

Mrs. William Howard Taft Best Cook in Ohio State.

Mrs. William H. Taft, wife of the president-elect, is probably the best cook in Cincinnati, or, for that matter, in Washington, either, and ever since her marriage she has taken complete charge of the financial affairs of her household.

Women of the Herron connection as far back as this distinguished old Cincinnati family is remembered have all been noted housekeepers and unusually accomplished in the culinary art. The family trait is said to be strongest in

Mrs. Taft, formerly Nellie Herron, whom her mother frequently declared to be the best housekeeper of all her daughters. No social demands, positions or interests have in the least succeeded in lessening Mrs. Taft's interest in domestic matters or her pride in her skill as a cook.

Here are a few recipes from an old cook book, long a favorite in the Herron family and now used by Mrs. Taft:

"Chicken Croquettes"—Chop cold boiled turkey or chicken very fine. Season with pepper, salt, a little nutmeg and onion. Mix a large tablespoonful of butter and two of flour. When well mixed and warmed add a pint of cream, seasoned with a little salt. Let it stand a minute, then stir the mixture into the meat. When cold take a spoonful of the mixture and dip into two eggs slightly beaten, then into bread crumbs. Roll lightly into shape. Fry in boiling lard.

"Plum pudding"—One pint chopped suet, one quart sour apples, one pint of raisins, one pint currants, one-half pint sugar, one-half pint sweet milk, one cup citron. Beat eight eggs and mix with the above. Add sufficient flour to make it stick together. Boil three hours in a cloth bag. Serve with favorite sauce.

"Muffins"—One quart milk, half pound butter, warm together; four eggs well beaten; flour to make a batter; half pint good yeast; salt to taste. Bake in muffin tin.

GIRLS OF TURKESTAN.

American women are supposed to be favored beyond the women of other nations by their superior opportunities for leisure and study, while the men pass their lives in money-making. But even the little girls in a far away province of Chinese Turkestan are being taught to read while the little boys are obliged to be away tending the sheep. Ellsworth Huntington, of the department of geography, Yale university, gives an interesting account of his explorations of this region in the December number of Harper's magazine. Traveling through a wild and lonely region he came to a camp of wandering sheep men. Peering into one of their tents he discovered an old white-haired teacher instructing the little girls in reading. "Are there no boys here?" inquired the explorer. "Oh, yes," answered the teacher, "but what can we do? We are poor. The boys must be off tending the sheep." Thus the feminine continues to acquire culture at the expense of the masculine.
