ROBBERS LYNCHED.

The Terrible Work of a Mob Thirsting for Blood.

JESTS AND CURSES TO THE LAST.

The Jail Attacked by a Crowd, the Authorities Yield and the Feast Commences.

DALLAS, Tex., Feb. 23.—A special to the News from Wichita Falls, Texas, says:

At [illegible] o'clock tonight a mob of several thousand persons attacked the jail here, where Foster Crawford and "the kid" were confined. After a show of resistance on the part of the authorities, the mob battered in the jail doors and forcibly took possession of the prisoners.

The two men were taken to the bank which they attempted to rob yesterday, and an improvised scaffold was erected. The first impulse of the half-crazed mob was to burn the prisoners, but calmer counsel prevailed.

Some of "hang the kid first" went up. Then others, "No, hang the oldest first."

"The kid" refused to say a word, and those having him in charge yanked him on to the box. He had on high-heel boots, black pants and a deep-red flannel shirt, which added a gruesome brilliancy to the scene. In a moment the rope was about his neck, and a man who, some say, looked like one of the men whose horses had been taken yesterday, climbed up a telegraph pole and fixed one end of the rope across the cross-bar. All this time "The Kid" was jesting at the crowd, laughing and cursing. He never quivered. He was asked to say what he wanted, and was told he would be given a hearing.

He said: "By ——, that's all right. If you are impatient, swing me up now. I ain't afraid to die, not a —— bit of it."

A voice in the audience—You're going to die now. Tell us your name.

The Kid—I don't give a —— if I do. It's Younger Lewis, and my father and mother reside in Neosho, Mo.

"Any message?" from a voice in the crowd.

"Well, tell my father I was not scared a bit; that I died like a nervy man."

"Anything for your mother?"

"No, not a word. She will see the message to the old man. Say, you fellows go and look in that dugout and you will find $10,000 there."

The kid, or Younger Lewis, as he at the last moment called himself, continued chatting and laughing with the crowd, poking fun at them and cursing for a moment, and then some one yelled, "Time is up."

The kid said: "I am 20 years old. I am dead game and ready to die; go ahead."

In an instant he was pulled up above the throng. He never quivered or kicked. He just went up in the air, and he is hanging there now.

He was the coolest man in all the crowd.

All the while Crawford was a spectator of the scene. He began to weaken and confessed, giving some valuable information. He placed the responsibility for the crime upon the kid. The mob shoved him up to the improvised platform next to the bank he attempted to rob, and his head was about on a level with the dangling feet of his companion. He asked for Capt. Burnett. The latter was a spectator in the crowd. He went to Crawford and had a long talk. Crawford had worked on Burnett's ranch for years, and was a trusted man. He began stealing his employer's stock, however, and associating with the territory outlaws. The two parted company. Crawford confessed to the robbery of yesterday, but denied the murder. He was a small man poorly clad, with a red face and short clipped black moustache.

When they began to look for a second rope he begged for whisky. It was given him. He talked, and then begged for more. He again addressed the crowd in Comanche, English and Spanish. Those who understood him say his utterances were incoherent.

The rope soon arrived and it was put about his neck. He fell forward, either in a faint or from the effects of the liquor he had drunk. He was soon strung up along with his companion, and their bodies are still dangling in the air.

WOULD NOT LISTEN TO REASON.

The funeral of Dorsey, the murdered cashier, occurred at 3 o'clock, and the long procession of carriages and the grief of the widow and three children weakened the fires that had been smouldering all day and there was ominous activity apparent on the streets. At dark the streets were nearly deserted and it began to be whispered that the fire bell would be heard all night. Everyone understood this was to announce that arrangements for the lynching had been completed.

At 9 o'clock the fire bell rang out and people could be seen coming from everywhere. Everybody went toward the jail. When the crowd had reached the steps leading into the yard they found District Judge Miller, Attorney R. E. Huff, and District Attorney Carter waiting for them. Judge Miller and Huff addressed the crowd, urging the abandonment of the lynching.

A voice from the crowd said: "Think of the blood of poor Dorsey."

Miller replied: "If poor Dorsey could speak to you tonight he would join with me in asking you not to commit this great wrong."

Another voice rang out: "Think of the poor widow."

"That poor widow," said the judge, "has already asked that you refrain from mob violence and allow the law to take its course."

