SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE For CATARRH

INSTANTLY relieves and permanently cures this loathsome disease by direct application, free from every filthy contamination, and in this respect differs from every other known remedy. In consequence of its merit it has found its way from the Atlantic to the Pacific coast, and wherever known is hailed as the standard remedy of the household of America. The proprietors have been waited upon by thousands who have been cured by this remedy, and who, in the fullness of their hearts, have expressed their gratitude in words of fervent praise. When you read a testimonial of the efficacy and refinement of "Sanford's Radical Cure," you may feel assured that it is an article of great value, and worthy to be ranked among the standard medical specialties of the day.

THE benefit I derive from its daily use is to me incalculable. HENRY WELLS, of WELLS, FARGO & Co.

IT has cured me after twelve years of suffering. GEO. W. HOUGHTON, WALTHAM, MASS.

I FOLLOWED the directions to the letter and am happy to say it has cured me. H. W. GRAY, M. D., DUNCASTER, IOWA.

I HAVE recommended it to quite a number of my friends, all of whom have expressed to me their entire satisfaction of its virtues and good effects with them. WM. BOWEN, 22 PINE ST., ST. LOUIS.

AFTER other two bottles I find myself permanently cured. I have since recommended your valuable Radical Cure to many of my acquaintances. WM. W. ARMSTRONG, 18 HARRISON AVE., BOSTON.

WE have sold SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE for nearly one year and can say candidly that we never sold a similar preparation that gave such universal satisfaction. We have yet to learn of the least complaint. S. D. BALDWIN & CO., WASHINGTON, IND.

THE cure effected in my case by SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE was so remarkable that it seemed to those who had suffered without relief from any of the usual remedies that it could not be true. I therefore make affidavit to it before Seth J. Thomas, Justice of the Peace, Boston. GEO. W. DIAMOND, Somerset, Boston.

Each package of SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE contains Dr. Sanford's Improved Inhaling Tube, and full directions for its use in all cases. Price, $1.00. For sale by all wholesale and retail druggists and dealers throughout the United States and Canada. WEEKS & POTTER, General Agents and Wholesale Druggists, Boston, Mass.

EVENING NEWS.

Tuesday, - - September 3, 1878

I OWE NO MAN A DOLLAR.

Oh, do not envy, my own dear wife,
The wealth of our next door neighbor,
But be merrily in spite of care,
And cheerfully follow my labor.

You must know the last of those little debts
That have been our lingering sorrow
Is paid this night. So we'll both go forth
And shake hands with the world to-morrow.

Oh, the debtor is but a shame-faced dog
With the creditor's name on his collar,
While I'm king and you may be queen,
For we owe no man a dollar.

Our neighbor you saw in his coach to-day,
With his wife and his flaunting daughter,
While we sat down at our coverless board,
To a crust and a cup of water.

I saw that a tear-drop stood in your eye,
Though you tried your best to conceal it,
I know that the contrast reached your heart,
And you could not help but feel it;
But knowing now that our scanty fare
Has freed my neck from the collar,
You'll join my laugh, and help me shout
That I owe no man a dollar.

Correspondence.

NEW YORK CITY, August 25, 1878.

Editors Deseret News:

Dear Brethren: — Elders John Nicholson, Oley Ellingson and W. D. Major, Mrs. A. W. Carlson and Miss Clara May arrived in this city this morning, in fair health and spirits, though somewhat fatigued. The party put up at the Stevens House, where I met them soon after my arrival. The steamer Wyoming, on which they take passage for Liverpool, will sail on Tuesday the 27th inst.

Elder Nicholson and myself met with the Saints in Brooklyn this forenoon, and addressed them. We had an excellent meeting, and some strangers present expressed themselves much interested in the principles set forth.

One week ago this (Sunday) morning, Elder Samuel L. Adams, of St. George, accompanied by a young lady, his niece, arrived here. They design sailing on the Wyoming with Elder Nicholson and party, but came on a week ahead in order to have time to make some visits, etc.

My being in New York just as these brethren arrived has been to me a very pleasant coincidence, for the sight of their faces was unto me as "the shadow of a great rock in a weary desert." The party will probably improve the time they have to spare before the sailing of the vessel, in sight seeing, etc. of which there is opportunity to do much in this great city.

Your brother in the gospel,
B. F. CUMMINGS, Jr.

LUCERNE.

The best time to sow is after the hard frosts are over. Sow with oats or barley; drag in well and level the ground, the grain will protect lucerne while young; sow on top after the ground is ready. I would not recommend more than eight or ten pounds per acre. The seed is small and finds its way into small cracks and crevices of earth, when the moisture will cause it to germinate. The first appearance after the shell opens and the small leaves appear. And if the seed is covered too deep it cannot force its leaves to the surface. I would recommend dividing the seed; sow over once, then cross sow with the balance; this will get it more even.

Three good crops can be raised in a season, water well, if practicable before cutting, as this will cause the next crop to start immediately, and not leave the land exposed several days to the scorching sun, after a heavy crop has been removed.

