HEREIN IN WISE COUNSEL.

Why Whine About Hard Times With These Conditions?

A Correspondent Tells How Every Willing Worker Can Get an Independent Living.

Editor Deseret News:

I learn by reading in your paper the report of the Salt Lake Stake conference held in your city, that it is proposed and advised that many of the unemployed now in the city go to the country and engage in cultivating the soil—those who cannot find other employment in which they are more experienced.

Another writer appears fearful this advice may result in filling the country with tramps in search of places and work, unless some means are employed to inform them where that work can be had, before they have time to commence the search for it.

This may be a very timely and proper consideration in aid of the object in view. But when this matter is carefully considered, I think there is very little, comparatively speaking, who need to leave their homes at all, if now comfortably housed. For instance, there are hundreds of acres of land within easy access of the people of Salt Lake City which need to be put under cultivation for the good of the farming community and country adjoining. This land is lying idle—worse than idle, it is producing heavy crops of noxious weeds, white clover and mustard, which is not only a shame and disgrace to a farming community, but seriously infecting adjoining farms which are being cultivated with grain or other crops, but which are nearly ruined and rendered uncultivable because of the extra work required to separate the wheat from the tares, or the crop poorer from the wild weeds among it.

Now, if the owners of this unused land would give the use of it to industrious persons who would cultivate it, as others are doing in the large cities and many parts of the country, it would furnish employment for many of the idle and the poor. Others are doing more than this, they are furnishing seed free with land, so that there may be no excuse on the part of the needy.

The citizens of Detroit, New York and other places, which are overfaced with the poor, are extending their charities in this way. Vacant lots and waste ground in and near cities are converted into market farms for the poor, and the result has been highly satisfactory. It is estimated with them that one-fifth of an acre of good ground will support a family of five persons with a good living, and that in the annual debit and credit to each family, with potatoes and seed furnished free, each man is cultivate the ground alloted to him, and have the produce for his family.

Another advantage of this policy is that many who engage will acquire a taste for farming and become self-supporting wherever and whenever they may have access to the elements for that purpose.

The people and owners of land in and near the city could furnish abundance of land now unused within the reach of many who have their homes in the city, and less only the means of subsistence to be comfortable where they are idle.

But, says one, this class of persons have no team with which to plow and prepare the ground for cultivation. If they have not, there are plenty of farmers who need the help they would use who would be glad to do it for them, or furnish the team and implements with which to do it themselves, for the benefit and protection it would be to their field adjoining. For instance, there is a five-acre field, excellent soil with good water privileges, prepared for the seed, and the seed harvested. That field well cultivated will furnish labor for five men who have families, and can produce all the vegetables and ordinary crops to five ordinary families require for the year.

Possible? says one. Yes, quite possible.

That acre of ground under ordinary cultivation with horse and plough may produce from five to six hundred bushels of potatoes; but the party working it has no horse and plough, consequently cultivates with the hoe and cant cultivate, and reaches only one-half the land for the same amount of crop produced. Six twenty-five bushels of potatoes which his family needs, as ordinarily raised, require but a small patch of ground, and when only about half of that seed amount is required when the hoe is used and all the ground made the most of, it becomes a very small piece, and in the proportion with most other crop problems. When the early crop of potatoes is matured there is plenty of time for some other profitable crop to follow it.

Again, how few the days required among proper culture for most early peas to be sufficiently matured for table, tender and healthful for those dear children who gather around the board with eyes laughing with joy at the first fruits upon the table of father's toil. These are only one of peas as followed in succession with other varieties of late growth, and the table is not only supplied during the entire season, but quantities are gathered and canned for winter use.

So with other classes of vegetables. The string-beans is bad for use both early and late in the season. Beets, onions, carrots, parsnips, cabbage, celery and every variety of garden produce are on the list, all furnished by thoroughly cultivating that one acre or land which is three times the amount allowed in some states and provinces sufficient for one family. This acre of land can not only be made to furnish what the family require for their table use, but enough to provide their sugar and groceries, and all this the possibility of one hale acre of land as actual experience teaches may be done.

If this new life and could be recorded for the two or three years the company would probably be selling out early the thinkers, industrious and such things as in a little time would bring thousands to bless without much other investment than the hard, individual labor, and that to him only a pleasure, and a detailed fact.

Should the person be so fortunate as to have a cow in his part, what an amount of food could be raised for it by using a few other acres with it, and then from a cow of good quality, and those fine as some farmers do make the stalks small and spotted, producing white and red dripping, combined the choicest food known for producing milk, or necessary to the existence the healthy and health to the little ones. And if this efficient cultivator could raise vegetables enough to spare and exchange with some neighbor who has not time or the means needed, he would be surprised at what the labor of his hands, applied to scientific methods of production, had caused to supply his wants and make a wholly happy family, ingoing with affluence at the very length of time he was willing.

If the hundreds of acres in the neighborhood of Salt Lake City were thus cultivated, but few people would be tramping or looking for work or pay for labor to provide something for their families to eat. And if the need be called of this city, how many of almost every town and settlement throughout these mountains would be glad to have some of the home or industry to make them yield their bounties of wants to consist. It would be a shame and reproach to say one be idle, and yet there is so many hungry and naked in a community like this, situated as it is with every means at command necessary to satisfy the natural wants of all in plenty and comfort.