Cries from the crowd such as "choke him off," "let's go and take them," followed, but the crowd hesitated. They lacked organization and needed a leader. The crowd wavered, but as a large number from the country kept arriving fresh courage was inspired, and the jail was finally surrounded. Here a halt of two or three minutes was made and there was considerable haranguing. Then the crowd edged slowly toward the deputies and made a rush. The door was broken open, the men poured themselves in to the upper story of the jail, where the prisoners were confined. The doors of the cell where the two men wanted were confined, were forced with crowbars, and an entrance effected. Foster Crawford and Younger Lewis, alias "the kid" greeted their captors with a "howdy boys," telling them they were ready. They were rushed to the vicinity of the bank they had endeavored to rob and lynched.

Thomas C. Platt Slips and Falls.

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—Thomas C. Platt slipped on the sidewalk near the Twenty-third street entrance to the Fifth Avenue hotel last night and fell heavily, injuring his hip and thigh. A physician was summoned after Mr. Platt had been assisted to his room. An examination revealed that no bones had been broken, but that the senator had suffered a strain and severe nervous shock. His son, Frank Platt, was summoned, and remained with his father some time. Mr. Platt, it is said, will be confined to his room for some days.

Sound Money Meeting.

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—The sound-money committee of the chamber of commerce held a meeting in the rooms of the chamber of commerce. Only fourteen members of the committee were present. The meeting was private. There was a discussion of financial problems and at its conclusion several resolutions were offered.

One submitted by Richard Young and seconded by Joseph C. Hendricks, read:

"Resolved, That the executive committee be required to prepare and submit to the chamber of commerce an address inviting the co-operation of all the commercial bodies and of all business men in the movement to secure the adoption by the national convention of both political parties of unequivocal declarations in favor of the maintenance of the present standard of value."

Another resolution offered by Gustav H. Schwab read:

"Resolved, That it is the sense of this committee that the agitation in favor of the maintenance of the present standard of value and against the free coinage of silver should be prosecuted with vigor.

"Resolved, That the executive committee be instructed to continue such work of agitation by the distribution of sound money literature and by all other proper and lawful means at its command.

"Resolved, That the committee on finance be requested to take the necessary steps to secure the funds for the carrying on of this work."

The resolutions were adopted unanimously.

Henry Hentz, chairman of the general committee, presided. When the general committee adjourned there was a short meeting of the executive committee, of which Gustav H. Schwab is chairman, but the only business transacted was the reading of the resolutions reported from the general committee. No decided measures were taken.

Chairman Hentz of the general committee said the fight for sound money would be kept up resolutely on the lines already laid down by the committee. He said that while he believed the "silver heresy" was dying out, he realized that the fight was not yet ended, and that the chamber of commerce would be in the front ranks in the fight for "sound money."

An A. P. A. Protest.

PEORIA, Ill., Feb. 26.—The A. P. A. state convention adopted the following unanimously with three cheers and a tiger:

Whereas, The state of Wisconsin has tendered the general government a statue of the Jesuit priest, Pere Marquette; and,

Whereas, The government has accepted the said statue, and it is the design to place it in the statuary hall, together with that of the immortal Lincoln, stricken down by the hand of a Jesuit, therefore be it,

Resolved, By the A. P. A. of the state of Illinois, in convention assembled, that we protest against placing that statue among those of American statesmen, and that the state secretary notify the Illinois congressmen of this action.

Free Silver Democrats.

OMAHA, Feb. 26.—The free silver Democratic state central committee met in Omaha tonight to fix the date for selecting delegates to the Chicago convention. April 22nd was the time named for the convention to be held at Lincoln. This means that two Democratic delegations will go from Nebraska to the national convention.

A Princess Ill.

CONCERNING UTAH.

Judge Colborn Addresses the Chicago Mining Exchange.

CHICAGO, Feb. 26.—Judge E. F. Colborn, of Salt Lake City, addressed the members of the Chicago mineral and mining exchange today, and gave interesting facts and figures concerning the growth and development of Utah. Judge Colborn is enthusiastic in his support of the new State, and in the course of his remarks he cited his reasons for manifesting that enthusiasm. The people of the United States, he said, were not aware of the vast productiveness of Utah. In eighteen years the State has produced $[illegible] in gold and silver, although its total area is only 85,000 square miles.

ENGLAND'S ISOLATION.

Really Her Strength, Says Mr. Goschen —A Fallacy Dislodged.

