WITH THE PIONEERS.

More Of the Proceedings Monday Afternoon at Saltair.

NAMES OF VETERANS PRESENT.

Reminiscences of Pioneer Times—Zion's Camp, the Battalion Boys and the Handcart Companies.

Soon after the arrival at Saltair yesterday afternoon of the 2:45 train from the city the people gathered in the immense pavilion. On the stand, seated in comfortable chairs, were the following named Pioneers of 1847: President Wilford Woodruff, Patriarchs Lorenzo D. Young and John Brown, Bishop Jacob Weiler, Heman Walker, Geo. W. Brown, Aaron F. Farr, Horace Thornton, Lyman Curtis, Wm. C. A. Smoot, Geo. P. Billings, Thomas P. Cloward, John S. Gleason, Joseph Egbert and Green Flake (colored). There were also present about twenty-five members of the Mormon Battalion, among whom were Israel Evans, of Lehi; Joseph Skeen(?), of American Fork; Lorenzo Clark, John Thompson, Joseph Taylor, John Rybee(?), James Owens, Jesse Brown and Alexander Brown, of Ogden and vicinity, James S. Brown, Geo. W. Boyd and Oliver G. Workman, of Salt Lake City, John W. Hess, of Farmington, James Oakley, of Springville, and Clinton D. Bennett(?), of Cassia county, Idaho. Of other distinguished visitors present were Presidents George Q. Cannon, Joseph F. Smith and Lorenzo Snow, Historian Franklin D. Richards, Governor Caleb W. West, Secretary Charles C. Richards, Elders Angus M. Cannon, Joseph E. Taylor, Charles W. Penrose, Abraham O. Smoot, Professor Hinsdale and many others.

About 3 o'clock the vast assembly was called to order by Elder Charles R. Savage, who acted as master of ceremonies, and the exercises were commenced with music by the Pleasant Grove brass band, after which prayer was offered by Patriarch John Brown. Elder William C. Dunbar then sang The Merry Mormons in his original, entertaining style, and Elder Savage next introduced the following Pioneers, each of whom made a few appropriate remarks:

President Wilford Woodruff, who expressed his great pleasure at meeting so many of his fellow Pioneers on the present occasion.

Pioneer Lorenzo D. Young, 87 years old; the only surviving brother of the late President Brigham Young.

Pioneer Jacob Weiler, 86 years old; Bishop of the Third ward, Salt Lake City.

Pioneer George W. Brown, of Charleston, Wasatch Co., Utah; he is 67 years old and was among those who did the first plowing on the present site of Salt Lake City.

Pioneer Heman Walker, of Pleasant Grove, Utah Co., 74 years old; he bore an earnest testimony to the truth of the Gospel of Jesus Christ.

Pioneer John Brown, of Pleasant Grove, 74 years old; he related an interesting incident in which he and President Woodruff figured conspicuously, they having been lost from the main company, as the Pioneers of 1847 were passing Independence Rock on their road to the valley.

Pioneer Aaron F. Farr, of Ogden, 76 years old; he was overjoyed when contemplating the marvelous changes which had occurred in Utah since the arrival of the Pioneers in 1847.

Elder George Goddard then rendered the song entitled "Utah and the Mormons;" the vast assemblage assisting on the chorus.

Pioneer George P. Billings, of Manti, Sanpete county, was next introduced. He thought he was better qualified to kill snakes and build bridges than to make a speech, but this he would say that he knew for a surety that the late President Brigham Young was led to these mountains by inspiration.

Pioneer Horace Thornton, of Glenwood, Sevier county, was the next speaker. He said he had been a member of the Mormon Church for upwards of 55 years; knew the Gospel as revealed through the Prophet Joseph Smith to be true, and rejoiced exceedingly in laboring, as he did, in the Temples of the Lord, for the salvation of both the living and the dead.

Pioneer Lyman Curtis, 82 years old, of Salem, Utah county, who was then introduced to the assembly, referred to his personal experience during the persecutions of the Saints in Missouri and Illinois, and how he found a barren, desolate valley, abounding with crickets and sunflowers, where now stands one of the most beautiful cities on the earth.

Pioneer Levi N. Kendall, of Mapleton, Utah Co., next made a few remarks, followed by Pioneer John S. Gleason, of Pleasant Grove, 75 years old, who invoked the blessing of God upon modern Israel and all its friends.

