Maryland Conference.

PRATT, Allegany County, Md., October 5, 1896.

To the Editor:

Following is a report of the Maryland Conference of the Northern States mission of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints as held at Pratt, Allegany county, Maryland, October 3d, 4th and 5th, at the residence of Elder George Hymas.

Conference commenced October 3d at 10 a. m. under a large bower with good audience in attendance. President G. Symons presiding. Elder Cyrus Neff opened the session on the first principle of the Gospel, faith. Elder George W. Parrish then addressed the conference on the second principle of the Gospel and preparatory to baptism. Elder John Y. Barlow then addressed the conference on the first two principles of the Gospel and urged all to the necessity of the humble Elders and their testimony. Elder A. J. Allen spoke on baptism as the third principle of the Gospel; he made frequent quotations from the Scriptures showing that baptism was essential to salvation in the days of the Savior and was as necessary in this age of the world; that baptism is by immersion, and to be effective must be performed by one having divine authority. Elder A. J. Broderick also spoke on the principle of baptism and the Holy Ghost. Elder A. M. Palmer addressed the conference and bore his testimony to the truth of the Gospel as revealed through the Prophet Joseph Smith and exhorted all that would comply with the proper ordinances that they would obtain a testimony.

Elder Joseph Haines next addressed the conference briefly on the three principles named; he bore his testimony to the truth of the Gospel. Elder Edward Tanner also addressed the conference; spoke of the organization of the Church and of the authority possessed therein.

Sunday, at 10 a. m.—Elder Samuel G. Spencer then addressed the conference on Church organization, delivering a powerful and convincing discourse thereon.

At 2 p. m. services Elder Samuel G. Spencer again addressed the meeting on curtailing the law.

Monday, Oct. 5th, a preliminary meeting was held. First, Cornelius Richardson read to the Elders a number of letters from President Spencer, which gave down rules and regulations, and other instructions and advice to the Elders, all of which was received with satisfaction and pleasure by the Elders. President Spencer gave the Elders the benefit of his experience as a missionary; gave advice that will help and assist them in their labors. He said he was desirous of hearing from the Elders whether they were willing to travel without purse or scrip. All present expressed themselves as being willing to follow out these instructions. After sacrament was administered meeting closed.

As a result of our conference two more souls were added to the fold of Christ, the ordinance being performed by Elder Joshua Tailey. Several others have applied for baptism. The Saints are likewise all feel that they have had a significant feast in this conference. Next week I can write will give to the good people of this locality the credit they deserve for their kindness and goodness to the Elders and visiting Saints. Everything that could be done for the comfort of the Elders was done.

Elders W. J. Holbrook and Albert J. Allen were honorably released to return home.

Following is a list of Elders laboring in the conference with postoffice address:

President of Maryland conference, Hester F. Robertson and Edmund Fenner Jr., Rockville, Montgomery county, Md.

A. J. Brockbank and P. R. Gillespie, Romney, Hampshire county, W. Va.

A. M. Palmer and George M. White, Westminster, Carroll county, Md.

The following Elders were appointed to labor in the state of Pennsylvania:

President Cornelius Richardson, Huntingdon, Huntingdon county, Penn.

Elder G. W. Parrish and new companion, Danville, Montour county, Penn.

Elder John Y. Barlow and new companion, Butler, Butler county, Penn.

Elder William Hill and new companion, Lebanon, Lebanon county, Penn.

Elders Joshua Selley and John R. Crawford, Emporium, Cameron county, Penn.

EBENEZER TANNER JR.,
Secretary Maryland Conference.

AMUSEMENTS.