I have fed the article in question for the last 12 years, in all the various stages of its growth, and have noted its effects. When cut too young, much of its nutriment escapes, by evaporation, and it is inclined to crumble and waste in handling. When cut green for feed, stock require plenty of salt, as it is a plant of quick growth and draws all of the alkali matter from the soil. Stock that have had an insufficient quantity of salt are likely to blout after eating lucerne.

The best time to cut lucerne is after it has gone over 10 blooms and the seed is about two-thirds grown. I have found it then to be the most substantial feed, and relished best by stock.

The Pauper Boy.

Chambers's Edinburgh Journal: Henry M. Stanley (for he has good right to call himself, although his original name was John Rowlands) was born near Denbigh, in Wales, in 1840, and of parentage so lowly that at the age of three years he was placed in the poorhouse at St. Asaph, where he remained for ten years, and received an education which gained for him a place as teacher in a school at Mold, in Flintshire.

When fifteen years old, he shipped as cabin-boy on board a vessel bound for New Orleans. Here he found employment with a merchant named Stanley, who soon adopted the lad and bestowed upon him his own name. But his patron died, leaving no will. The civil war broke out, and young Stanley entered the Confederate army. He was taken prisoner, and soon after volunteered in the service of the Union, becoming an ensign on the ironclad Ticonderoga.

After the close of the war he betered upon the profession of journalism, and traveled as a newspaper correspondent in Turkey and Asia Minor, paying a visit to his native Wales, and to the poorhouse where his childhood had been passed and of which he entertained a grateful recollection. To the good education which he received there he said that he owed all that he was, and all that he hoped to be. In 1867 he returned to America, and was sent by the New York Herald as military correspondent with the British army in the Abyssinian war. Next came his search for Livingston, followed by his great expedition just concluded.

A Russian Official.

A story is current in Moscow, apropos of Russian official routine, which, whether literally true or not, certainly illustrates to perfection the character of the prevailing system. An operatic star of some note, connected with one of the principal Moscow theatres, wishing to make a short excursion into the country, went to get her passport countersigned by the local authorities. The presiding official received her politely, and, having learned her business, inquired for her written petition. "My written petition!" cried the lady. "I have none, I never knew that anything of the kind was required." "Not required, madam! On the contrary, nothing can be done without it." "What am I to do, then?" "Nothing easier; be good enough to take a sheet of paper and write something to my dictation." The applicant obeyed, and transcribed word for word a formal petition requesting leave of absence from the city for a stated time, which was then duly signed and sealed. "And now," to both the men in office, "you have only to deliver it." "To whom, pray?" "To whom?" echoed the official, with a slight smile at the absurdity of the question, "to me, of course." The document was accordingly handed across the table. The great man adjusted his spectacles, broke the seal, gravely read over his own composition from beginning to end, folded and docketed it with methodical slowness, and then, turning to the impatient artist, said, with an air of official solemnity: "Madam, I have read your petition, and regret to tell you that I am unable to grant it."

SHORT AND SHARP.

"Here is your writ of attachment," said a town clerk, as he handed a lover a marriage license.

As the story goes, Colonel Ethan Allen was greatly taken aback one day. While in a self-gratulatory mood, he observed that there were never seven other such born of any woman as he and his six brothers. "You are mistaken," said a Scotch office, who was standing by, "Mary Magdalene was delivered of seven exactly like you."

A Massachusetts paper says: "A little four-year-old bright-eyed girl, who has planted a little garden all for herself, was asked by an older sister if she didn't expect a good many profits from it. She quickly replied, with great dignity, 'What are you talking about profits for on week-days; don't you know that they all died long ago and went to heaven in chariots of fire?'"

"My son, would you like to steal one of those melons?"

"Yes, sir," was the prompt reply.

"You would, eh! I am sorry to hear that. If you should steal one of those melons, my boy, do you know what the result might be?"

The lad scratched his head, surveyed the pile again, and answered: "I 'spect the plaguey thing would be green all the way through!"

During the last rehearsal of a new piece at a London transpontine theatre the manager asked if all the properties were ready. "Everything I have on my list," replied the property man, with some hesitation, "is ready, but I have just heard Mr. X. ask about the acoustic properties, and I have not yet heard a word about those." "Let them be got at once and hang the expense," exclaimed the energetic manager.

The Talmud has this story: A rabbi bade his servant, on a Friday morning, go to the market and purchase the best thing in condition for the Sabbath. The servant brought him a tongue. The following Friday he commanded him to go to the market and bring the worst thing he could find. He brought a tongue. "How? the best tongue and the worst found in buying both at the same time with mine, I wished to know."

[illegible] current in a railway train in which the usual office of the Christian at Work is kept, a young woman entered and bounced into the seat, throwing up her hands and exclaiming to her companion with a loud voice which all in the car can hear, "Did you ever know anything so hot? I'm stifling! Can't you open this window? Whew! It's dreadful, isn't it? It's always so in these cars—awful!" When this kind of remark had been make at some length for the edification of the company, a voice was heard from the other end of car—"Ye'm. It's awful. But we must try to bear up. 'Taint nothing to the sufferings of the early Christians." A general laugh followed, and nothing further was heard from that young woman.
