James Wiley is Accidentally Drowned at Circleville, Utah.

CATTLE SHIPMENT FROM MILFORD

Gold Excitement in Beaver—Which is the Missionary?—Going to Asia—Minor Mention.

Iron County Record: Hon. R. W. Begnyer, who has been under the weather for several days last past, was taken worse this week and at this writing is not able to leave his room.—B. F. Saunders will ship about 200 head of cows and calves from Milford this week. The stock was purchased in this and Washington counties, and will be shipped to Idaho for breeding purposes.

L. F. Campbell was recently summoned on a grand jury in the United States court held in Florence, Ariz. Campbell, in a letter to the judge presented several excuses why he could not serve, among others that he was a postmaster, merchant, miller, meteorologist of the Surveying societies of the valley and nurse to an infirm infant. The judge investigated the case, and finding the excuses to be untrue fined Mr. Campbell $50.00.

The Montpelier, Idaho, Post says that a "Blue Ribbon" letter was recently received at Bennington by Elder David E. Lindsay, summoning him to a mission to Australasia; but as there are two gentlemen in this place by the same name, it is a grave and serious question as to which is meant. While there is no doubt as to the willingness of either party to comply with the call, the Post says the quarrel is rather to see which shall not than to which shall go.

Quintus A. Nash, a wealthy and prominent merchant of Pomona, formerly of Los Angeles, Cal., became entranced with his wife that it is stated to have gold jewelry or unnecessary either about them. Acting upon this belief, they have gathered up all their valuable gold and diamond jewelry and silver and gold plate and given it to an evangelist, who will have it melted down and sold as bullion. Mr. and Mrs. Nash have arranged to sell all their property and dispose of their business interests, preparatory to going, as soon as possible, into the heart of Asia as missionaries. They propose to give away all they have to church organizations and start for the missionary field without a dollar of their own.

Word comes that there is more trouble between cattlemen and sheepmen in the Camas prairie, Oregon. The cattlemen took steps to forcibly drive off certain persons whose sheep were loitering on cattle pastures. It is said that fourteen sheepmen went to Frederick Martin, who has taken a bunch of cattle to a new range, and ordered him back to the locality from which he came, and later some men drove off his cattle, causing him great trouble in collecting the band. Adam Swalm, a sheepman, had a number of sheep shot which were in a corral. It is also stated that the same persons, or their sympathizers, burned a sheep camp belonging to Donald Ross. Sheepmen charge all these offenses to certain cattlemen of Camas prairie.

Detective Pickering has been looking up the identity of Eva Parker, alias Alva Johnson, who committed suicide at Stockton, Cal. This was done at the request of the Stockton authorities, who want to know where her people live in the East, that they may communicate with them. He learned that about two years ago she ran away from her home in Englewood, South Side, Chicago, with a man named E. Ravell, who is now tending bar in the William Tell house in this city. The girl's parents are well-to-do in Chicago, and the unfortunate girl who had been lured to California had everything that her heart could crave. She was engaged at the Midwinter Fair in stamping monograms on handkerchiefs, and will be remembered by thousands who watched her at the work.

An excitement was produced the other day by the exhibition of a piece of rock claimed to have been found on or near the Black Ridge, says the Beaver Chronicle. From a knowledge of the appearance of the country it is claimed the rock was found in, the whole story can be put down as having been made out of whole cloth. No such rock, except put there by someone, is to be found in the neighborhood. The most recent gold excitement comes from Maple Springs, some four or five miles southwest of Minersville. As is usual with new discoveries, fabulous stories are told of the rich discoveries made there recently. True it is that one gang of men have gone there, and an occasional straggler is following in their wake. If half we hear is true of this recent discovery, there must be an immense body of very rich ore in that region. No doubt the shutes are stretched to their fullest capacity, and but little more is liable to burst the whole thing asunder. We shall be pleased, however, to learn of a good strike at this place, as it would materially benefit the people of Minersville.

Last Saturday evening, says the Beaver Chronicle, James Wiley, of Circleville, was found dead in a water ditch near his premises. No one seems to have seen how the accident happened, but from what can be learned, Mr. Wiley had been about the town during the early evening, and about 7 o'clock started for home. Soon after he was found dead as stated. His body was on the sidewalk and his head in the ditch. It is supposed that he was taken with a fit, to which he was subject, and had fallen and rolled over so that his head got under the water, thus causing his death. The deceased was very highly esteemed in the community where he resided, having held positions of honor and trust. At his death he was justice of the peace, county attorney and postmaster. Deceased was the son of Robert and Sarah Wiley, well known in Beaver. The family came from Yorkshire, England, in 1853 and moved to Cedar, until the year 1857 they came on to Beaver, where they resided until some time after the father's death. James moved over to Circleville with his family seventeen years ago and has resided there continuously since.

A High Compliment.