LONDON, Feb. 26.—Mr. G. J. Goschen, first lord of the admiralty, speaking at Lewes, said conciliation, negotiation and arbitration might be valuable, but woe to the nation lacking the courage of means to back their opinion by their own resources. The new system of log-rolling and bartering for alliances, he said, had replaced the old system of a balance of power between European nations. England was not versed at this game, he added, and had stood aloof, although her alliance was courted by several groups of powers.

"Our isolation," Mr. Goschen continued, "is not one of weakness, but of freedom to act independently. This has caused misunderstandings. But it might be hoped that recent complications have shown our neighbors that the national spirit is not dead, and that on certain occasions we might be combustible. Without betraying secrets, I might say that a very distinguished German statesman, not Prince Bismarck, has been convinced for years that England could not be moved to war by anything short of an attack on her vital interests in this country. That was a dangerous fallacy which has now presently been dislodged."

He was able to say, Mr. Goschen added, that our relations with the German emperor were now as cordial as they could possibly be. He concluded with a reference to the necessity for a powerful fleet.

THE BROWN TRIAL.

The Accused Pastor Accuses His Judges of Unfairness.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 27.—The Rev. Dr. C. O. Brown became the accuser of his judges last night. In an impassioned address he charged the moderator, the Rev. D. J. K. McLean, with deliberate unfairness. He accused the council of having become prejudiced against him and of having admitted testimony which had no proper place before the court. The scene which followed this attack was one of the greatest excitement. Partisans of the accused pastor applauded his words and hundreds stamped their approval of the action taken by the council.

In the midst of the hubbub, R. G. McMillan, whose name has been disagreeably connected by Dr. Brown with that of Mrs. Stockton, jumped to the platform and in threatening words and actions denounced the pastor. The excited visitor was induced to retire, and when quiet was restored Dr. Brown was ordered to make specific charges. He did so, but the council not only declined to investigate them, but adopted a unanimous vote of confidence in the moderator. While the excitement was at its height Mrs. Brown attempted to persuade her husband to cease his attack, but he turned quickly and replied: "I might as well make it now, for I am gone anyway." The excitement of the evening came as a climax to the sensational testimony given at the trial of Rev. Dr. Brown by Mrs. Thurston, whose testimony was corroborative of many of the alleged facts in the Overman interview. Most of the information which Mrs. Thurston gave to the council she had received from Mattie Overman and Mrs. Tunnell. It involved nearly all of the leading points advanced by Mrs. Mary A. Davidson.

The Rev. Dr. Brown precipitated the scene by asking as his first question in cross examination if Mrs. Thurston had ever had reason to be jealous of her husband. The woman's face flushed in anger and the moderator decided that the question was unfair. This began the quarrel.

Mrs. M. A. Davidson, acting under the advice of her attorney, declined to appear as a witness. Her testimony which had been given in the police court was read.

Mrs. Eaton also declined to appear in person and her deposition of important facts was presented to the council.

Suffering in Australia.

VANCOUVER, B. C., Feb. 27.—The Canadian-Australian steamer Miowera from Sydney brings news of great suffering and loss of property in Australia by the extraordinary climatic conditions. There is unprecedented heat on land and excessive high death rate from sunstroke, eighty corpses being buried in Sydney in one day. Terrific storms prevail along the coast. Crops in a great many localities have been ruined. Herds of stock are starving and dying for want of water and there is a distressing array of marine casualties reported.

The town of Murrurundi was almost entirely destroyed by an electric wind storm. It was night when the storm struck there. The whole country for thirty minutes was aflame with balls of fire and scintillating sparks of light. On the Queensland coast the storm was of awful violence. At midnight on January 28th the steamer Glenworth was driven on the rocks of Gladstone. There were 100 people on board. The crew, with a splendid display of courage and obedience, abandoned the vessel with some 35 passengers, landing them safely at the light house. The vessel is a total wreck.

AN ANTI-ENGLISH PLOT.

European Powers Would Like to See the British Leave Egypt.

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—A special to the Herald from St. Petersburg says: The Novoe Vremya asserts that Austria has been approached by the Porte with a view to ascertaining whether she would support the endeavor of Turkey to induce England to evacuate Egypt. The application met with a sharp reply in the negative.

The same paper alleges the Russia, Germany and France are prepared to give their support to the Porte in the matter.
