CO-OPERATION IN ENGLAND.

WE conclude our notice of co-operation at Leeds.

The interest of a member in such a house may be disposed of to others, members or non-members, subject to the rules of the society. The building committee have supervisory control over such house until all the society's dues on it are cancelled. As an instance of the rates of reimbursement, a hundred and twenty pounds for building can be repaid with interest, (5 per cent) by five shillings per week, or £3 5 s. per quarter. This total would be thus liquidated in twelve years and one month. The amount can be paid quicker if the payer chooses. After ten per cent. has been repaid by contribution, the directors have power to grant exemption or delay of three months from contributions in case of inability or distress of the payer, and three months further exemption for each tenth paid by contribution. He also pays five shillings per annum for working expenses.

The society's usual rate of interest is paid on members' deposits or contributions, and on moneys paid for a house before it is tenantable.

All properties of the society are insured, cost of insurance to be repaid by the purchasers.

There are fines for neglect in paying subscription, for house or land, and when such fines, with subscriptions and interest thereupon, equal the sum paid in the ratio of one to five, the society may take possession and receive rent of the property, and dispose of it if not redeemed within twelve months.

In the last half-yearly report (July 30) the following figures are given — members, 9,071; capital, £49,469 6 0; turn over £157,788 6 0; net profit, £8,681 2 10, the latter divided into flour department, £2,020 18 1½; grocery department, £3,004 18 3½; drapery, boots and shoes and outfitting departments, £83 11 1; coal, £316 15 4.

The capital (shares) paid in receives five per cent interest. Then the profits of the business are equally divided among the members, in proportion to the extent of their purchases from the society. Thus, besides the interest on its paid in shares, each member receives the whole net profit on the amount of his purchases from the society. If the net profit of the society's business is fifteen per cent., and a member purchases a hundred pounds worth of goods from the society, his share of the net profits is fifteen pounds.

We understand that this society works well, and that the fairness of either principle or practice is never questioned, which speaks well for the honorable manner in which the business of the society is conducted, and the satisfaction which it gives to the members.

THE WOMEN WENT AGAINST IT.

AT THE annual meeting of the Western Suffrage Association at Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, Mrs. Lucy Stone, chairman of the executive committee, read the fourth annual report, in which it was stated that the committee had corresponded with members of Congress and worked actively to defeat the effort to merge Wyoming in Colorado, and to abolish woman suffrage in Utah. The report says:

The Judiciary Committee proposed and carried through the United States Senate a bill to suppress polygamy in Utah, which also prohibited women from voting, and established the English Common Law concerning marriage in Utah, by which it existed at the time of the Declaration of Independence. The Senate did not construed at that time, nor since, to confer upon the wife the "custody of the person," the right to "give consent to marriage," the right to keep her earnings, the right to all her money. It took from the wife everything, rights of person, rights of property, blotted out her legal existence, and left her with the one right to be maintained. A right which is accorded to idiots and total paupers.

For this enormity Senator Frelinghuysen, of New Jersey, is especially responsible. Under the leadership of "The cannon ball as it rolled at the time of the adoption of the Declaration of Independence," he struck a desperate blow at every right of the married woman of that Territory. The bill passed the Senate but was defeated in the House by the active opposition of Mr. Sargent of California, (now Senator from that State) and by other representatives, so the women of Utah still vote.

Correspondence.

PARK CITY, Oct. 12, 1873.

Editor Deseret News:

Here we are just over the divide separating the head waters of Big Cottonwood from those of Little Canyon creek. From its elevated sources this beautiful stream rushes down the mountain slopes till it emerges into a lovely little vale declining northward. The mountain tops are close by, easy of ascent and covered with thick growths of young maple, birch, quakenasp, black haw, choke cherry, service berry, wild rose, &c.

"ON THE MOUNTAIN TOPS," &c.

At the head of this enchanting little alcove, on either slope of the creek, on the hill-side, repose the famous silver-bearing deposits of Parley's Park district. On any side are observable the works of the Flagstaff, Sunnyside, McHenry, and Pioneer; and on the other those of the Ontario, Pinyon, Walker and Webster, Silver Cloud, with other locations, most of which were made two years ago.

THE ONTARIO AND FLAGSTAFF are the only mines now working—a general suspension having taken place a short time since because there was no sale for ore. The Ontario, owned by a California company, represented by Geo. Hurst, Esq., are erecting hoisting works, the shaft to be six feet square. With their present appliances two men are able to take out eight tons of ore per day. The Ontario assays from $75 to $350 per ton. Though without doubt one of

THE RICHEST DEPOSITS IN UTAH.

The proprietors of the Ontario are shipping no ore. Of course the other mines are also storing their products.

A TWENTY-STAMP MILL

is to be erected by the Flagstaff company early the ensuing season, the race for which has already been constructed. This once in operation, the camp here must become one of the liveliest in the mountains.

PARK CITY,

one of the most romantic spots, will then become a favorite place of mid-summer resort for pleasure seekers and invalids desirous of inhaling an atmosphere rarified by immediate contact with eternal snows.

