A NATURAL CONSEQUENCE.

The announcement which went forth yesterday evening that no bullion or ore had been received by the banks during the day was true in the sense that it was received, but the explanation is needed that Wells, Fargo & Co. took in a small consignment of contract bullion from the Mingo smelter. This did not represent custom work at all, and was but the working up under contract of ores remaining on hand from what had been there for some time; so that, practically considered, the explanation is the merest matter of form, the substantial fact remaining in exact accordance with the impression which the announcement produced.

Silver continues to tumble; all the producing silver mines excepting less than a dozen on the Pacific coast have gone shut down, and the majority if not all of these will soon have to do likewise; thousands of men are thrown out of employment, and of the comparatively few retained on the workings most of them have been or are to be curtailed in their wages. It is a situation that strikes impartially here, there and everywhere. Those who have not felt it yet will have to do so sooner or later unless the stress of events shall unexpectedly relax. And yet there be those in high places who cannot or will not see the writing on the wall, the examples that have fairly thronged the record for twenty years, showing that as the money of the world contracts the business of the world contracts with it. And the only remedy seriously considered is for the government of the United States to cease buying silver and coining silver dollars! Suppose it does this, will not some one who affects to see or thinks he can see the beneficial results to accrue therefrom, kindly point out the why and wherefore, so that we who are less skilled in divination and more given to fidelity may be made to see also?

"No ore or bullion received by any Salt Lake banks today" is an announcement which seems to us such a matter-of-course sequel to the one by telegraph that silver had fallen to 69, that we did not marvel at it in the least.

THE TAX RATE.

Reference to the municipal taxation question, as the same is being dealt with by the City Council, was made in yesterday's NEWS. The different rates proposed with the attendant reasons therefor are not quite as numerous as the councilmen themselves, but nearly so, and if out of the controversy the greatest good for the largest number shall come the extra expense to which the people are subjected by reason of special sessions will be not only offset but overborne by credits on the other side. Let the best be done that can be done is what we all ought to demand, and as little as we ought to be willing to accept.

Any system of taxation that may be adopted will have objectionable features to some, the number varying in accordance with the extent to which it operates especially against them; so that it is useless to expect any plan to be adopted with no dissenting voices or its enforcement to take place without complaint and opposition. And some people are so constituted that they must grumble anyway, no matter how fairly they are treated. To expect or try to escape things of this kind is life in the extreme and, we repeat, the proper thing to do is to agree upon that plan which mature judgment unbiased by partisanship and recklessness indifferent to political gain or the hope thereof may suggest, keeping equity and impartiality always in full view.

The citizen pays with a certain proportion of his substance to duly constituted authority at certain times and that he may be ruled or that those who levy the taxation may become squalled highwaymen without restraint, but that the expense of carrying on the corporation of which he is a member may be met and the concern kept in proper running order. The only consideration he receives or can expect is to be exempt from annoyance or loss from whatever source when the same can reasonably be prevented, the protection of his and his family's persons and property and the education of his children. We all realize that these matters cannot be adjusted to any fixed scale, that peculiar circumstances and varying conditions make it necessary to be discriminating, and thus each corporate component unit must be the sole judge of what it must and must not have. But let not these elements to determine such questions imagine for a moment that because of their positions those for whom and in whose name they act are excluded from all participation in the different subjects as they arise; on the contrary they should have much to say and say it so as to be understood, in order that the servants may have no excuse for going wrong.

The proposition to make the tax rate higher than five mills on the dollar should be considered from two points of view: First, is the revenue or any part thereof designed for private or other objects than such as it may properly be used for? Second, can the city get along with the revenue which that rate would produce and neglect no necessary or useful division of the public service or any needed public improvement? And let not the words "properly," "necessary" and "needed" be determined by the lackeys of the politician having in view the welfare of his party nor the speculator or schemer on the lookout for profitable ventures; but rather let the deliberations come from a consideration for and reference to the wishes of the majority and such matters and things as are so apparent that nothing need be said regarding them.

Let the vexation of taxation be reduced to its lowest possible limits consistent with the welfare and progress of the community, and it does seem to us that this ought to be accomplished on a five-mill basis. Suppose it be tried, anyway, and then if sufficient reasons can be shown for raising the rate, there will be found less opposition for so doing.