Romeo at the Theater.—Following so closely the phenomenal run of patronage accorded the Sam Davis company last week at the Theater, was an unfortunate thing for the talented Julia Marlowe Taber and her husband, Robert Taber, for the attendance at the opening play of their engagement last night was only fair, though the lack of numbers did not lessen the keen appreciation of the performance. Varied predictions have been indulged in regarding the success of the venture in dramatizing George Eliot's famous novel Romola, and it has been said that no prediction that could be given of it would prove of sufficient interest to insure success, but the dramatization by Edwin A. Barrow as interpreted by the Tabers last night almost certainly removes all doubt as to its future success. True, in the hands of a less talented company, the interesting effects would suffer and the crowning events fall flat. The play contains only the main features of the novel, but the scenes are so interestingly grouped that the subject's foundation for the story is at once outlined and speedily developed. Romola is depicted by Mrs. Taber in a manner of a Rosalind and Cordelia, all sweetness, trusting and loving daughter and wife, and in the scene where she discovers the perfidy of her guardian, who has been making a double life, she does her best work of the evening. When she discovers to her husband his disloyalty to the dead and turns from him the train of her confidence regarding himself, the pain and distress depicted upon her countenance appears almost too natural to be overdone. Robert Taber, while assuming the disagreeable part of Tito Melema, the husband, was nevertheless fully appreciated. He has the manner and actions reminiscent of Mantlini and in the definition of his letter the last night he appeared the picture of perfect gaiety and heartlessness, while in his subsequent scenes he was equally well depicted. He is a clever actor and his specialty has been good work. Mr. Rice as the father and Dodson Mitchell as the godfather both acquitted themselves creditably, the latter doing some splendid work. The cast can be sets of Mr. Aiken, the Italian barber of Tito. The scenic effects were gorgeous, most of them being specially prepared for this production. Mr. Webb's concerts again delighted the audience with some very choice selections. Tonight Art You Lose It will be given with Julia Marlowe taber as Rosalind.

At the Grand.—The week opened at this house with the production of Max Hanson before only a fair and audience, due to the fact that the theater-going public have not yet fully recovered for week's attention. Max Hanson is one of the strong names that have been prominent with so much success by the Robinsons. It has been the date by them and was also put over the Salt Lake Theater stage by Chas. B. Collins and Mr. O'Malley, at one time and later, a few years ago, the cast including Judge McNally. The performance last night was a good one and gave the company a chance to display their capabilities. Mr. Robinson in the title role, Mr. Edwards as Steve Harlan, Mr. Simpson as Tom Hudson, Mr. Bishop as Sir Reginald the modest boy, and George H. Edwards as Uncle Barton serves to fill the houses, not forgetting new little Ida Jacob Cooper, and Shirley Jones, who received merited applause for their clever work. The balance of the cast was certainly correct. Max Hanson will continue throughout the week with the usual Saturday matinee.

Barn and Hay Burned.

A News correspondent writing from Washington, Washington county, under date of October 2, says that the thirling barn there and all its contents had been burned. A good many tons of hay was destroyed. It was with great difficulty that the residence of Mr. Bennett, near by, was saved. Wet blankets were put on the roof of the dwelling and other buildings. The hay is a serious loss to the locality, as the crop is small. The origin of the fire is unknown.

Y. M. M. I. A. Conference.

Y. M. M. I. A. conference of the Salt Lake Stake will be held in the Tabernacle, Sunday, October 18th, 1896. An officers meeting at 10 o'clock a. m., to which a representative from every association is expected. General meeting at 2 o'clock p. m. and program meeting at 7 p. m. The public are cordially invited to attend. JOSEPH H. PETT,
Superintendent.
J. E. HIGGS, Secretary.

Sheep in Utah.

