Death of Sister Allred.

Editor Deseret News:

Melissa Norton Allred was born in New Lisbon, State of Indiana, December 23rd, 1824. She was the daughter of David and Elizabeth Norton and wife of P. H. Allred. She died July 28th, 1892. Her grandfather fought in the Revolutionary war, under General George Washington. She, with her parents, joined the Church in an early day and moved from Indiana when twelve years old to the State of Missouri, in President A. O. Smoot's company; settled near Haun's Mill; shared in the persecutions of the Saints and came near being in the Haun's Mill massacre. Her father and family gathered to the mill for protection the night previous to the massacre. Father Norton had a premonition that trouble would occur and that if he remained he would be slain. His home being in a rather secluded place he returned with his family, consequently they escaped injury. The day after the massacre David Evans and others, of the survivors, took refuge in a thicket on Brother Norton's farm. To them, in company with her mother, the deceased carried provisions until peace was restored. Many other incidents of kindness peculiar to Sister Allred's disposition might be mentioned, but space will not permit. Next, through the exterminating order of Governor Boggs, the family were compelled to flee into the State of Illinois. They participated in the persecutions in Nauvoo, the enemy being continually on their trail. The family were again compelled to abandon their home and fled to Council Bluffs in the State of Iowa, near Winter Quarters, on the Missouri river. It was at the last mentioned place that deceased became the wife of P. H. Allred, February 2nd, 1848. The following summer, sister and brother Allred emigrated to Utah in President Brigham Young's company and settled in the Old Fort, Salt Lake City. She with her husband shared the hardships peculiar to this then barren and uncultivated region, suffered many times for the want of food and clothing, but dividing their scanty means with their friends and also the Indians. In the fall of 1854 Sister Allred and family located in Lehi City, Utah county, where they resided until the time of her death. She had been a perpetual sufferer for nineteen years, never at any time being free from pain. But was possessed of a powerful constitution, and struggled along through all those years of affliction. It has been a mystery to those acquainted with her how she survived so long. She was of a kind, motherly disposition, imparting of her substance to the poor and destitute. She never could do too much for suffering humanity. The day she died she remarked that she had not felt so well during all her past years of affliction.

The day previous to her death she walked 125 yards to see the procession of July 24th. In the afternoon she went to her son James Allred's to dinner with her friends. On the day of her death she arose in the morning, ate her breakfast, did up her house work, partook of dinner and afterwards resumed work about the house. She finally laid down upon her bed to rest, when suddenly she called to her husband and remarked that she was fainting. He went to her assistance, whereupon she closed her eyes and passed away without a struggle.

Thus departed an honest, noble mother of God, to await the morn of the first resurrection. Too much cannot be said of her kind-hearted husband for untiring and unceasing efforts during her years of affliction to comfort his wife.

Sister Allred was the mother of eight children (5 sons and 3 daughters) two of whom preceded her beyond the veil. She leaves a husband, six children, thirty-five grandchildren and a wide circle of friends to mourn her departure. The funeral services were held at the family residence at 4 p. m., on the afternoon of the 29th of July, Bishop T. R. Cutler presiding. The Lehi Ward Choir rendered the opening prayer. Brother J. L. [illegible] and [illegible] excellent singing appropriate to the occasion. Brother T. R. Cutler, Wm. Clark, E. H. Davis and Israel Evans spoke in eulogistic terms of the deceased and offered consoling remarks to the relatives and friends. At 5 p. m. the remains were conducted to their last resting place, followed by a large concourse of people. The dedicatory prayer at the grave was offered by Bishop Cutler. E. D.

Sanpete Conference.

The regular quarterly Conference of the Sanpete Stake of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints was held in Mount Pleasant on the 13th and 14th of August, 1892, according to previous appointment. Counselor Henry Beal presiding. Owing to his ill health and death in his family, President Peterson was unable to attend. At the opening of conference there were present, President Eyring, of the Presidency of the Seventies; Counselors Henry and John B. Maiben of the Stake Presidency and several members of the High Council. The Bishoprics of the several wards were mostly represented. There was a large attendance of Saints, especially on Sunday, when the spacious bowery was filled to overflowing. On Monday, Apostle Lund was in attendance. The usual conference business was attended to—bishops reports of wards, statistical and Sunday school reports, presentation of General and Stake authorities, who were all sustained by unanimous vote. The names of two brethren were presented and sustained to be ordained High Priests. The organizations of the several quorums were considered complete and satisfactory and in working order.

The speakers during conference were Counselor Beal and Maiben, President Eyring, Elder C. H. Wheelock and Apostle A. H. Lund. The general duties of the Saints were the subjects treated, together with such themes as education, and gratitude to God for the many blessings we enjoy.

Four regular meetings were held and on Thursday evening there was a Priesthood meeting. Conference adjourned for three months, to meet at Ephraim.

Clerk of Conference.

Six Pears for Market.

In reply to the query, "Name the six best profitable pears for market, naming how they should be grown, as standard or dwarf," Mr. [illegible], of Buffalo, sent this answer to the Western New York Horticultural society:

Bartlett, Howell, Bosc, B. Clairgeau, Duchesse d'Angouleme, Beurre d'Anjou—Bartlett and Bosc as standards, and Howell, Duchess, Clairgeau and d'Anjou as dwarf. With these I have as good success as with the standards, since they have all their roots protected with a good grass sod. It is at the root where the destructive enemies of the ever changing climate play havoc with the dwarf pears. The trunk of the dwarf pear is as hardy as the standard, and while from a too heavy bearing for a number of years may bring hurt, that can be avoided by a judicious thinning and proper cutting back of the standard branches.

A good mulching sod gives a better protection than any top dressing of manure, the sod is always on hand, whereas the manure is sometimes not applied when needed. My earliest planting of dwarfs was in 1851, and they are yet as sound and thrifty as ever, bearing from two to eight bushels each yearly; in grass for the last twenty-five years, with no other care except a yearly top dressing of manure, which can be put on at any time between November and May. The rolling of cattle can well be carried on with this course. The sod, top or June grass is fit to cut at least by the first of June, and if the manure and liquid be returned the product of the trees pays better than cultivation.

Cultivating Orchards.

At a meeting of the Ontario Fruit Growers' association these remarks were made: It is by no means necessary that one should lose the use of the soil altogether, as we can raise roots, corn, peas, buckwheat, hay, pasture and even an occasional crop of barley, not only without hurting the young orchard, but actually to its benefit, if accompanied by a judicious use of manure. As potash is the main element withdrawn from the soil by a crop of apples, in the application of manure we should govern ourselves accordingly. Three crops of rye will ruin an orchard. From the time of the planting till the death of the tree not a single crop of either rye, wheat or oats should be taken from the land. The orchard will not stand these crops and at the same time produce apples.

Things That Are Told.

As good authority as Professor Bailey says that propagating by cutting is not a deteriorating or devitalizing process.

A writer in Orchard and Garden affirms that "the apples from the Blue [illegible]" [illegible]