THE RUSSIAN EXTRADITION TREATY.

Without being made familiar with its purport and knowing nothing of its text, the much-talked-of extradition treaty with Russia was promulgated to the people of the United States by President Cleveland on the 5th instant and it went into effect on Saturday last. A summary of the document had previously been published and circulated; but this proved to be incomplete and therefore to some extent misleading, and as it is a document of considerable importance and creates new conditions with reference to our relations with a friendly power, such things should not be. Much of the language is, as is customary, redundant if not in some case superfluous, the object being to make everything secure even at the expense of words and the waste of time in reading them.

The offenses for the commission of any one or more of which a person will be delivered up by either government on demand being made are as follows:

1. Murder and manslaughter, when voluntary.
2. Rape, abortion.
3. Arson.
4. Burglary, to be defined by the act of breaking and entering by night into the dwelling house of another with intent to commit robbery; robbery, defined to be the act of violently and forcibly taking from the person of another money or goods by violence or by putting him in fear; larceny, when the value of the property shall exceed $200 or 500 rubles.
5. Forgery and the utterance of forged papers, including public, sovereign or governmental acts.
6. The fabrication or circulation of counterfeit public money, either coin or paper, or of counterfeit public bonds, coupons of the public debt, bond notes, obligations, or, in general, of any counterfeit title or instrument of credit; the counterfeiting of seals and dies, impressions, stamps and checks of state and public administrations and the utterance thereof.
7. The embezzlement of public moneys by public officers or depositaries.
8. Embezzlement by any person or persons, hired or salaried, to the detriment of their employers, when the value of the property so taken shall exceed $200 or 500 rubles.
9. Piracy or mutiny on shipboard, whenever the crew or part thereof shall have taken possession of the vessel by fraud or by violence against the commanders.
10. Willful or unlawful destruction or obstruction of railroads which endanger human life.

Not only can the persons committing such offenses be extradited, but those who are charged therewith, or have attempted or are charged with attempting any of them, or have participated or are charged with participating in the same as accessories before the fact provided such attempt or participation are punishable by the laws of both countries, are also subject to extradition.

The provision regarding which the greatest amount of discussion has taken place is that in relation to political crimes and is as follows:

"It is made to appear that something is sought with a view to try or punish the person demanded for an offense of a political character, surrender shall not take place; and if a person who has been delivered up for trial or sentenced for trial or sentenced for any political offense, attempts to escape to his extradition, on the ground that any person demanded for an offense extraditable prior to the date at which the convention shall take effect. An attempt against the life of the head of a foreign government, or against that of any member of his family, when such attempt constitutes the act known or intended to be a murder, or of poisoning, or of assassination or of poisoning, or of assassination, or of poisoning, or of assassination, shall not be considered a political offense or an act connected with such an offense.

Except for the fact that Russia is not dealt with in civilization, humane methods and Christianity, and results in consummate which on our soil are not thought of, there would seem nothing unduly stringent in any of the provisions of the treaty on the face of it. It is, however, contended by those opposed to it that the political exception is insidious and designed to work hardships in ways not apparent. One of these is that it does not require much of an act to constitute a person a suspect in Russia, indeed he may become one without intentionally offensive acts at all; he is then forbidden to depart from the country without a passport, which he cannot get, and while minors stating him in instance for a purely technical offense or perhaps no offense at all, the temptation to commit forgery by preparing a fictitious passport is very great and when this is done, if the "offender" should happen to land in the United States his doom is sealed; in fact, he might not be permitted to land, as the requisition would surely be hurrahed of him.

The remainder of the treaty consists mainly of the details of procedure in the process of extradition. It is provided, for example, that if the person demanded be held for trial in the country on which the demand is made, it shall be optional with the latter to grant extradition or to proceed with the trial; provided, that unless the trial shall be for the crime for which the fugitive is claimed, the delay shall not prevent ultimate extradition; that requisitions shall be made by the diplomatic agent of the demanding government, and in case of the absence of such agent by the superior consular officer; that in cases where the person demanded has been convicted of the crime an authenticated copy of the judgment of conviction shall accompany the demand, and that in cases where only a charge of crime is made an authenticated copy of a warrant of arrest or of some other equivalent document must accompany the demand.

