THE SOLDIERS REUNION.

Hayes' Speech on the Occasion.

COLUMBUS, 11.—President Hayes Gen. Sherman and party arrived at 6 o'clock this morning from Washington and were met at the depot by an escort consisting of the United States troops stationed at Columbus Garrison, ex-Soldiers' Association, the Governor's guard, Columbus Cadets, and other military organizations of the city and other places. The procession proceeded to the residence of Dr. C. B. Fullerton, where President Hayes will be entertained and to the residence of T. Ewing Miller, where Gen Sherman and Gen. Pope have been assigned. The camp grounds present a very pretty appearance, being arranged in streets and named from right to left Grant, Sherman, Sheridan, McPherson, Hayes, Gilmore, McCook, McDowell and Ammen. The Ohio soldiers' and sailors' tents are rapidly filling up, 1,500 having been assigned quarters yesterday with the demand greatly increasing. At Fine Art Hall, in the fair ground, are the tattered flags containing their history in mottos. One on the north side reads, "To preserve the Union Ohio furnished 310,654 men," while "Pro patria mortui gloria est; Ohio mourns for 24,591 dead," appears on one side:

A heavy rain, which set in at 1 o'clock, cleared off during the afternoon. It is estimated that over 60,000 strangers are in camp on the grounds and in the city. During the day the Presidential party arrived at the fair grounds and were greeted with a salute of 20 guns. Gen Ward's statement that we were sure of a soldier for the next President, was received with continued cheers. When he had concluded President Hayes was introduced, and being received with loud cheers, said: "The citizens of Ohio who were soldiers in the Union army assembled here, rejoice that we had the glorious privilege of enlisting and serving on the right side in the great conflict for union and equal rights. We rejoice that we have been permitted to live long enough to see and enjoy the results of victory we gained, and measure the vast benefits which it conferred on our country. One fact will illustrate immeasurably the blessings conferred upon the United States by the success of Union arms. The immigration into a country is evidence of that country's prosperity. During our civil war and the disturbed and troubled years, which immediately preceded and followed it, immigration fell off and became of comparatively small importance, but now our country's prosperity, the stability of our government, and the permanent prevalence of peace at home and with foreign nations, are blessings which could not have been enjoyed by this country if Union Arms had failed to have given to the world confidence in the future welfare and greatness of the United States, which is pouring upon our shores such streams of immigration as was never known before. If we take a survey of the globe, we shall find everywhere many people looking forward to the time when they can emigrate to some more favored land. Only one of the great nations is in no danger of losing its capital and labor by immigration. All are losing by this cause except the United States. The United States alone is gaining. There is one flag and in all the world only one, whose protection good men and women born under it will never willingly leave. There is one flag and only one in the world, whose protecting folds, good men and women born under every flag are freely seeking. That flag so loved at home, so longed for by millions abroad, is the old flag under which we marched to save what in our soldier days we were fond of calling "God's country." It is easily seen what chiefly attracts this immigration. It goes where good land is cheap, where labor and capital find profitable employment, where peace and social order prevail and where civil and religious liberty is secure. Ask where in our country does this immigration mainly go? The recent census shows us parts of country where land is cheap and where capital and labor are needed, that are not rapidly increasing in population. In these States it will be found that two things are wanting. Means for popular education are not sufficiently provided, and the good order of society is disturbed by a practical refusal to accept the results of the war for the Union. The two defects, wherever they prevail in our American society, are hostile to an increase of population and to prosperity. They are found generally to exist together. Where popular education prevails, the amendments to the Constitution of the United States, embodying the results of the war, are inviolable. It must perhaps, be conceded that there was one great error in the measures by which it was sought to secure the results of our Union victory. The system of slavery in the South of necessity kept in ignorance 4,000,000 of slaves. It also left unprovided with education a large number of non-slaveholding white people. With the end of the war the slaves became citizens. The uneducated whites remained as they had been, also citizens. Thus the duties and responsibility of citizenship were devolved largely in the States lately in rebellion upon the uneducated people, while and doubled, with what result! Liberty and the exercise of the rights of citizenship are excellent educators.