Pioneer Green Flake, 66 years old, the only survivor of the three colored men who were numbered among the Pioneers of 1847, gave a short speech, in which he said that he had always felt proud of the distinction of being one of the Pioneers of Utah; had watched with great interest the improvements made since 1847.

Pioneer Wm. C. A. Smoot, of the Sugar House ward, expressed gratitude to the committee of arrangements and others who had contributed on this and other occasions to do honor to those whom honor was due. That he was numbered among the Pioneers of 1847 was due to the fact that he was a creature of circumstances.

Mrs. Elizabeth Hunter(?), 72 years old, a resident of the 11th ward, Salt Lake City, performed with grace and apparent ease a lively Scottish dance, dressed in a genuine Highland costume.

President Wilford Woodruff then gave a short address. He referred to the fact that when he and his fellow Pioneers arrived in the valley in 1847, they were all young and able-bodied men, most of whom are this day grown old and passed beyond the veil, among them the chief of the Pioneers, the late and honored President Brigham Young. The few survivors of the Pioneer band were nearly all feeble and old, and would ere long be numbered among their friends on the other side. In the success which had attended the labors of the Pioneers and those who followed them in those early times, he clearly saw the fulfillment of ancient prophecies. Truly the barren waste, characteristic of the Great Salt Lake Valley in 1847, has been transformed into a beautiful and fruitful field. In referring to pioneer incidents, he spoke of the immense herds of buffaloes which the Pioneers met on the Platte river. It took them three days to pass through them, and so numerous were they that it was found necessary to place guards around the camp at night to keep the animals out of the corral. He also related an amusing incident which transpired soon after the arrival in the valley when some of the Pioneers made their first visit to the Lake and took a plunge in its waters. Green Flake, the colored man who had just spoke, was one of the party. After coming out of the briny water his entire body being covered with salt, Mr. Flake was for once in his life a white man, and remained thus until by application of fresh water he regained his natural color.

Pioneer Joseph Egbert, 79 years old, of Kaysville, Davis county, was next introduced to the congregation; he was, however, too feeble to speak.

Elder James S. Brown, of Salt Lake City, one of the Mormon Battalion and one of the first discoverers of gold in California, was then introduced. He said: "God bless you all; remember the Mormon Battalion."

Mrs. Judith Hughes Hall Tate Hughes, 84 years old, of the Sixteenth ward, Salt Lake City, who sang in the choir in Nauvoo, Illinois, and later drove a team across the plains, sang in a clear, distinct voice the song entitled "The difference between a Mormon and a Saint."

Elder Martin Lenzi, 70 years old, of the Twelfth ward, Salt Lake City, performed a fancy dance in a very able manner.

President George Q. Cannon delivered a short and appropriate speech. He was not, he said, one of the Pioneers, though he came to the valley the same year as they did, and passed through the peculiar experience of the first winter in the valley, when the people lived on short rations, and many of them could for one time being think of nothing more desirable than to get enough to satisfy their hunger. It was simply marvelous to contemplate such a change as that which has taken place in Utah since 1847. The transformation from a barren desert to what Salt Lake valley now presents is complete; none of the Pioneers were visionary enough to foretell that such a building as the present Saltair should ever grace the shores of the Dead Sea of the West. The speaker would never forget the sufferings and privations of the women and children who spent the winter of 1847-8 in the valley. He could not express his gratitude to the Lord for the abundant crops and golden fields of today. The speaker suggested the organization of a Pioneer society, in which should be enrolled not only the 143 souls who led the van to the valley under the immediate leadership of President Brigham Young, but also those who followed them a few months later, and even the companies who migrated hither in the years 1848, 1849 and 1850, all of whom were Pioneers in the truest sense of that word. President Cannon closed his remarks by invoking the blessings of the Lord upon the Pioneers and all the people.

Elder John Y. Smith, who had crossed the plains with handcarts, sang the old-time handcart song commencing with "Ye Saints who dwell on Europe's shores." After which Elder Thomas Dobson entertained the assembly for a few moments by dancing the Fisher's hornpipe to music produced by the six survivors of a quadrille band which figured prominently in social circles in Salt Lake City 35 years ago.