JOSEPH THE PROPHET.

Of peculiar interest and appropriateness, just at this anniversary time, will be found a modest pamphlet entitled "Reminiscences of Joseph the Prophet and the coming forth of the Book of Mormon," written and published by Elder Edward Stevenson of this city. It contains six chapters, and these with the illustrations are comprised within forty-eight pages. The absorbing interest which among the Saints will ever cling about the personality of the subject of the sketch constitutes the chief charm of the latter for local readers. Those not of our faith will find it a plain, straightforward story, accurate as to its dates and statements, and teeming from every page with sincere affection and admiration for the martyr whose life it briefly records.

It is the intention of the publisher to distribute several hundred copies gratuitously at the World's Fair—sending it out as a missionary of truth. But the edition is large enough to supply all their demands at moderate rates, and the NEWS hopes it will receive the cordial reception that it deserves from the community.

CONNECTICUT SHAKES the most intermarital case of divorce and marriage on record. A Hartford woman, Mrs. Tiffany, secured a divorce and married a former lover named Wilcox. A year later she was legally separated from Wilcox and remarried Tiffany. And now she has secured a divorce from Tiffany and is about to marry Wilcox once more. She is a comparatively young woman yet, too.

THE MODE Princess May will wear when she sets out on her honeymoon journey—her "going-away" dress, as the English call it—will be of brown poplin a very soft and mellow tone of brown. The dress and cape will be richly ornamented with gold braid in an effective design.—Society Paragraph.

After which, let us hope, the debate on the home rule bill will be resumed and other comparatively trifling affairs of state receive consideration.

WE BELIEVE with some surprise that ex-Governor Campbell is engaged in making a set of fresh predictions as to the certainty of Major McKinley's defeat for the Ohio governorship next October. It will be remembered that at the last state election couple the same predictions it was a certain Mr. Campbell who was set in the afterwhile.

EX-EMPRESS EUGENIE has a most dropped out of sight. She was in Paris not long ago and is reported to have exhibited some sensibility of memories by climbing five flights of stairs to an apartment house to call on Victor Hugo, the octogenarian, who was ill in bed. Dirty was one of Napoleon III.'s mistresses and the divided mind of his family.

EXPRESSMAN HARRISON, who has been down here for his substitute defense as Lizzie Borden, is nominated by a Maine newspaper as the next Republican candidate for the presidency. Has it come to this, that to secure the highest political honors one must be either in criminal prison or out?

A MAN who is lonely and lady or ninety-one years, residing on Long Island, has taken a chance a few days ago to fall and break her leg. Upon being carried to her bed she mournfully exclaimed, "Well, I suppose now that I shall be a cripple for life."

THE HERALD (Va.) Ring says: "We have already more silver than we know what to do with." This sounds too much like an editorial of the circulation liar to be believed of any editor.

Liquidation Sale

AT COST!

FOR A LIMITED NUMBER OF DAYS THE

J. H. Leyson Company's

STOCK OF

JEWELRY, WATCHES, DIAMONDS AND SILVER

To be closed at cost for TWENTY-FOUR DAYS after the commencement of T. S. Edelman to liquidate the interest of Mr. Hugh Maxwell.

By virtue of authority in me vested, I will offer at cost for 24 days, commencing 10 a. m., Saturday, July 1, and continuing, open evenings, till July 25, the entire stock (with the single exception of Souvenir Spoons) of the J. H. Leyson Co., Jewelers of 128 Main Street, Salt Lake City. The sale will be a private sale at cost, and with the one unimportant exception noted, without reserve.

The opportunity for the purchase of Watches or Diamonds, Jewelry or Silver, will be without a precedent in this city as regards the price. As by cost is meant what dealers pay at wholesale, and the unexhausted pledges himself that in no instance will more than the cost of the article be asked.

The stock as is well known is the finest and most tastefully selected ever brought to this city, besides which it is all new, none of it, notably the talk on glass, has but just arrived and is from the newest patterns out for the Columbian display at Chicago.

It is confidently believed that this sale will prove of interest to the people of this city and vicinity. Mr. Maudlin will be in attendance and will assist. Satisfaction assured and every article guaranteed. Terms of sale Cash.

During the sale repair work not solicited.
