LIFE.

We build our puny works on beds of sand,
Gilding the roughness with a film of gold.
The winds loosed from the hollow of His hand,
Sweep o'er the temple, and the tale is told.
We climb the rugged steps of earthly fame,
Leaving sweet blossoms in the vale below,
And learn too late that on the upper height
Is the cold glitter of eternal snow.
We watch and wait, we strive and hope in vain,
For full fruition of our happy dream;
The mirage springs afresh, still further on
The golden apples are not what they seem.
We bear our crosses with too loud complaint,
As if He could not hear who bore them first,
And with the paths wherein our footing treads,
With stubborn willfulness, oft we choose the worst.
Yet from His human heart, He dropped the seed
That springs eternal in the deathless soul,
And the dim reckoner of our feeble hands
Are blossoms of the fruit that waits the goal.
And in the tender, erring heart He made
With all its faults and burdens of regret,
The imprint of a perfect life is traced,
The kingly seal upon its tab set.

J. H. WARD.

Salt Lake City, April, 1878.

The Use of Tea and Coffee.

Question—Is the use of coffee and tea with our meals injurious?

Answer—They have been charged with producing dyspepsia, neuralgias, and other injurious effects upon the stomach, bowels and nervous system generally.

I quote the opinions of the following well-known authors upon this subject, and would add that my own personal and professional experience fully coincides with the views herein presented.

Dr. Johnson says: We are convinced by many years' observation that very many of the diseases we are called upon to treat, as dyspepsia, nervous and sick headache, heart disease, paralysis, epilepsy, neuralgia, etc., are the legitimate and certain fruits of these narcotic stimulants.

Hahnemann describes a number of diseases induced by these beverages, and assures us "that they are most insidious and dangerous, enemies, which slowly and silently undermine the citadel of life itself."

Dr. Bell says, expressly, that coffee has a "pernicious effect upon the stomach, bowels and nervous system generally."

Dr. Shurtleff, of Boston, says, "of all the common beverages drank in society, coffee is decidedly the worst."

Mr. Graham declares that "both tea and coffee are among the most powerful poisons of the vegetable kingdom."

Dr. Combe observes, that "tea and coffee not only ruin the stomach, but seriously derange the health of the brain and nervous system."

Dr. Teste says, that "coffee is responsible for six or seven-tenths of the neuralgia we have to treat daily."

Question — We often hear the term "tea-drunkard." Will you tell us what class of persons is meant by it?

Answer—Their number is legion; they are of both sexes, but more of women than men. Instead of using tea in moderation, or as an occasional beverage, they swill it down three or more times a day, in quantities that are incompatible with health. They are as much slaves to the tea-pot as the drunkard is to his bottle. They are tea-drunkards. Tea, in anything but great moderation, is a poison capable of ruining the stomach, enfeebling and disordering the heart's action, shattering the nerves and ruining the health and happiness of the victim. In few words, without holding that the use of tea is as bad as the use of alcoholic liquors, one may well believe that the total abstinence reformers have, in their red-hot zeal against rum, encouraged an indulgence in tea-drinking which will one day have to be fought against with might and main to prevent the wholesale ruin of multitudes. A tea-drunkard may be defined as one who drinks strong tea several times a day, who depends on it instead of food and rest for strength, and who can not go without bringing on distressing symptoms.—Physiologist and Family Physician.

Husband—Was the Ladies' Club lively to-night, dear? Wife—No; awfully dull. Every member was present, and of course one can't speak of people before their faces. So, we had nothing to speak about!
