ORCHARD AND GARDEN.

TOPICS OF INTEREST TO AMERICAN HORTICULTURISTS.

The Elaeagnus Longipes, a Handsome Plant Desirable for Ornamental Purposes and a Valuable Addition to the List of Small Fruits.

Not only is this handsome plant desirable for ornamental purposes, but according to Orchard and Garden, from which is taken the accompanying illustration, Elaeagnus Longipes is also a valuable addition to the list of small fruits. It is a native of Japan, and has been grown in this country to a limited extent for some years.

It is quite hardy, says the authority quoted, grows to a height of from five to six feet, making a well branched bush of great beauty, with oblong oval leaves of light green above and silvery white beneath. The blossoms appear in May, in great profusion, small and pale yellow in color.

ELAEAGNUS LONGIPES.

The berries are ripe early in July, and [illegible] in shape, [illegible], and of light scarlet color. When cooked like cranberries, they make excellent sauce and pies.

There seems to be two distinct plants of Elaeagnus and four names for them—longipes, edulis, [illegible] and umbellatus, so that the [illegible] have become rather mixed and are mostly all grown in this country under the name of E. longipes, which is the best. Mr. William Falconer describes the two species thus: "The true longipes is the dense, bushy grower, which begins to bear fruit when two years old and only two feet high, and the umbellatus [illegible] as I have heard from one source is the vigorous willowy shrub that often attains a height of ten feet without showing the least inclination to bear fruit. Longipes is the better species by far."

Requirements of the Ash and Sycamore.

The ash and sycamore are two hardy and very accommodating forest trees that, in good soil, prove remunerative. The ash wants a deep and damp loam to grow it to perfection, planting it on light gravelly soil, chalk, rock, or heavy clayey soils being sure death to the tree. As for the sycamore, it must be admitted that a poor soil will never produce fine timber, it requiring that of rich and loamy texture to grow clean and valuable trees.

There is a great amount of truth in the advice to plant sycamore largely for economic purposes, that is where the soil is suitable, for that it grows quickly and needs no usual care is well known, while it will always command a good price, perhaps better in the future than in the past. Ash being largely in use for most purposes where great strength and elasticity are required, is likewise a valuable tree to grow, but it must be provided with a suitable soil, else the growth is meager and the timber of but second class value. In many situations larch and oak would be quite as profitable to grow as the sycamore and ash, so that before planting it will be well to consider first the quality of the soil to be planted, and second, local or other demands for the timber.

Some Remarkable Hybrids.

As a matter of history it may be stated that The Rural New Yorker was, so far as known, the first to produce a cross between a hardy (American) rose and rosa rugosa; that Bruant was the first to produce a cross between a tea and rosa rugosa; that Professor William Saunders was the first to announce hybrids between the blackberry and raspberry (the plants were destroyed before fruiting); that The Rural New Yorker was the first to fruit hybrids between the blackberry and raspberry; that The Rural New Yorker was the first to produce hybrids between rubus phoenicolasius and rosa rugosa, and also the first to produce hybrids between the blackberry and rubus phoenicolasius. The development of the last two will be watched with interest.

The Syringa.

The syringa or lilac, as some prefer to call it, is a favorite flower and one subject to improvement and the development of varieties. Bailey in his nursery book tells that new varieties and stocks are grown from seeds, which are usually stratified until spring. Green cuttings, handled in frames in summer, are largely used. Cuttings of mature wood will grow, also cuttings of the roots. Layers and suckers are often employed. Varieties are extensively grafted upon privet and common lilacs. Plate budding is occasionally employed. Lilacs will grow for a time when worked upon the ash. Grafting succeeds well when performed in the open air.

Horticultural Items.

The next annual session of the American Pomological society will be held at Washington.

Florida promises to become one of the best lemon growing districts in the world.

For growing celery the leading requisite is a good soil.

Mr. Berry considers the Worden grape one of the most important among recent acquisitions.

Of all the varieties of pears that have been introduced the Bartlett stands at the head of the list.

Potash fertilizers are of special value to fruit crops, and there are few superior to unleached wood ashes.

A New Lighthouse Burner.

There was recently exhibited in Dublin a new burner for lighthouse use, possessing twice the illuminating power of the largest burners now employed. It is calculated that this new burner, in connection with a specially devised system of lenses, will transmit a light equal to about 8,000,000 candles, which far exceeds the most powerful light at present used.—New York Times.

A New Stage Line.

The Union Pacific has commenced selling tickets from Salt Lake to Albion, Idaho, via Minidoka, at rate of $17.00. Persons going into Cache County via this route will avoid the long stage ride of sixty miles via Kelton, as the distance via stage from Minidoka to Albion is only thirty miles. Parties may leave Salt Lake on the evening of one day and arrive at Minidoka the afternoon of the second day without difficulty. dha