In many respects we are glad to believe that encouraging progress has been made at the South. A labor system has been organized, material prosperity is increasing, race prejudices and animosities are diminished, the passions and animosities of the war subsiding, and the ancient harmony and concord, and patriotic national sentiments are returning. But after all we cannot but to observe that immigration, which so infallibly tells the true conditions of countries, does not grow largely in the late slaveholding region of the United States. A great deal of cheap and productive lands there can be found where the population is not rapidly increasing. When our revolutionary fathers adopted the ordinance of 1787 for the government of the northwest territory, out of which Ohio and four other great States have been carved, they established as the corner stone of their foundations that virtual to build this edifice "Religion and morality being necessary to good government and the happiness of mankind, schools and the means of education shall forever be encouraged."

Unfortunately for the complete success of the reconstruction in the South, this stone was rejected by its builders. Slavery had been destroyed by war, but its evils live after it and deprive many parts of the South of intelligent self-government, without which, in America at least, great and permanent prosperity is impossible. To perpetuate the Union and abolish slavery were the work of the war; to educate the uneducated is the appropriate work of peace. It is plain that at the end of the war a tremendous change in labor and the social systems of the Southern States left them in no condition to provide for universal popular education. In the recent memorial to Congress on this subject, in behalf of the Peabody education fund, Hon. A. H. H. Stuart, of Virginia, shows that "2,000,000 of children in the Southern States are without the means of instruction," and adds, with great force, where millions of citizens are growing up in greatest ignorance it is obvious that neither individual charity nor resources of impoverished States will be sufficient to meet the emergency. Nothing short of the wealth and power of the Federal Government will suffice to overcome the evil."

The President then said he would deal with the question of education by the aid of the National Government, in the same way that the General Government undertakes public improvements where they are of national importance; but local and private enterprises are inadequate to their prosecution. Wherever in the United States local systems of popular education are inadequate, they should be supplemented by the General Government by devoting to that purpose by suitable legislation with popular safeguards, public lands, or if necessary, appropriations from the national treasury. In conclusion, he said, the soldier of the Union has done his work and done it well. The work of the school master is now in order. Whenever his work shall be well done in all our border, it will be found that there also the principles of the Declaration of independence will be cherished. The sentiment of nationality will prevail. Equal rights, the amendments will be cheerfully obeyed and there will be the home of freedom and the refuge of the oppressed of every race and of every clime."

Mining Decision.

NEW YORK, 11.—The Secretary of the Interior has decided in the case of the protest filed by M. Shaughnessy against the approval by the Surveyor General of Utah of a certain general land survey upon the ground of conflict with other claims already surveyed, that the execution and approval of such surveys, when properly applied for under the mining laws, cannot be made the subject of protest or appeal, except by the party applying. The Secretary holds that the proceeding is ex parte, its only purpose being the identification of the claims by proper reference to its location to enable the party interested to present the same as evidence of boundary and description necessary to procure a patent or in establishing an adverse claim before regularly appointed tribunals. The conflicting rights of all opposing claimants, as well as the legality and sufficiency of the surveys themselves must necessarily be adjudicated before such tribunals, in considering the merits of the application for patent or any other right involved, and cannot be inquired into or adjudicated upon by the Surveyor General or the Department. In connection with the execution of the survey, this decision of the Secretary affirms a previous decision in the case of the Commissioner of the General Land Office.

After the Inspectors.

Inspectors Jayne and Mathews, local steamboat inspectors, not having paid any attention to the indictments found against them in connection with the Seawanahaka disaster, the United States commissioner has issued a bench warrant for their arrest. The president of the steamboat company appears in the commissioner's office ready to go bail.

Burglars' Work.

The Evening Post announced burglars blew open a safe at Clarkville, N. J., last night, and obtained securities of the St. Joseph and Pacific Railroad company and of the Kansas and Nebraska Railroad company, valued at $25,000, belonging to Edgar T. Hunt.

