AN UNFORTUNATE NON-EQUIVALENT.

ONE word upon a delicate subject lately threw Bombay into a breeze of excitement and fierce antagonism, which required the presence of the military to control. Last Spring a Parsee was translating a Life of Mohammed into one of the native languages, and in coming to a passage in which one of the Prophet's concubines was mentioned the translator was puzzled for a word to convey the exact meaning in the native, but at last rested upon an expression equivalent to "kept mistress." The Parsee meant no evil, he did not intend to use an objectionable word, but the Moahmmedans were indignant, believing it to be an intentional insult. The excitement waxed so warm that the luckless Parsee gathered up all the unsold copies of the book and delivered them to the police authorities. That, however, was not enough to satisfy insulted Mohammedan dignity. A Mohammedan mob attacked the Parsee quarter, wrecked and plundered the houses, and ransacked and defiled the temples. Then the Parsees rose upon the Mohammedans and a fierce battle ensued. A strong military force was called out, cannon was placed in position, and the religious processions of the belligerent parties were prohibited.

All this because of an inadvertent lowering of the dignity of woman in Mohammedan estimation, in conformity with the usages of "Christian" civilization.

THE SMOKE NUISANCE.

THE smoke nuisance has long been a vexed problem where coal is used, and many smoke-consuming arrangements have been devised, but apparently none of sufficiently facile application to be of general use, for we find the nuisance still complained of in different cities, and the subject of its abatement discussed.

Cincinnati has been agitating the question lately and the manufacturers there have come to the conclusion that smoke-consumption is impossible, and that no satisfactory plan for smoke prevention has been devised. A novel suggestion, however, was made by the wife of Judge Brinkerhoff, of Mansfield. The following is a portion of Mrs. Brinkerhoff's communication to the manufacturers' committee—

"I have been able to make some experiments that I think will solve the difficulty. My conclusion is that the offensive particles of coal smoke can be as easily managed as running water, gas, or any kind of drainage. My wonder is that it has so long escaped the scientists. Coal smoke begins to fall the moment it leaves the flue, unless blown away by a current of air. Now if the mouth of the flue were turned downward, into an enclosure free from currents, all the unconsumed particles would fall immediately; only mere vapor would rise, and that would do no harm. The use of coal so spoiled our rain water that we could not rest until I had hit upon some plan to remedy it. About four years ago I succeeded at a cost of about two dollars. The kitchen flue was so arranged that it no longer soils the water. No money would induce me to do without this arrangement so far as my own comfort is concerned. The cost of its adoption in private houses would be very light, I know, and I believe manufacturers would find it a great saving to build their smoke-stacks in conformity with this plan. I do not claim that it consumes the smoke, but it pens it up, and saves at least twenty per cent. of the heat.

"I wish to say that curving downward of the flue helps instead of hindering draught. I have never seen a smoke-consumer, but I have no idea that this plan conflicts at all with any patent now in use, as it is simply taking advantage of a natural law."

Mrs. B. was to meet the manufacturers, Sept. 15, and explain her plan. There could hardly be a simpler device, and if in general use it would work as well as is above represented, it would be worthy of universal adoption.

The use of coal as fuel has greatly multiplied of late years in this City and Territory, and the smoke nuisance has already begun to obtrude upon the attention of the public.

DINAH'S OPINION.—Down Louisville way, according to the Courier Journal, there was a scandal connected with the name of the colored minister of a colored congregation and the question of investigation was raised the other day in meeting, when one of the colored sisters gave her opinion as follows—

"Dis preacher an' gal bizness is gwine too fur, an' ef it don't subside 'fore long, every church in the country will have to 'pint a committee to 'vestigate de conduct of de preacher. Ef dey do dat, you might jest as well close up all de churches! No preacher could stan' eny sich foolishness. Dars two big churches belonging to de white folks, in town now, what's shet up jes' on 'count dis meddling wid de preacher. Mor' an dat, dese moral searchers, what's called cummittys, 'fore long, will get to rootin' aroun' 'mong de congregations; an' den deir own morals will be corrupted by bribes, which dey'll get from de brudderen and sistern for not telling all dey find out! Consequently, dey too will fall from grace, an' de whole concern will go to de debble. I tell you, frens' in Israel, we must frown dis bizness down."

IS THERE ANY PROTECTION?—The New York Herald of Aug. 27 says the principle has never been recognized in Hoboken that a policeman has no right to approach a woman or girl who is proceeding on her way and committing no offence, either by night or by day; because the policemen do such things to a highly culpable extent. The Herald relates a case of a young woman named Lizzie Smith who arrived by the night train from Baltimore, and after crossing from New Jersey to New York went by the Barclay Street ferry to Hoboken. A kind officer accosted her, and, as she was feeble, took her to a saloon to get some coffee. There was no coffee, but he introduced her to "a detective," telling her that the "detective" would take her to a place where she could get some coffee. The "detective" proceeded with her across some vacant lots, when she refused to go further, and he assaulted her indecently. Her cries brought relief, with the loss of her shawl and the pocket of her dress, containing a few dollars. Almost exhausted she reached the police station. She said that every policeman she met addressed her. The policemen denied parts of her story, but it is a poor sort of civilization where the guardians of the peace cannot be trusted.