Regarding this dance, it may be stated that at a time when the handcart company of which Brother Dobson was a member were almost overcome by cold and hunger and fatigue, and were on the verge of despair in the face of what seemed almost certain death, a few of the younger and more robust ones, who were seeking to revive the spirits of the others, pulled out the endgate of a wagon, and throwing it down asked Brother Dobson if he would dance for them. Although Brother Dobson had both feet frozen and was suffering greatly, he cheerfully complied with the dance given by him at Saltair. The company was aroused to new hope and energy, and relief soon reached them from the valley.

Those who played in the band at Saltair for Brother Dobson's dance were, Phil Margetts, who came to Utah in 1850, Harrison Sperry, a "49er," Ebenezer Beesley, who emigrated to the valley in 1859, Hap. C. Pender(?), of the 1851 emigration, and Wm. H. Foster and Joshua Midgley, both of whom first saw Utah in 1852.

Now followed half an hour's intermission, during which the Pioneers and a few other specially invited guests were treated to a sumptuous dinner spread on a large table on the lower floor of the building. President George Q. Cannon and other men of prominence, as a token of high esteem for the aged veterans, did waiting service at the tables.

Dinner being over, the Pioneers were once more escorted to the upper floor, where they and their friends engaged in a good old-time dance, in which the figures from the old-fashioned cotillions were introduced and executed with that precision and vim which were characteristic of the good days gone by.

The whole proceedings were closed by the vast assembly giving three hearty cheers for the Pioneers. That young Utah appreciates gray hairs and experience, and understands how to honor old age, was clearly demonstrated throughout the entire proceedings of the day, and the Pioneers themselves, appreciating the honors bestowed upon them, were almost overcome by their feelings.

Owing to the lack of time a meritorious poetical essay, composed for the occasion by Sister Elizabeth D. Kenney(?) of the Sixteenth ward, Salt Lake City, was not read, nor was a poetical production on "Our Utah," by Sister Phebe C. Young, wife of one of the Pioneers. As the last named is quite brief [illegible], we publish it here.

OUR UTAH.

[illegible]

Besides the Pioneer relics mentioned in yesterday's News, the following additional historical articles were on exhibition at Saltair:

The wagon in which Heber C. Kimball crossed the plains in the Pioneer company of 1847; it is now owned by Philip Pugsley(?), of Salt Lake City.

Trumpet made by the late Thomas Bullock, clerk of the Pioneer camp. Below a figure representing a man blowing a trumpet are the names in full of all the Pioneers of 1847. It also states that there were in the company 143 Pioneers, 3 women, 2 children, 73 wagons, 1 boat, 1 cannon, 93 horses, 52 mules, 66 oxen, 19 cows. On the back are given the dates of departure from Winter Quarters and arrival at Salt Lake Valley of the Pioneer company.

A large historical painting ornamented with blue fringe, representing Zion's Camp on the march from Ohio to Missouri, owned by the late Wm. F. Cahoon, a member of said camp, and now in possession of his daughter, Violet Cannon. On it is inscribed in large letters "Hold fast a few of Zion's Camp of 1834."

[illegible] brought by Pioneers of 1847, now owned by Henry P. Richards(?).

Provision box used by President Brigham Young while crossing the plains in 1847, now owned by H. Morris Young.

Last tie of the Utah Central railway, laid January 10, 1870, and last spike, driven on that date by President Young, in Salt Lake City.

Hand saddle used by Sister Susan Ashley at Nauvoo in 1846, brought to Utah in 1847 by Susan A. Stringam.

Scales owned by the late W. S. S. Willis, of Lehi, and used by the following named members of the Mormon Battalion, also discoverers and workers of gold on Mormon Island, in California, in weighing their gold dust, in March and April, 1848: W. S. S. Willis, Wilford Hudson, Ira J. Willis, James D. Martin, Israel Evans, Ephraim Green, Francis Woodard, James R. Allred.

The committee had intended to present to the assembly the several members of the Mormon Battalion who were in attendance, and to have had them form in line on the floor of the large pavilion, but the lengthy program prepared prevented this being done before the intermission; and after re-gathering upstairs it was impossible to gather the members together, some of them having returned to the city by train and the rest being scattered throughout the building. The members of the Mormon Battalion share with the Pioneers in every respect the love and good will of the people of Utah. They, like the Pioneers, placed their lives and all upon the altar in the interest of their families, their country and their friends, and the names of those composing that noble and brave military organization should be held in honorable remembrance throughout all generations to come.

