Shot Killed by Wholesale—by a Mountain Lion.—A Skilful Surgical Operation.

W. A. Wagoner, until recently a postmaster of Beatrice, Nebraska, has been indicted by the grand jury for forgery.

Richard Barratt received a severe blow in the face Monday evening from a snow ball thrown by one of the many loafers who indulge in that sport.

John T. Rich, of Brigham city, is largely interested in a drove of 10,000 cattle that will be driven to Canada next summer, we are informed.

There is reported to be more sickness in Rawlins, Wyo., this winter than ever before, especially among children, and the medical men are at a loss to ascertain the cause.

An elderly lady named Madsen who resides with the Steinfeldt family in Milton, near Morgan city, was severely burned by her clothes catching fire, and has succumbed to her injuries.

Robert Hopkins and another boy of fifteen were struggling at Buffalo, Wyo., for possession of a pistol. The weapon was discharged. The bullet struck Arthur Bullock, a third schoolboy, behind the ear. It glanced off, leaving only a flesh wound.

George H. Daniels, a wealthy San Bernardino (Cal.) county fruit-grower, has become embroiled in issues. He believes that Cleveland desires him to become secretary of the interior. He is a relative of the late Daniel Manning.

The stockholders of the Payson Coop. have elected the following board of directors: Sam Douglass, William S. Tanner, Thomas H. Wilson, John E. Huish, S. W. McClellan, Byron Leatham, David Lunt, Orrewell Simons and Orrawell Simons, Jr.

Los Angeles county, Cal., recently sued Orange county to recover $11,355 claimed to have been advanced to the new county for the construction of a bridge. The Los Angeles county was beaten in the lower court, and a supreme court decision has affirmed the decision.

Erik Johnson, a prominent and highly respectable surface creek (Colo.) rancheman, left his home Wednesday, and all efforts to locate him since that time have proven unsuccessful. He has been traced to the Gunnison river, and it is believed he committed suicide by drowning.

Probate Judge Shields examined Mrs. Eliza Shoenbrunner of Coalville as to her sanity and decided that she was an subject for the asylum at Provo and so committed her. On the 4th of December last he committed her brother to the same institution. This makes four insane victims from Summit county since the last census date, and Summit may be said to have contributed her quota for that period of time.

A skilful surgical operation has been performed on the seven-year-old son of Fred. Richard of Carbon, Wyo. The lad was suffering from an aggregation of rue in the cavity of the left lung, caused by a bad attack of pleurisy. The accumulation was so great that it forced the heart far over to the right side, and the boy was not expected to live. Dr. Ricketts took from the lad about two quarts of matter and the little fellow is now in a fair way to recover.

A very exciting wolf chase took place the other morning a few miles east of Payson city, says the Globe. About fourteen men in the city, all on horse back and accompanied by several dogs, started in pursuit of the animal. Lester Taylor, whose horse stumbled over a ditch, distinguished himself by turning about fourteen somersaults in the air and landing in a large sand mud puddle about forty feet in advance. After a hard run of about twelve miles the wolf succeeded in getting into the mountains and making good its escape.

Messrs. James Kippen and Eli Kittle came into town this week, (says the Morgan City correspondent of the Summit county Chronicle) bringing with them the carcass of a mountain lion which had killed sixteen sheep out of their flock the previous night. They had a most exciting chase after the creature which was in hiding in the brush near the sheep fold, but as soon as he showed himself he was quickly dispatched by a bullet from Mr. Kippen's rifle. The brute measured nearly nine feet and the residents of Porterville feel safer since his death.

While Daniel Fitch was digging a well on his ranch, one and a half miles east of Castle Rock, Colo., and when down about fifteen feet, he opened a small aperture out which a current of air rushed out with sufficient force to blow a candle. Mr. Fitch at first thought he had natural gas. A tube applied to the current would keep a live electric wire, but it would not ignite, neither would it produce a shock. The stream of air issues silently, but distinct roaring like the ocean is heard. Some believe there is a great cavern near, with a subterranean river.

Says the Cheyenne Leader: Bert Monington, a mail carrier between Cheyenne and Little Bear, has been taking a good time in this city at the expense of L. N. Bard, the Little Bear postmaster. The night before last he went to an attempt to dispose of postage stamps in the Chicago precinct. Thinking his action suspicious an officer was telephoned for and Monington arrested. After his release he threw away a large number of postage stamps, which were subsequently recovered. He had taken $15 worth of stamps and had used all but $3.50 worth in liquor. He claims that Bard owes him and he took the stamps in payment.

War to the death has been declared between the Continental and Rocky Mountain Oil companies. November last the Rocky Mountain Oil company decided that they wanted a portion of the profits of the oil purchased of the citizens of the three cities. They therefore opened a branch office, and a suit in oil from 20 to 15 cents immediately followed. Matters have been getting from bad to worse until the oil of the Continental company can now be purchased in Cedar City Springs at 5 cents per gallon, while it is stated the Smith Mercantile company in Manilton are giving to their regular customers all the oil they can use for nothing. There is no oil inspector in Colorado Springs, and, while the flashing point is supposed to be 150, it is said that this cheap oil is of a very inferior quality and will not stand 85.

Says the Park City Record—Thomas Bell had his right foot badly burned at the Marsac mill. Through slipping backward into the hot pulp while engaged in cleaning the floor. The burn was quite severe. * * * The directors of the Park City Light, Heat and Power company have audited and paid all bills and declared another dividend of ten cents a share on the capital stock of the organization. * * * George Hanks, who was fined $25 last week for peddling meat without a license and who threatened to appeal the case to the district court, failed to do so. He paid his fine, however, and concluded to let the matter drop at that. * * * Tom Wilson, brother of W. J., has met with a most painful accident. While splitting kindling wood he made a mistake and cut the thumb from his left hand.
