doing the highest honors to the Hawaiian government in its bereavement, they are somewhat perplexed as to the best course to pursue. There is no precedent to follow, as this is the first instance where a ruler of a foreign country died on American soil. It is said, however, that there will be ample time for further action when the government is advised of the installation of the new ruler.

Secretary Blaine said this afternoon that the United States had lost a good friend in King Kalakaua and would do every possible honor to his memory. "Our relations with Hawaii," he said, "are of the friendliest character and, so far as I am able to judge, will be in no wise affected by the change of government. I have wholl[illegible] in the friendship and good will of Queen Liliokalani and have no reason to doubt that she will perceive the wisdom of continuing the friendly intercourse of the two countries."

MR. CARTER, HAWAIIAN MINISTER

in Washington, said this afternoon that the death of King Kalakaua will in no wise affect the peaceful condition of affairs in Hawaii. "I see no reason," he continued, "why his death should cause any complications whatever. Princess Liliokalani was princess regent during the absence of Kalakaua. She was between the crown, and all that is necessary is for her to proclaim herself Queen. Queen Kapiolani is now Queen Dowager. Princess Liliokalani ruled in the absence of the King, and she will simply continue to reign the same as if the King were still alive but absent from the country."

Carter spoke with considerable feeling with regard to the failure of Congress to amend the McKinley act, so as to prescribe that its provisions shall not interfere with the existing treaty relations of the United States and Hawaii, and he said he hoped the vessel which will convey the King's remains to Hawaii will also carry the news that Congress has carried out the President's recommendations on this subject.

"This matter," continued Carter, "undoubtedly of King Kalakaua. The last official communication I had from him was a telegram from San Francisco last Friday, just before the final stupor overcame him. In his telegram he informed me that his health was but indifferent since his return from the South. He went on to urge that I use my influence to have that clause restored to its place in the McKinley bill and told Mr. Blaine to use his best efforts in getting what in reality every one wanted, but what as yet had not been granted."

In closing the interview Carter said it is a popular error that General Dominis, Queen Liliokalani's husband, is a British subject and that her accession to the throne means commercial triumph for Great Britain. According to Carter, General Dominis is a native of America, having been born in Boston, but in his opinion General Dominis does not cut any figure in the political situation, because of his long continued infirmity.

LORD SALISBURY

Gives His Opinion About Home Rule and Its Prospects: The Battle not Over.

WHAT EVA HAMILTON HAS TO CONFESS.

Lucetta Harrington, a Young Actress, Ends Her Life by Shooting Herself.

By Telegraph to the NEWS.

IRISH HOME RULE.

Salisbury's Opinions: Parnell and Gladstone, Two Clever Men.

LONDON, Jan. 21.—Lord Salisbury, in a political speech at Cambridge, said he did not believe either that the home rule contest was on the point of victory or that it was dead. He said: "Many positions must be carried before home rule is victorious. Even if a home rule bill is passed, it will be our duty to undo the mischief. My belief is that home rule owes its existence to two very clever men—Gladstone and Parnell. While their support it, I should give you incontinent advice if I persuaded you that the battle was over. A vigorous struggle is still before you. The home rule renounced in London and Kilkenny proved that the Irishmen were quite incapable of conducting an independent parliament. It has further shown the unlimited power of the priesthood, whose machines organized and swept down the man who had been a deputy of the whole Irish movement there and in America. That is the ruthless organization beneath whose heel they would place the Federalists by granting home rule.

LUCETTA HARRINGTON.

A Wayward Girl Ends Her Brief Career.

She was well known as the "child actress" under the name of Lou Coles. She traveled through the West, and for a time was with Ford's Opera Company. She played with Daly's company and at the Casino. For five years, however, she had not been on the stage.

The Railway Strike.

MARION, Ohio, Jan. 21.—Not a freight train is moving on the Chicago & Erie between Chicago and Marion. The engineers at Marion are ready to go out. Their sympathy is with the strikers, so the trouble seems to be the decline of Superintendent Merrill to Scott. The railroad, in anticipation of trouble, made arrangements with the Pennsylvania and Pittsburg, Chicago & St. Louis to handle all their passenger and perishable business eastward.

General Manager Tucker, of the Chicago & Erie, in a statement this morning, said: "There are six dispatchers and from fifteen to thirty conductors on the strike. Every one of our passenger trains moved on time today except the North Judson and accommodation. We are not moving any freight trains and shall not do so until the situation develops."