Of Zion's Camp there was present, besides President Woodruff, [illegible] Foster, of this city. Elder Foster is slightly deaf through age, but his eyesight is so good that he can read the newspapers without glasses.

Of Clinton D. Bennett(?), one of the Mormon Battalion, it may be related that he possesses a wonderful memory, and through this faculty can call the roll of his company, of nearly a hundred men, in regular order, without an omission or mistake. His home is at Oakley, Cassia county, Idaho.

AMUSEMENTS.

THE BUTTERFLIES—A large and brilliant audience—larger and more brilliant, surprising to say, than that drawn by Frohman's stock company last month—assembled at the Theater last night to see Frohman's comedy company, headed by John Drew. But John Drew was always strong in Salt Lake, and on the several occasions when he has appeared here with Daly's company in such pieces as Seven Twenty-eight, The Passing Regiment, Nancy & Co., Needles and Pins and The Taming of the Shrew, he has divided the honors with peerless Ada Rehan herself. Added to his own popularity was the interest attaching to his first appearance here as a star, and the decided interest attaching to Miss Maud Adams, a Salt Lake girl, who since she was last here has taken several very prominent steps up the ladder of fame. A most cordial reception was given both Mr. Drew and Miss Adams, and both were evidently very much touched by its warmth. Mr. Drew—"dear old Drew" as one lady admirer has called him—is all pervading in his cleverness as ever he was in the best days of Daly's company; his inimitable use of his eyes and his mustache can alone start the risibles of an audience, and whenever he is on the stage the interest can be relied on to be kept to the highest point, and that apparently whether or not there is anything intrinsically interesting going forward. His abilities are not by any means called into play by the requirements of Butterflies, in fact the play is distinctly light waisted, and but for the clever handling it receives from the excellent company it would leave a very unsatisfied feeling with the audience. Tonight in the Mask Ball, which is a good deal on the order of farce comedy, Mr. Drew has what we consider better opportunities for a full display of his talents. Miss Adams plays the heroine with rare sweetness, ease, archness and delicacy—with a simple and natural straightforwardness that carries every thing before it. Her method is so fresh and unconventional that no one wonders at the marked favor she finds wherever she appears. She shares some of the heartiest applause of the night. Mrs. Adams, her mother, was accorded a handsome remembrance in the shape of a hearty round of applause, and she played an elderly part with much truth and sweetness. Mr. Harwood's Hiram Greene, Mr. Baker's Englishman, Mr. Byron's "Barry", and Mr. Leslie Allen's Ribet were all well drawn and well rounded characterizations, while Miss Belmont made a very pretty hit in the ingenue role.

Tonight closes the engagement with the Mask Ball, the play in which Maude Adams' tipsy scene has been so much written about.

ARRAH NA POGUE is running to fair business at the Lyceum this week, with Mr. O'Malley as Shaun the Post.

SMITH DRUG STORE FIRE.

The Loss Adjusted by Insurance Men at Eight Hundred Dollars.

The loss sustained by A. C. Smith & Co., druggists, has been made by the insurance men who made an inventory of the damaged stock and placed the loss at $800. The policies were held in companies represented by Conway and Donellan and W. E. Smedley, and the promptness with which the loss was adjusted is highly satisfactory to those concerned.

COURTS OF THE CITY.

Judge Bartch Devoted an Hour to Civil Business Today.

A RECEIVER'S APPLICATION.

Charge of Horse Stealing—A Couple Held for Adultery—The Probate Division, etc.

Judge Bartch held court for about one hour this morning and then adjourned until tomorrow. Chief Justice Merritt did not go upon the bench today and it is not expected that he will do much in that direction before next Saturday. The subjoined matters came before his honor, Judge Bartch:

N. A. Scribner vs Frank T. Burmester et al. Leave was given to file amended complaint.

E. Griffiths vs A. B. Gibson(?). Motion to dissolve attachment argued and submitted.

Two Russians named Max Kechl and Saul Kechl, now residents of Salt Lake, were admitted to citizenship.