World's Fair.

At a meeting of the commissioners of the World's Fair to-day an executive committee was appointed and instructed to open subscription books. A committee was also appointed to issue an address to the people of the United States.

Knight's Templars' Conclave.

CHICAGO, 11.—The preparations for the grand triennial conclave of Knight's Templar next week, are well advanced, and prominent buildings about the city are beginning to look gay with Masonic bunting. It is now thought that 100,000 of the Masonic fraternity will be present, and as many more other strangers are expected. Thirty thousand Templars will move in the grand procession on Tuesday morning, and handsome arches are being erected all along the line of march. Twelve hundred tents are being pitched along the lake front from the exposition building to 12th Street. It is expected the hotels will be so full on Tuesday night that guests will have to sleep standing, and they will be packed so close that none will be in danger of losing their balance. Judge Charles F. Irwin, of Placerville, and H. H. Pearson, of San Francisco, advance guard of the 150 California Knights, have arrived.

Indian Surrender.

The Washington Inter-Ocean's special says: The Interior Department was informed to-day that 660 of Sitting Bull's followers have surrendered up to date at Fort Keogh, Montana. Secretary Schurz telegraphs the department to-day that he will visit Fort Keogh after Yellowstone Park. He proposes to designate agencies where the surrendered Sioux are to be located. He will return on the 10th of September.

Connecticut Republicans.

HARTFORD, Ct., 11.—The republican State Convention organized today with Augustus Brandage as permanent President. After his address Hawley was nominated for Governor on the second ballot by acclamation, having received 208 votes with five of a majority on the first ballot. George W. H. Bulkely was nominated for Lieutenant-Governor, having received 111 votes on the first ballot for Governor.

Hartford, 11.—In the afternoon the State ticket was completed. Resolutions were adopted ratifying the nominations of Garfield and Arthur; endorsing the principles affirmed by the last National Republican Convention, and asserting that the election of the republican candidates and the triumph of republican principles will insure a continuance of that sound financial policy to which we owe our revived prosperity; will secure a full protection of free American labor from all unjust competition, will spread free education over every portion of the country and place beyond all peril the civil and political rights of every citizen in the Republic.

The congressional convention of the First District renominated Horace Davis for Congress without any opposing candidate, and Claus Speckles for presidential elector, after considerable discussion over the charge that he employed Chinese, which was disproven, except as to his sugar plantation in the Sandwich Islands.

Frank Wallin was arrested to-day on a charge of embezzlement committed in Chicago, and was turned over to an officer who recently arrived here with a requisition.

A Sacramento dispatch says: The Fourth Congressional District convention has renominated Romualdo Pacheco for Congress; Thomas R. Bard, presidential elector, and Walter S. Moore, alternate.

Marine Improvements.

WASHINGTON, 11.—The report of Col. Mendall, engineer in charge of the river and harbor improvements in California, of work completed during the year ending June 30th, 1880, together with an outline of the work in contemplation for the ensuing year, has been received at the War Department. In regard to the Oakland harbor improvements for the ensuing year, the report says that the first step in continuing the improvements will be to raise the north jetty about four feet, or up to high water mark, for a distance of 6,400 feet, beginning at the shore south of the jetty, also to be raised to high water mark for a distance of 7,750 feet. It is also proposed to widen the channel by dredging to 300 feet. The original estimate for this work, was in round numbers, $1,345,000.

DENVER, 11.—In the State Firemen's tournament to-day, the Bates hose, of Denver, won the belt for hose trains; running the 500 feet, making the connection at the plug, laying 200 feet of hose, break coupling, attach the nozzle and getting water in 35½ seconds. In running off ties for the hook and ladder teams, the hooks No. 2 of Denver, won the belt, running 500 feet and raising twenty-five feet of ladder and putting a man on the top in 25½ seconds. The straight away race for hook and ladder, 600 feet, was won by the same team in 23¾ seconds. The straight away for hose, distance 700 feet, was won by the Alpheres, of Georgetown, in 27¼ seconds.