Flood, of Philadelphia, made a sharp speech in favor of the workingmen, saying that one Philadelphia firm made $40,000 last year, while his men were not paid enough to live on.

All this created a storm. One member endeavored to have the whole discussion expunged from the records, because such a report would cause strikes, and the men were already troublesome enough. Finally the matter was smoothed over.

Herbrand charged the ministers with taking unfair advantage of the retail trade.

Minister of Finance Miquel replied that the fees amounted to only 30,000 marks, and were remitted with the express wish of the late Emperor Frederick.

Herbrand's motion was defeated by a large majority.

After the debate closed Von Hallthusen joined a motion to address himself to the Emperor to be disposed of as he thought best.

HOW ELEPHANTS SPRAY.

THEY LIKE TO SHOWER THEMSELVES WITH WATER FREQUENTLY.

The elephant in captivity is very different from the elephant in his native jungles, and Sir Samuel Baker thinks the life of the wild animal is much longer because of the complete change of habits undergone by the beast when tamed and set to work.

The elephant is a nocturnal animal, but in captivity is forced to work during the daytime, and so, in India, suffers greatly, the immense size and weight and dark color causing the animal to become overheated. To relieve itself it draws from its stomach a quantity of water and sends it in a shower of spray over the body, and as this operation is repeated about every five minutes, the rider of an elephant is subjected to some inconvenience.

It is, however, a curious fact that the water thus drawn from this reservoir provided by nature is perfectly sweet and pure, and Baker says no animal is cleaner or more choice in its selection of food. But the elephant is a wasteful feeder, and, if allowed, will destroy twice as much as he eats. The native elephant keepers understand this, and when feeding their charges make up the rice and plantain into small packages, one of which at a time is handed to the ever expectant trunk.—New York Journal.

O'SHEA AND M'CARTHY.

The Irish Captain Accuses the Latter of Meanness and Mendacity.

CONTINUATION OF THE SILVER POOL INVESTIGATION.

The Canadian Cabinet Busy.—Probable Dissolution of the Parliament.

By Telegraph to the NEWS.

CAPTAIN O'SHEA.

He Pays his Compliments to McCarthy.

LONDON, Jan. 21.—It has become known that Captain O'Shea lately wrote to Justin McCarthy demanding an apology for hinting in a speech that a different color would have been given Parnell's conduct in the divorce case. Gribben had been cross-examining McCarthy's reply not being satisfactory, O'Shea has addressed him as other letters, referring to McCarthy as an "elaborately mendacious dummy of straw, snarling from every seam," and saying that McCarthy possesses two qualifications for his present post—meanness and mendacity. The matter has created a stir.

THE SILVER POOL.

Bockery of Missouri and Others Before the Committee.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—The silver pool investigation committee resumed session this morning. Bockery of Missouri said that he had no personal knowledge of speculation by Senators or Representatives. He had heard no Congressman say that he was interested in any silver pool, but heard Senator Van say that a Senator, or a member, he could not remember which, was implicated.

Francis G. Newlands of Nevada testified that he had made a little money out of silver speculation, but no senator, Representative or officer of the Government was interested with him, directly or indirectly.

Joseph R. Hickey of Fulton, Mo., testified that he was a banker, and had spring purchased silver for speculation. No one was interested with him and he knew nothing of speculation by others.

Senator Vest said, in part, that neither directly or indirectly did he or any one have any interest in silver, and knew nothing about it of his knowledge. One of his colleagues told him after the resolution for an investigation was introduced that he was interested. This resolution, of course, excited some comment among Missourians, it being said that a Missouri Senator or Representative was connected in some way with that matter.

Senator Cameron said that he had heard, after, I am sorry to say, he had done anything wrong and he would make that statement before the commission. He thought he had as much right to do that as to buy corn and wheat, or any other commodity. His action had not been influenced by his interests, because it was after the thing was over. Cameron said he found in after the legislation was passed in the Senate, that David L. Littler managed the matter for him. Cameron said that Littler came to him and told him he could make some money buying silver; that for (Littler) was going to buy some. Cameron said he told Littler to buy some for him, and Littler bought and sold it for him.

SILVERTHORNE'S CASE.

The silver offered today amounted to 1,019,941 ounces, of which 326,993 ounces were purchased at prices ranging from $1.0[illegible] to $1.0[illegible].

DIRECTION OF THE NEXT LEECH

appeared before the House committee on coinage today and talked regarding the various features of the silver question.