RECEIVER RAYBOULD'S [illegible]

On behalf of Receiver B. G. Raybould, in the case of Wm. H. Smith(?) and Clyde J. DeWoody, plaintiffs, vs. Herbert Pembroke and Sarah J. Pembroke, defendants, Judge Bartch(?) presented a statement setting forth that the property of which Mr. Raybould has been appointed receiver consists of buildings upon leased ground the monthly rental of which is $177 per month; that there is due and remains unpaid on said rents the sum of $196; that by the terms of the lease of the real estate under which the buildings were erected the taxes were to be paid by the lessee. The buildings, says the receiver, are in many respects in bad condition, and repairs should be made thereon to render them suitable for occupation by tenants. Hence the receiver asked for an order of court authorizing him to pay from the rents collected the ground rent due and that may become due as the same matures, taxes and for improvements, and to put the property in proper condition.

His honor made an order in compliance with these requests.

HIS HEARING TOMORROW.

Robert Green, charged with stealing a span of horses belonging to Mrs. Mary Stevenson, of South Cottonwood precinct, on November 15, 1893, was taken before Commissioner Greenman this morning and the hearing set for tomorrow at 10 a.m. His bonds were fixed at $500. The defendant was arrested at Brighton yesterday.

IN FORBIDDEN PATHS.

In Commissioner Greenman's court this morning, James Coatsworth and Mrs. Nellie Root(?), the couple arrested last Sunday morning, had a preliminary hearing. It resulted in the holding of both to await the grand jury's pleasure. Their bond was fixed at $250 each.

PROBATE COURT TODAY.

Judge Blair(?) made the subjoined orders this morning:

Estate of Wm. S. Harmon, deceased. Order of sale of personal property.

Estate of Jane Fishley(?) Chesney, deceased. Hearing on final account and petition for distribution. Account allowed and decree of distribution entered.

Estate of Christopher Merkley, deceased. This matter again came up for discussion—now on petition for the appointment of an administrator. Nelson Merkley was appointed on filing a bond of $26,000.

Estate of Sarah D. Merkley, deceased, wife of the above named testator, who died five days after her husband. Hearing on petition for letters of administration. Nelson Merkley appointed administrator in this case also, on filing a bond of $2,000.

OGDEN.

OGDEN, UTAH, - AUG. 21, 1894.

A Truant Girl's Experience.

In Commissioner Terme's(?) court yesterday a warrant was sworn out charging Charles Brown, a young man of Ogden city, with [illegible]. It is alleged that Brown induced the young girl by flattering promises to leave her home (a very respectable one on the bench) a week ago last Sunday night, and took her to the Windsor hotel, she registering as "Miss Fletcher Logan," since which time they have occupied room 17 at the hotel. The fact that the girl had left home was communicated to the police and Detective Pointer(?) took the case in hand. He was but a short time in locating the truant young lady, and soon had her returned to her heart broken mother.

There are a number of smart young fellows that infest our public [illegible], picking up innocent girls and endeavoring to induce them to accompany them to their lodgings. They are known to the police and should be run in; a good dose of [illegible] would be good medicine for them.

DEMOCRATIC MEETING.

The Territorial Convention to be Held In Salt Lake September 15th.

The Democratic Territorial committee met in their new campaign headquarters in the Hooper block on First South street this morning at 10:30, for the purpose of fixing the time and place for holding the convention to nominate a candidate for delegate to Congress.

After some discussion it was unanimously decided to issue a call setting forth that the convention would be held in the Theater, this city, September 15th. The apportionment of delegates had not been made at press time late afternoon, but the list will be completed this evening.

Will Finish Up Today.

The Territorial Board of Equalization expects this afternoon to complete its work of comparing the assessed valuation of the various counties for 1894 with the year preceding, with the object of equalizing the same where found necessary. All the counties but three have now sent in their corrected totals: these are Garfield, Kane and Millard. Chairman M. H. Bowler(?) stated to a representative of the News today that the total assessed valuation of the Territory would be this year about [illegible], against about $117,-[illegible] for 1893. Of this reduction Salt Lake county has contributed about one-half.

Through to Juab.

The Union Pacific 5:30 train which leaves this city every afternoon will run clear through to Juab tomorrow night, instead of stopping at Provo, the usual terminus of that service. The change is occasioned by the southern excursion.