THE ALTITUDE

of Park City is nearly a thousand feet above that of Parley's Park, and mackinacs and buffalo robes are in order always in courting

"Tired Nature's sweet restorer, balmy sleep."

THE SUNNYSIDE,

located, as its name would imply, on the eastern slope of the hill, owned by Messrs. Hendry, Beatty and Pickel, must not be thought unworthy of special reference. They have run a tunnel 180 feet to a thirty-inch vein, assaying from $30 to $175 per ton, affording one of the finest paying prospects.

No one, probably, has been so long and so actively identified with the development of this section of Utah as who is also the "oldest inhabitant" of Park City. A few rods below the camp, in the lovely vale first described, he has erected a hotel, store, house for storing ore, blacksmith shop, and other convenience of public and private life. He has just finished a handsome new barn, 30 x 50 feet,

A LIBERTY POLE,

sixty feet to halliard-block, without cap, cross-trees or "spike," stands directly in front of the Snyder House, a spruce and sprightly monument of ye honest miners' good will to the host; and, as I am informed, the loyal bunting, of appropriate dimensions, is ready to be sent aloft on the coming declaration day, amid the rending "shouts of the

MOST LOYAL CAMP IN AMERICA.

Some scions of the internal revenue service (in real revenue-cutter livery) visited Park City a few days since, put up at the hotel, had their horses fed and groomed without charge, and politely informed the judge that he was a prisoner and must accompany them to Salt Lake instanter.

"What's the matter?" coolly inquired the judge.

"Oh, nothing, but a little matter of liquor and tobacco selling without revenue license," replied the most promising of the two deputies; and here he trembingly produced a paper which he said was a warrant for the judge's arrest and asked if he should read it.

"It is altogether immaterial, sir," quickly rejoined the judge. "I will go with you without delay."

COULDN'T POSSIBLY STOP!

And surely enough, just as the sun dropped below those western hill-tops, four persons, including Judge Snyder and a friend of the deputies, dashed from the hotel door and were in a few moments obscured in the haze and dust far below,

ON THE RUSH FOR TOWN.

Early in the morning of the Sabbath of our Jewish fellow citizens, went the deputy and his night-voyagers into the city.

THE DAMAGES.

Reserving details for the pages of history, it will suffice now to state that, after due presentation, during which Judge Snyder mildly affirmed that he had been reliably (as he thought) informed that by recent act of Congress all revenue tax on liquor and tobacco had been placed upon the manufacturers and consequently removed from dealers, the deputy put in his bill for services for self, team, feed and hotel charges, from Salt Lake to Park City—out and back same day and night—at the extremely modest sum of about forty-five dollars, to which the collector added a moderate fine besides license fees, and the judge paid the little "salary grab" as gallantly as though it had been for a marriage certificate.

THE INDIGNATION OF THE PARKERS

was roused to a boiling point when they learned how shabbily the Judge, who had always been an example in law-abiding and honor, had been handled by the internal revenue officers. They console themselves, however, in the axiom, "After much tribulation," &c.

THE FRESH ICE

every morning at Park City, unquestionably had much to do in cooling off the inflamed choler of the united populace on this occasion, who don't begin to have among them so much as came to the surface in a social gathering at Hill's Farm lately. The B's and the C's were so heavenly in their aspirations as to be utterly unapproachable by the Y's and Z's. One could not help remarking what a change a few years and a little mere make in some folks. It is unfortunate that all cannot smell sweet whilst, as Barnaby Rudge would have it.

A NEW POST OFFICE,

It is presumable, has been established at General Kimball's.

STAGER.

ORDER OFFICE,
October 24, 1873.

Editor Deseret News:

Since my last note to you, we have had a variety of weather here—warm, moderate, cold, and quite. We have now about one and a half inches of snow, and a prospect of more before long, which I fear will stand, if not prevent, much more brick and adobe laying this fall, but I presume the erection of frame buildings will still be prosecuted more or less through the winter.

The previous storm, which was pretty severe, injured a good number of the peaches in this section, and the prospect is that the potato crop will suffer, for the ground will mellow, before they are unearthed, by reason of frost, which was severe last night.

The U.P. mail train from the east was about two hours late last night, the cause I did not learn, but the season is at hand when we may expect to hear of frequent delays and probably blockades. "A stitch in time" by the railroad officials at this time of the year may enable them to keep the cutaways and the track clear the coming winter on the eastern line.

Business here is dull. The Utah House is closed, furniture, &c., has been sold on foreclosure of mortgage, at auction, and the late proprietors are going to seek their fortunes in climes to them more congenial. The firm of Perry & Pritchett has suspended, liabilities pretty heavy for them. No particular sickness here, no sudden deaths, and nothing out of which I could make a special correspondence.

Yours, L.P.

After Phelps' Accomplice—Big Will Case.

Hardin, an Irishman, formerly an importer of Irish linens, and recently an operator in stocks, died intestate, March 6th, 1872, leaving a wife but no children, and an estate worth a million and a half in stocks, bonds and other personal property. After the death of A. F.
