A FRUITFUL TIME.

Judge Merritt Kept Very Busy in Court This Forenoon.

TWO WAYWARD YOUNG SISTERS.

Deserter and Divorce—Litigation Over a Certain Mining Location at Bingham.

This was a more than usually rushing morning in the Third district court, and Judge Merritt had his hands quite full from ten o'clock up to the time of the mid-day adjournment. A lot of miscellaneous business occupied the first three-quarters of an hour, and the balance of the forenoon was given up to the hearing on an injunction in regard to mining litigation.

SHORT MATTERS.

The case of W. C. A. Smoot vs the Pacific Lumber and Building Co. was, by consent, set for hearing on the equity calendar next Wednesday, to take the place of that of Oppenheimer vs McCormick, which, it was announced, had been settled.

Lorenzo D. Young vs Delos Robinson et al. An order was granted, allowing the plaintiff to serve summons upon two minors who have been discovered to be parties defendant and permitting plaintiff to amend complaint by interlineation.

Walter P. Read vs Wm. Dean et al. Motion for judgment on the pleadings submitted without argument.

Sarah J. Pembroke vs James P. De Woodey. Hearing on order to show cause continued without date.

Salt Lake Valley Loan and Trust Co. vs Marion Pickering et al. Judgment and decree of foreclosure. Attorney's fee of $50 allowed.

Henry Dunwoodey vs John Beck. Demurrer to complaint overruled; five days to answer.

Hyrum Shields vs the Daily Miner Publishing Co. An order was granted authorizing the issuance of an order of sale of property attached, the proceeds to be deposited with the court pending the result of the suit.

Taylor, Romney, Armstrong Co. vs Heber Young. Judgment as prayed. Attorney's fee of $150 allowed.

Julia Rockwood vs Amos Cardwell et al. Judgment as prayed. $75 attorney's fee allowed.

DIVORCED.

The divorce suit of Mary Ann S. Hoch vs Samuel T. Hoch, on the ground of desertion, was next heard. The case went by default.

The petitioner is about fifty years of age, and is allowed to her attorney (H. W. Smith) on the witness-stand stated that she was married to the defendant on December 6, 1866. There are five children, aged respectively 20, 14, 11, 8 and 7 years. It further appeared that the parties resided together until 1890, when the defendant went away, ostensibly for a few weeks on business, but never returned and has not since been heard from by his family.

The court granted the decree as prayed.

A VERY SAD STORY.

Two sisters named Nellie and Bertha Pearson, intelligent and neatly attired, were brought before the court as incorrigibles, with the view of their being transferred from the custody of the city police to the Ogden Reform school.

Detective Shields was called and testified that he had seen the defendants on the streets at all hours, and also in Franklin avenue between 12 and 1 o'clock in the morning. Both girls, on Thursday last, took a horse and buggy which were standing opposite the Temple block, and were caught driving them away by the person who owned them, on Fifth South and Fifth East, soon afterwards. A robe and some parcels had been taken out of the conveyance and these were found later at the girls' mother's home. The sisters, Shields said, had been guilty of frequent petty larcenies and kindred offenses, had been accustomed of late to associate with low, immoral people and to visit places "unfit for girls of their age." The mother had gone to the city hall several times to complain of their conduct.

Prosecuting Attorney Howat said the mother should have been present now, but he supposed she did not care to come.

Judge Merritt asked the defendants if they wished to be represented by an attorney; but both laughingly answered no.

Judge Merritt—Do you desire to say anything?

The elder girl in this replied—It is all true what he (meaning Detective Shields) has said so far; that's all I can say.

Judge Merritt—Do you live at home with your mother?

The elder girl, again answering in a rather care fashion—Yes, sir, part of the time.

Nellie was asked her age and answered eighteen; the other said she was eighteen; but both looked younger—mere children.

Judge Merritt remarked that as the statute provided an offender must be "within" the age of eighteen in order to be sent to the Reform school, he had no jurisdiction in regard to the elder girl. She had not been convicted, and was entitled to be tried by a jury.

Attorney Whitlemore (who was associated with Judge H. at in the case) said the sending of the girl to the penitentiary was what they now aimed to avoid.

After some discussion Judge Merritt made an order committing Bertha (the younger delinquent) to the Reform school, but declined to interfere with the other. Nellie was accordingly taken back to the city hall by Detective Shields.

MINING PROPERTY IN DISPUTE.

The case of A. Coughlin vs B. Gardelle had been specially set down for hearing this morning and was taken up at 11:45, immediately after the foregoing business had been disposed of.

Attorney C. S. Kinney appeared for the plaintiff, and Attorney C. S. Varian for the defendant.

Suit was brought in April of the present year to have judgment entered against the defendant on three causes of action, as follows: First, in the sum of $500, claimed as damages alleged to have been sustained by the plaintiff in consequence of the defendant having forcibly entered upon his mining claim, known as the "Emma," located in West Mountain mining district, Bingham canyon, running a tunnel underground, removing dirt and gravel containing gold and other precious metals; second, to obtain a decree of this court perpetually enjoining the defendant from washing out the gold, etc., in the dirt and gravel still remaining on the premises's dump, and declaring the property to belong to Coughlin; third, to have Gardelle perpetually enjoined from entering upon plaintiff's mining ground and further interfering therewith.

A temporary restraining order was issued by Judge Merritt at the time and it was now sought to have the same made permanent.

A number of witnesses were called and examined during the forenoon.

The arguments will begin one day during next week.

FOUGHT WITH A BOA.

ATTACKS THE MONSTER WITH ONLY A KNIFE FOR A WEAPON ON A WAGER.