Those engaged in the sheep industry have perhaps met with more success in Utah than the cattle interests. The country is peculiarly adapted to sheep, in the southern and western part of Utah are extensive tracts of country that go by the name of Desert. They are in fact low prairies that produce vegetation peculiar to the arid regions, several varieties of the sagebrush, different kinds of grasses and little alkali. Those plants that are strangers to the people who live east of the mountains. In summer time these plains are deserted as far as live stock is concerned, for there is no water. That not give vegetation a chance to mature and now there every year, and by the time the snow falls there is generally a fine supply of winter feed for sheep. They do not eat the white sage until after the frost has killed it. The flocks are kept in the high mountains east and north all summer, where they fatten and prosper. After the fall shipments of wethers are made the herder starts the balance of them for the deserts, calculating to arrive on the winter grounds in time for the first snow. These drives are made by nine moves—some says five miles, we think over ten. The sheep seem to know where they are going, and when one herder one man and a few dogs can care for three thousand during a winter. These men live in wagons, and when they start out in the fall in many cases they are provisioned for the entire winter. Their visitors are confined to the wandering coyotes. It is not a cheerful life, and we think whoever said that "talent was developed best in solitude" never had any experience with sheep herding in winter. When the spring comes these flocks are started again for the mountains two hundred miles away. They have fixed places to shear, and locate the where the lambing is managed. Some flocks that winter in Utah near the Nevada state line summer in Wyoming. Many are the hardships attending this kind of life and there are times that require a man to be very faithful or his flock will be destroyed. Sometimes a heavy snow will drift over a flock, and many sheep become cold before help reaches them. Then it is a constant warfare with the wolves and coyotes, for they never leave a sheep camp unless it is to go for information.—Love Stock Reports.

CAN SLEEP STANDING OR LYING.

PECULIAR FACTS REGARDING THE HABITS OF ELEPHANTS.

One of the most erroneous of the many queer ideas which the laymen have on questions of natural history is the one respecting the elephant's mode of sleeping. Even the old school of naturalists declared that the elephant has never been known to lie down in a sleeping position. Of late, however, say within the past century, it has been learned that the error arose from by persons studying the habits of such beasts as had not been long in captivity.

Such animals, when undergoing the process of domestication, have been known to stand for twelve, eighteen or even twenty-four months without even lying down to rest. This is regarded as a want of confidence in their keeper, coupled with a longing desire for liberty. When elephants are in perfect ease and confidence in their lots, they will lie down on their sides and sleep as all other beasts do.—Exchange.

OBITUARY.

WARREN STONE SON.

MARTIN, Oct. 5, 1896.—Warren Stone Martin died at his home in Martin, Utah, Sept. 30, 1896. He was the son of Gardner Stone and sarah Hearing and was born on the 15th day of June 1870 in Chesterfield, N. H., New Hampshire.

Brother Stone was baptized into the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in the year 1883 and was married to Mary Vanrosen in December, 1891. For several years prior to his marriage he lived with the Peters family in Smith South and on Sundays spoke of the motherly kindness to him of Hannah Peters, the wife of the Prophet. In the year 1892 he crossed the plains in charge of a train of emigrants. In 1893 he came to Martin where he resided until the time of his death. In 1894 he was ordained a Deacon and for several years presided over the Deacons quorum of Sanpete county. In 1895 he went on a mission to England and returned in the fall of 1895, again laboring with his wife in the Sanpete county. During the Black Hawk war he commanded the Sanpete department of the Nauvoo Legion and rendered good service as a representative in the Utah Legislature.

At the time of his death and for the past three years he was the recorder to the president of the High Priests in the Sanpete Stake of Zion. Space will not permit a list of his good qualities. He was brave and true and faithful. His record is without stain, and he has gone to his reward.

His funeral services were held in the Martin tabernacle on the 2d inst. The speakers were Apostle Lorenzo Snow, President Peterson, Mailon and McAllister and Bishop Jensen and Reid.—Dem.

Having made its appearance on my beat in the street Cars, in the Auditorium, Tabernacle and Temple, I have watched with interest and pleasure the progress of the Scales, and have now arrived at the conclusion that they are a very great improvement on the old system of weighing passengers, and have concluded to adopt them on my beat.

The conductor who has charge of the Scales, is a very pleasant gentleman, and I have found it a very great pleasure to ride on my beat since the Scales have been there.

I think the Scales will be a great success, and I wish the Company every success in introducing them.