Let every man who has land be put to use to advantage of another family. If he has none of others in his family, who are able and need healthy exercise for the development of muscle and sinew, there is no reason why he should not be put under cultivation for the good of the farming community and country adjoining. This land is lying idle—worse than idle, it is producing heavy crops of noxious weeds, white clover and mustard, which is not only a shame and disgrace to a farming community, but seriously infecting adjoining farms which are being cultivated with grain or other crops, but which are nearly ruined and rendered uncultivable because of the extra work required to separate the wheat from the tares, or the crop poorer from the wild weeds among it.

Now, if the owners of this unused land would give the use of it to industrious persons who would cultivate it, as others are doing in the large cities and many parts of the country, it would furnish employment for many of the idle and the poor. Others are doing more than this, they are furnishing seed free with land, so that there may be no excuse on the part of the needy.

temple stated that the experts not heather the records of August, 1894. The committee, however, need not wait for a complete report. The work is in complete order. The boilers and all the machinery for the heating and lighting of the temple are in good condition. The furniture and the furniture and the vault. The former is $34,570.40, and the latter $15,610. Between twenty-five and fifty workmen will be employed in the investigation of the work and in many ways on the other matters, to say nothing of accounts not yet rendered.

Those members of the office staff will continue to operate and the resolutions will be examined by the county attorney. The investigation will cost some money, and in order to arrive at a proper understanding of this portion of the subject which concerns the committee decided to meet again today.

MINERS WILL BE WANTED.

The court decided to embark in the real estate business, at one way out of its unprofitableness, and in addition to proving all property acquired by tax sale for sale, announced that it was ready to dispose of the old county warehouse and grounds. It which have brought, perhaps, $5,000 a few years ago, and determined that the law requires such property to be sold to the highest bidder.

JUSTICES' REPORTS OF FEES.

The county attorney called attention to the actual the justices of the peace keep no notice of fees imposed, and suggested that a considerable sum might be saved by entering the fees which are now taken in the other fees collected to the county treasury. He submitted a blank form for such justice and monthly report which now—tend the court to keep, declaring that such a form would save the county thousands of dollars each year, which are not now accounted for.

This matter was referred to the attorneys.

AFTER THE BOND ELECTION.

The abstracts of the returns of the bond election complete show a total vote of 2,501 for bonds and 2,304 against, a majority of 197. There were no returns from Highland, Little Cottonwood and North Point.

In the canvassing the bills of the various judges at election came up. While the county precinct judges were content with charging up one and two hours for canvassing, the city officials have up five and ten hours at an extra per hour. It cost $9 to count the votes in the First, and that with the Second, which charged up one and the Third was $2. The Fifth precinct judges taxed up $1.50, but the Fifth charged for ten hours work.

PAVING FOR A ROAD.

H. N. Scattle and two hundred other residents and taxpayers of Kingsbury, South Jordan and Pleasant View, petitioned for a road from Stateline to Kingsbury canyon, which was referred to the road board.

WILL BE ATTENDED TO.

Superintendent J. H. Young of the Union Pacific, replying to a letter from the court, gave the assurance that all approaches to the company's intersections with county roads would be put in condition at once.

APPROPRIATIONS.

There were made to the aggregate of $6,115, and the board then adjourned to Monday next.

Sent to Jail.

Joseph Tilton was brought in from Big Cottonwood by Sheriff Hardy last night and conveyed to the county jail to serve a sentence of thirty days for vagrancy passed upon him by Justice Stevenson of Big Cottonwood precinct. It is stated that Joe is by no means a good man and that he has been guilty of beating his old father.

DR. BASCOM'S TURN NOW.

He Denies the Extraordinary Allegations of Attorney Winters Concerning That Illness.

In regard to the $10,000 damage suit recently filed by Attorney H. D. Winters against Dr. Bascom, the defendant has filed his answer in the Third district court. Every allegation in the complaint is denied, and specially that any of the physicians were called in by Dr. Bascom for any purpose other than to consult over the critical condition of the plaintiff. It is further denied that any of the physicians did defendant to desist from giving drugs and that the plaintiff would recover, or that if defendant persisted in his treatment plaintiff would die, or that on account of any such statement the defendant stopped and changed the treatment, or that on account of dissatisfaction of the treatment plaintiff recovered.

It is denied that on account of the serious charge concerning physicians any different course of treatment was pursued, or that any drug or drugs were discontinued, excepting only that at the suggestion of one of the said physicians, and by way of experiment, one of the medicines was discontinued for a time. Whereupon the result of said discontinuance not proving satisfactory the remedy was again given with beneficial results.

It is alleged that plaintiff was suffering not only from typhoid fever, so that the case was complicated and aggravated with other and serious diseases and ailments, and that during the greater part of the time his condition was extremely critical, requiring the most careful attention and the highest degree of medical skill and ability; that during the attendance of the defendant and other physicians Winters was carefully watched and treated, and that solely by reason of the attention so given he recovered and regained his health.