A Newark engineer who served on the engineering corps employed in the construction of the Nicaragua canal and is now home, recently told the story of a duel with a boa-constrictor by a fellow engineer to a Pittsburg Dispatch reporter. Life in the canal country is dreary, and various schemes are resorted to in order to relieve the monotony. One of the party sailed one evening that he could kill a boa single-handed. The rest of the crowd tried to convince him that he was wrong, but he stuck to the assertion. Finally a handsome bet was made that he could not dispatch a boa alone if the deadly reptile was in its natural condition. The young engineer promptly accepted the terms of the wager.

The next day a gang of natives were sent into the forest to find a boa. They continued their search for some time and finally came upon just the article they were looking for. It was a well-grown specimen of the boa species, fully fifteen feet long. It had eaten heartily a few days before it was discovered and it was therefore torpid. It was captured without difficulty and taken back to camp. It was deposited in a room, where it was securely bound and then left until its sleep should be over.

Boas often remain in torpor for three weeks, and it was nearly a fortnight before the pinioned snake showed signs of returning activity. The engineers then appointed a night for the contest, and the young man who was to face the serpent went into secure training. It had been stipulated that his only weapon was to be a knife, and the young man relied on his clear brain, iron nerve and supple wrist to carry him through the encounter in safety.

When the work was over on the appointed day, those who were in the secret entered the room and proceeded to cut the ropes with which the serpent was bound. It had been coiled up and several lassos placed about it. These were all severed but one, and the snake's opponent entered while his companions took a hasty retreat to safe coigns of vantage from which to watch the strange battle and to give succor in a last extremity. The young engineer was lightly clad and carried in his hand a long knife, well sharpened. The monster, half lassoed as it was, was in a most angry humor, and its horrid head oscillating to and fro with distended jaws and virulently shining, beady eyes most have made the young man's flesh creep. He strode straight up to the foe, and with a lightning stroke of his knife cut the remaining hand that bound it. He jumped back the instant the stroke had taken with the celerity of a tiger cat, but his quickness was semi-the compared with that of the reptile. A cooper than thought the blow descended upon his coming. Before the man could move the snake had fallen upon his arm, and wound its way up to entire length and was biting at his shoulder.

The arm around which the snake had wound itself was the young fellow's knife arm. Luckily the hand and wrist were free. He did not wait to transfer the knife to the other hand, but summoned all his power and cut at the coil of the serpent nearest his pinioned hand. It was a splendid stroke, a backward cut, and it was clean through the body. The upper portion of the slimy coil dropped to the floor and the intrepid engineer had won his bet. The entire contest lasted but a few seconds, and so quickly did it pass that the breathless onlookers scarcely realized what had happened. The young man was pretty thoroughly exhausted. His shoulder was quite badly lacerated by the snake. The strangest part of the episode was that the young man's arm was lame for weeks, and on its length was a spiral black and blue where the snake had encircled it.

Congress Proceedings.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—On roll call in the senate at 11 o'clock, 38 senators responded, 15 less than a quorum. Twenty-five minutes passed before enough absentees were found to make up a quorum. Dolph moved to adjourn but withdrew his motion upon the suggestion of Chandler that the motion violated the agreement entered into just before the adjournment last night to take up the tariff bill at 12 o'clock each day.

A bill was passed to place Major General George M. Gibson on the retired list of the army as first lieutenant.

At 12 o'clock the tariff bill was taken up, the pending question being the amendment to increase the duty on fabric sold or taken from 35 to 75 cents a pound. Jones offered a substitute of 40 for 75.

OBITUARY NOTES.

JOHN S. HANSEN.

MAYFIELD, Utah, May 1, 1894.—I am requested to send you some of the death of John S. Hansen, a respected young man of this place. Brother Hansen is the son of Hansen and Martha M. Hansen. He was born at Mapleton, Sanpete county, December 20, 1869, and died at Mayfield at his mother's residence, May 1, 1894. It is supposed, from spinal and heart disease. Brother Peter Hansen, the father of the deceased, is now living in New Mexico. It was to a hard blow on him when he learn of his boy's death. The young man suffered very much, but bore up under the pain manfully.

His funeral service took place May 3. The morning house was filled to overflowing—a good proof of the esteem he was held in by his acquaintances. The speakers were Bishop C. A. Nielson of Gunnison, Bishop N. C. Christensen of Sterling, ex-Bishop O. C. Olsen and Bishop Farley Christensen of Mayfield. Their remarks were timely and suitable for the occasion of the bereaved. The deceased leaves a mother and a sister here in Mayfield to mourn his loss, who have the sympathy of the whole community. JOURNAL CORRESPONDENT.

MARGARET CRAWSHAW.

BRIGHAM CITY, May 11, 1894.—Died in Brigham City, Wednesday, May 9, of old age, Sister Margaret Crawshaw. At about 9 o'clock in the morning, when her son William, who was her only attendant, arose, he found her in her chamber. Sister Crawshaw was well known in the early missionaries in England, and always kept open house for the Elders traveling in this country. Her husband, Joel and herself were baptized in the Tottington branch of the Manchester conference in 1841, and emigrated to America in 1847, coming to Brigham City in 1877. Her husband died in 1884. She was a very unassuming woman and a firm believer in the Gospel as taught by the people. The latter part of her days was spent almost entirely in her own habitation with her son William, who has been constantly with her since the death of his father. She was 84 years of age, was the mother of fourteen children, but only two—William and Robert, of Wellsville—are her only relatives in Utah.

Funeral services were held in the Fourth ward meeting house, and were impressive, after which she was peacefully laid to rest in peace, with the faithful in the morning of the first resurrection.
